

TUNNEL 8,000 FEET LONG TO REACH WATER LEVEL

Harriman Roads Making Final Arrangements to Meet Hill Competition Between Portland and Sound Points by Paralleling N. P.—Everything Ready for Peninsula Construction

Beginning of construction of the peninsula tunnel of the Harriman roads will await final orders from headquarters. The survey is completed and everything is in readiness to begin work. The attention of the management for the last few weeks has been concentrated on final arrangements for the Tacoma tunnel, where the road will drive a tube through the hills more than 8,000 feet to reach its downtown terminals on a water grade.

It is believed the minds of the construction forces, under direction of J. D. Farrell and Chief Engineer Hawkins, will now be directed upon the Portland end of the problem and that action will soon be started. It is not yet determined whether the Oregon end of the line will be constructed by Mr. Hawkins, or left in the jurisdiction of G. W. Hoeck, chief engineer of the Harriman lines in the northwest, who is rushed with a large amount of work now under his charge. The peninsula tunnel will be about a mile in length and will be comparatively easy construction.

IN ITS NEW HOME ON TUESDAY MORNING

Auspicious Opening of the J. M. Acheson Co. in the Imposing Steel and Terra Cotta Structure at Fifth and Alder Streets.

Tuesday morning the doors of the new store of the J. M. Acheson company will swing open to the public. From the day this steel and terra cotta brick structure of six stories began to rise the expectant public has cast a longing glance at the corner, knowing full well that such a fine structure would be the home of a handsome and important mercantile establishment.

The supposition has come true, and expectations will doubtless be surpassed in every particular. All the furnishings and fixtures speak for exquisite taste in designing and a most liberal expenditure of money.

Usual designs of fixtures only made of expensive materials have been improved upon by the head and founder of the concern—J. M. Acheson. In several instances patents have been secured upon the innovations. This is notably true of the fitting stands and the skirt and coat hangers. The application of both will have to be seen to be fully appreciated.

The mirrored doors of the octagon cabinets are so arranged that they may be opened and readily afford triplicate mirrors. In fact, there is a profusion of mirrors throughout the establishment that reflect and re-reflect the luxurious fittings, draperies, carpets and under the blaze of electric lights one becomes entranced with the harmonious beauty of the establishment. The brilliancy of the lighting effect is very greatly enhanced by the designs of the lighting fixtures, which were also planned by Mr. Acheson. A wide sweeping stairway leads to the second floor which is richly carpeted with the finest velvet covering. On this floor were noted originally designed quarter-sawn oak cabinets for suits and skirts that economize both room and time.

Everything has been provided by Mr. Acheson that will expedite the handling of trade—pneumatic cash carriers, fitting stands that may be in a moment transformed into settees and with another slight adjustment turned into a beautiful little table on which to spread out a garment which a clerk may be desirous of showing and, furthermore, there are plenty of trying-on or fitting rooms, so that any lady may have the individual attention she desires.

On this floor there is arranged a nice little waiting apartment for lady shoppers who may have a friend to meet or a letter to write. Nothing apparently has been omitted that will enhance the beauty of the store or provide comfort for patrons of the establishment.

This store began business about seven years ago with two of its present departments in a small building on its present site. In the new store there will be well defined departments for ladies' suits, cloaks, gloves, handkerchiefs, skirts, furs, corsets, underwear, hosiery, millinery, waists, besides the manufacturing departments for ladies' garments, and the men's tailoring department in the annex now being erected to the south of the main building. Outside of the ladies' suit department no part of the big establishment makes such a good showing as the millinery, which occupies the entire north end of the lower floor.

The stock throughout will appeal to the critical ladies of Portland as comprehensive in both quality and quantity and a most welcome addition to the best shopping resources of the city. This store will be welcomed among the first-class mercantile houses of the city. Its building is certainly one of the most imposing and its exterior appearance does not in any manner impress the visitor as being too fine a home for the Acheson company.

ENTERTAINMENT OF HEBREW YOUNG FOLKS

Intellectual Section of Association Work Closes Next Tuesday Evening.

Among the clubs organized this year for intellectual and social purposes was the Young Folks' Hebrew association. This club was organized by Rev. Mr. Wilner, D. D., who has since gone to Texas. The intellectual section consists of lectures by able speakers, among whom are D. Sells Cohen, Dr. Jonah B. Wise and Dr. Wilner.

Owing to the fact that so many of the members are preparing to leave the city for the summer, it has been decided that the intellectual section close Tuesday, April 30, with a program to be given at the Ahava Shalom synagogue, corner of Park and Clay streets. Mrs. M. M. Blumauer will be the speaker of the evening, and a vocal solo will be rendered by Miss Harwar, accompanied on the violin by Miss Abrahamson, also a violin solo by Miss Abrahamson.

TO PAVE SECOND WITH BITULITHIC

High Class Pavement Soon to Be Laid on a Street Long Neglected.

The Warren Construction company has a crew of workmen tearing up the old cobble-stone pavement on Second street, from Morrison to Columbia, preparatory to laying a bitulithic pavement on that thoroughfare. For the past several years Second street south of Morrison has been one of the worst streets in Portland. Two or three different kinds of pavement have been laid there, all of which have been neglected and allowed to go to pieces.

It is planned to continue the hard pavement south along Second street to Grant, unless the city engineer's plans are blocked by the action of abutting property owners.

FINE WEATHER BRINGS OUT LOVERS OF AQUATIC SPORTS

It is expected that a great number of launches will be out today, because owners of pleasure craft have been busy since the weather cleared up getting ready for the opening of the season. Last Sunday was a fine day for boating, but only a small percentage of the launch owners had prepared, and so they were compelled to remain ashore. Rowboating will also be a popular sport today and the boathouses have prepared to handle as much business as possible. Old boats have been overhauled and many new ones added. Secluded to the fleet in the harbor. John Larson's new catamaran will make a trial trip in the harbor and her owner expects her to perform better than had been built on the old established lines. She has two hulls and gains momentum from a single propeller.

CITY'S EFFECT ON GOOD WIFE

Mrs. Duval's Husband Says She Changed After Coming to Portland.

FROM MATRON SHE BECAME A GAY YOUNG THING

In Peaceful Yamhill She Would Not Look Twice at a Handsome Man, but Here She Proceeded to Have a Good Time.

The story of a faithful and dutiful farm wife whose head was turned by the gay life of the city is told in a divorce suit filed in the circuit court today by Charles E. Duval, formerly a Yamhill rancher.

more leisure than Duval was visiting at his house while he was away, and that there were times when the woman of the house did not return home until the morning alarm had sounded. At the present writing, says the husband, Mrs. Duval is vain, frivolous, self-willed and dominated by an abnormal desire for the admiration and attention of other men.

Charles Adams is one of the men Mrs. Duval is accused of being over friendly with while the Duvals were residing at 12 East Fourteenth street. Ed King is the name of a frequent visitor when the Duvals were living at 708 Minnesota avenue. Finally, a short time ago, the wife decamped with all the furniture, which the husband desires the court to help him get back again.

The couple were married in Sheridan, Yamhill county, in 1903. They have two children. Bernhard R. Woldt, a cigar dealer of St. Johns and the owner of farms and real estate in various parts of the state, is the defendant in a divorce suit filed yesterday by Bertha Woldt. Cruelty forms the basis for the complaint, and the plaintiff asks for $100 per month alimony. The couple were married in Racine, Wisconsin, in 1885. They have two children, one 19 and the other 20 years of age.
