

MUST NOT TURN VOTERS' MINDS

Manning Warns the Judges and Clerks of the City Election.

In response to a large number of inquiries made to him, District Attorney John Manning has given his opinion regarding the duties and limitations of the judges and clerks of election on election day. Mr. Manning holds that it is unlawful for any judge, clerk or other election official to suggest to any voter how to mark his ballot or to solicit him in any way to vote for any certain or particular candidate or measure.

The law prohibits any person soliciting voters within 50 feet of the polls and the district attorney maintains it to be his opinion that this section of the law in itself would prevent any judge or clerk from influencing the voters in any way.

MANY PIONEERS AT CHAMPOEG CELEBRATION

Establishment of First American Government West of the Rockies Observed.

Hundreds of pioneers with their wives and daughters attended the reunion and celebration held at Champeog yesterday to commemorate the establishment of the first American civil government on the Pacific coast. It is estimated that fully 2,000 people were present and it was the largest and most successful celebration since 1890, when the anniversary of the memorable event was first observed.

F. X. Matthieu, the sole survivor of the meeting held 64 years ago, was conspicuous, and, although in his ninetieth year, was greatly enjoying the commemoration and trying to shake hands with every one of the 2,000 present. Mr. Matthieu lives at Butteville, a small town near Champeog.

Beautiful weather prevailed throughout the day and the exercises were held in the grove near the monument. The address of the day was delivered by Robert A. Miller and short talks were also made by Congressman W. C. Hawley and Mrs. Abigail Scott Duniway. There was a large attendance from Portland, from where the trip was made by water. Many easterners attended and were lavish in their praises of the beauties of the Willamette valley.

Candidate for Councilman Fifth Ward For Re-Election

J. F. BOOTHE

HELEN HAWTHORNE

The Decline of Reticence.
A wise woman of the older school regrets the decline among young girls nowadays of the art of reticence. She says that the modern game of flirtation is a harmless sort of amusement enough, neither the nice