

JURORS SEVERE MORE

Inquisitorial Body Summoned by Federal Officials, Finds Only Two Blameless.

TWO WEEKS MORE TO BE SPENT IN INVESTIGATION

Cases of the Postoffice Robbers Will Come Up the First of This Week and Will Probably Occupy Much Time.

After a week of investigation under the careful tuition of Assistant United States Attorney James Cole, the federal grand jury is said to have returned 17 indictments against alleged violators of the United States laws.

The grand jury has had a busy week together and Mr. Cole is satisfied with the progress made so far. Only two true bills have been returned by the jurors, and these were in cases which the government was but slightly interested in.

Mr. Cole has always had his cases in such shape that there was no hitch in the proceedings once they came before the jury, and it was but a grinding of the grist to secure indictments.

Jurors Are Warning Up.

Tomorrow will see renewed activity in the work of the jurors and it is expected that more rapid work will be done as the jurors become better acquainted with their work.

Two Weeks More.

In addition to the postoffice cases, minor criminals will be investigated by the jurors, including several unimportant postoffice cases in which arrests have not been made.

MAY SUTTON HOLDS HER OWN IN TENNIS

(Special News by Longest Leased Wire.) New York, April 27.—At St. Nicholas park this noon Miss May G. Sutton, the risk tennis marvel from the Pacific coast, proved conclusively the fallacy of the often repeated contention that beyond the physical capabilities of woman to meet the sterner sex on equal terms at the net.

SPOKANE MAY PURIFY WITH HENEY'S HELP

Spokane, Wash., April 27.—A movement has been set afoot to bring Francis J. Heney here to uncover grafts alleged to exist. Many prominent business men have been discussing the matter lately and have come to the conclusion that such action would be a good thing.

COFFEE DELIRIUM

Child Lies Awake Nights and Talks to Himself.

To be active during the day and keep in good health requires sound sleep at night. This is especially true of children when mental and physical development is more rapid than later on.

An intelligent mother discovered that coffee was harmful, not only to herself and husband, but that it was doubly so to her boy. She writes: "For more than 25 years I have been a great coffee drinker; have often tried to give it up because it made me nervous, constipated, and I could not go to sleep for several hours after retiring."

"About six months ago I finally quit coffee and began to use Postum. Now we use it three times a day; I am entirely cured of constipation, can sleep all night, do not get those nervous spells. While under the coffee habit I was pale and sallow; now every one tells me I have such a healthy complexion. Postum has certainly won the victory in our house."

"There are two persons especially who have been greatly benefited by drinking Postum instead of ordinary coffee. One a gentleman who has been cured of dyspepsia; the other my own little boy, was cured of a most annoying affliction, without our even consulting a physician."

ROBBED OF LAST PENNY

Spring. A few days later he appeared in the city. He sought out Mrs. Hadden and for two weeks paid her every attention.

Always faultlessly attired, of gentle manner and speech, polite to the most critical degree and a lavish spender, he easily passed for the rich man settling up his father's estate.

Property belonging to the latter consisted of mining property of immense value in Cripple Creek, he said. After two weeks had rolled by he proposed marriage to Mrs. Hadden and was accepted, then his swindling operations took on a full pair of wings.

Gave Up Her Money.

Williams told Mrs. Hadden that after looking over the ground he had decided to incorporate the mining property at Cripple Creek and put in new machinery. To do this he needed a little money to use before he and the bride-to-be took their honeymoon trip to Chicago where, he promised her, the money would be returned. Accordingly she drew from the bank $2,500 and gave the sum to Williams.

The day after they were made man and wife, Williams took his bride to Chicago, paying for the tickets out of her money, which he had nestled safely in his pockets. Upon reaching Chicago he engaged rooms at the Lexington hotel. The day of their arrival Mrs. Hadden saw but little of her husband, who was busy attending to business matters, and she believed him. In the afternoon he told her that he had intended to sell a large amount of mining stock which he owned and pay back the money he had borrowed, but had decided to wait until the morrow.

Robbed of Last Dollar.

"I need a little more cash than I have now," he added, "to close up a deal I have on. Have you any ready money with you?"

"Only $100," his trusting wife replied, and she gave him her last cent.

From that day to this Mrs. Hadden has not seen Williams, fortunate for her and—after she had returned to Colorado Springs she received the following letter from Williams:

"My dear: People are laughing at you because you complained of me. Meet me in San Bernardino, California, and you will get back your loan. C."

Women Compare Notes.

Mrs. Hadden did not go. She had lost all trace of Williams from that time until she read the story of his dual life and arrest which was published exclusively in The Journal April 12. When a short time later there appeared an account of two Portland women who had been duped by a man supposed to be Williams and who married one of them in Vancouver, afterwards deserting her when he had secured $400 of his wife's money, Mrs. Hadden went to one of them and compared notes.

As a result of that conference the conclusion was reached that John Madison, who claimed his victims in Portland, was not the Charles Williams of Philadelphia, Idaho, from whom Taylor acquired the fact that Madison was another of the same type who operated in channels parallel to those used by Williams.

Williams Has a Note.

Both Williams and Madison represented that they had beautiful homes in Los Angeles, and both gave their ages as 33. Williams is a man about 5 feet 8 inches in height, with a mole on the left side of his face, brown eyes and brown hair, with the latter streaked with gray.

With the exception of the mark on the face, Williams' description tallies with that of Madison, the latter is said to have spoken with a marked German accent.

TRUST IN CONTROL

were altogether too many theatres devoted to night class attractions. While there was an enormous public to support a popular priced and vaudeville attraction, the higher class theatres necessarily catered to a minority. Therefore the new theatre will see to it that more popular-priced and vaudeville performances are placed upon the stages of the theatres controlled by them.

"The booking agencies will be in no wise affected by the corporation," the statement concludes, "but will remain intact and continue as heretofore under the control of Al Hyman, Klav & Erlanger. None of the existing contracts of either party to the agreement will be affected by the change."

Officers of Trust.

Besides the officers of the trust named above, officers have been elected as follows: J. J. Egan, secretary, secretary; Levy Mayer, Chicago, general counsel; William Klein, New York, attorney; Attorney-General Robert H. McCarter of New Jersey, the New Jersey attorney.

INACTION OF COUNCIL

but on the contrary, voted to maintain the same.

Council Is Denounced.

"Now, therefore, be it resolved, that we, the citizens of the city of Portland do hereby condemn and denounce the action of our present council in allowing said railway to operate its cars and maintain its tracks on the most public thoroughfare in the city of Portland."

"We further denounce all members of the council, who have been influenced to maintain this nuisance, as dangerous representatives of our municipality, and appeal to all voters and citizens at the coming election to vote against a re-nomination and reelection of all those who are now members of the city council, and to vote for the abatement of said nuisance."

In Minnesota Williams J. Bryan was a poor second to John A. Johnson in a ballot taken the other day to determine the choice of Democrats in the legislature for president. Twenty-nine out of 34 preferred Governor Johnson to the Nebraska leader.

EXPECTING THE STORK

This bust of the young queen of Spain, who is just now expecting the arrival of a certain bird, was executed by Mr. Conrad Dressler and presented to King Alfonso by the Dukes of Rutland and 40 English ladies. The bust, which is of Carrara marble, was executed at Cowes and is to be placed in the royal gallery of the palace at Madrid.

THAW IS SURPRISED BY VISIT FROM HIS MOTHER

Evelyn Is at Cell Door Making Daily Visit When Thaw's Mother Arrives.

(Special News by Longest Leased Wire.) New York, April 27.—"Mother, you certainly have treated me to a surprise," exclaimed Harry K. Thaw today, when Mrs. William Thaw and his sister, the Countess of Yarmouth, paid him a visit in the Tombs. The slayer of Stanford White did not quite expect to see his mother, because he had heard that she would not leave Pittsburg for two weeks.

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw was talking to her husband when his mother walked down the corridor in the Tombs. She also was surprised to see the elder Mrs. Thaw. After leaving the prison Mrs. William Thaw declined to say a word for publication. She was asked whether it was true that she was unable to raise the bail money for which she was reported to have gone to Pittsburg, but would not say a word.

It was reported today from one source that the bail money could have been raised easily, but by doing so the securities held by the Thaw estate would be greatly depreciated.

STOREY MAY WED

bleedness until love comes to her. Is it not grotesque? If I not heart? Can love be hidden to go this way and that; to be told to stay or to go? What nonsense. It is ridiculous. Can a dry-as-dust referee of the abstract court of New York bid me expect love again? And if I do love, what then? The foolish court in New York says it is illegal.

Storey Defies the Court.

"Well, to the foolish New York court I snap my fingers. If I wish to marry again I will marry. I do not recognize the court. For me it has no existence. Nor will it have to the woman who has been my wife."

"My reasons? They are these: "For the sake of innocent women whom Madame Eames, in the frenzy of her imagination and artistic temperament might have blighted before the world, I kept silent. Because of my alliance she secured her divorce. If I could not act as an honorable gentleman appear before the court and answer Madame Eames' charges, I cannot in justice to myself accept its decision so far as my future is concerned.

The point is perfectly clear to me. I will marry if I choose, marry whom I choose and marry when or where I choose—the high court of New York and Madame Eames to the contrary notwithstanding. And that is all there is to it."

Madame Eames is a lovely lady. I loved her dearly. I never wronged her. She chose, however, to listen to the malicious gossip of society snakes, and to their lies rather than to hear me, and to believe that I was telling her the truth.

May Wed an Heiress.

"I could not convince her. I could not save by this means my innocent women. Therefore I was silent, but will not be crucified by any court. My own conscience applauded. It does not hurt me. Therefore all is well."

Mr. Storey would not say whether it was true that he intended to marry a certain beautiful Philadelphia debutante who went abroad this spring and who, it is said, he intends to marry in France.

The young woman in question, a member of one of the richest and best of Philadelphia families had her portrait painted last winter, a year ago, and, it is said, in the one whose name was mentioned by gossip to Mrs. Eames at the Storey masked ball, resulted in the divorce. She went away with her mother on this spring for a stay of two years.

Leaves for the East.

This afternoon I. E. Solomon, one of the proprietors of the Wonder Millinery Co., will leave with his wife on a four months' trip to New York and other eastern cities. Late spring novelties in the millinery line will be shipped to Portland at once, after which Mr. and Mrs. Solomon will visit the Jamestown exposition and other points of interest on the Atlantic coast.

Awaiting President.

(Special News by Longest Leased Wire.) Norfolk, Va., April 27.—The wireless operator at the Norfolk station at 10:20 o'clock tonight says he was in communication with the president's yacht Mayflower at Newport News, which was awaiting the arrival of the Sylph with President Roosevelt, his wife and party on board.

WHOLESALE EXODUS OF EXPOSITION VISITORS

Maryland Day at Exposition Rendered Uncomfortable by Cold Wind and Muddy Streets—Concessionaires Fleece Few Visitors.

(Publishers' Press by Special Leased Wire.) Norfolk, Va., April 27.—President and Mrs. Roosevelt and their party returned from their sight-seeing trip up the James river this evening on board the yacht Sylph. They were transferred to the Mayflower in Hampton Roads and started on the return trip to Washington. In spite of the disagreeable weather the president and his fellow voyagers enjoyed themselves to the utmost on the trip.

Stops were made at Westover, Shirley and Brandon, the estates of the Byrd, Carter and Harrison families, respectively, and at Jamestown, where the ruined wall of the old church is the only relic remaining of the first English settlement.

The visit of the president and family to the old colonial homestead of Westover, Shirley and Brandon was entirely informal. At each stopping place they remained long enough to inspect the main places and meet the representatives of the old families and their retainers.

Pilot Skinner, one of the most experienced of river men in the section, guided the party up the James river and back, and remained with them until all were safely transferred to the Mayflower.

This was Maryland day at the Jamestown exposition, and the mud left by last night's fierce downpour of rain did not add to the enjoyment of the exercises. A bleak penetrating wind blew in from the bay all day long, and made overcoats and wraps necessary for comfort.

Thousands of visitors who came to attend the opening of the fair are now getting out of town as fast as they can, and the departures are greatly outnumbering the arrivals. The exposition management is publishing profuse apologies for the wretched transportation service, and is promising that everything will be in running order within the exposition and out by the middle of May.

The concessionaires are complaining bitterly that they are not reaping the harvest they were led to expect for which they paid large rentals. The few visitors who are daring enough to brave a trip out to the grounds with the early certain prospect of waiting four or five hours in the return trip are being held properly by the booth renters.

They feel that they must get even in some way, and as they can not recover their money from the management they naturally turn to the innocent visiting "come-on."

RICH DOWER

In fact, Henry Jackson, full-blooded Indian, who a few years ago was a small butcher, at present owner of hundreds of the finest cattle found on the Klamath reservation, will give more than 50 times his son's liberty for the sake of a white son-in-law.

It is said that the old man is ambitious. That he wants a son who will not try to keep the distillery working night and day to aid him in depleting the purse he has raised by herding and breeding cattle. To sum it all, Henry Jackson wants a man who will not stoop so low as to steal a cow, but one who is able to manage a herd of many thousands. Since the offer has been made, it is said that many young white men have volunteered to offer themselves upon the altar of sacrifice, but none has been called.

Looking for a Good Man.

Although Henry Jackson wants a white man it is said that he wants a good one. One that will please his copper-colored mother-in-law, who will tend the cattle when Henry has gone to the happy hunting ground.

Henry has expressed his doubts as to whether he will be able to secure such a man. Meanwhile, his son Ralph is wasting away in the county jail and the daughter is unmarried. Borrow sits upon the brow of the elder Jackson, but it is said that he sees the light of a new day shining in the early future when his son will be free and his daughter happily married to a man of her choice who will be of the white-skinned race.

TWO TOWNS WIPED OUT

car system has been blocked all day, cars being pushed through intermittently. Tonight the temperature dropped 10 degrees and a snowdrifts are piling high, blocking many of the lines of the street car service.

Reports from the west show the storm is widespread and that the snowfall has been most disastrous to the farmers, for they will be delayed in their seeding several days. Reports from the railroads show that not only are the overland trains in North Dakota snowbound and stalled, but many wrecks have been reported, one on the Great Northern west of Minot, in which 11 persons were seriously injured. The heavy snow has put the wires out of order and ustalla cannot be obtained.

Sioux City, Ia., April 27.—Nearly the entire state of South Dakota is being swept by the worst blizzard of the year tonight. The heaviest fall of snow for the winter is reported from many places. A telegram from Gregory, South Dakota, on the Rosebud reservation, states that there is great hardship among the settlers because of a shortage of fuel. Among the victims are hundreds of women, many city-bred, who have either spent the winter on their claims or have gone there during the balmy weeks preceding this to get spring work started. Scores are believed to be entirely out of fuel, with scant supplies of food, owing to the cold weather of the past week. The snow is from three to 12 inches deep and the mercury is considerably below freezing. Aberdeen, Chamberlain, Bonesteel, Sioux Falls, Huron, Mitchell and other points report genuine blizzard conditions.

The fruit in the eastern part of the state has already been nipped and the storm is expected to finish it. The mercury dropped in Sioux City from 65 at noon to 25 at 6 o'clock this evening.
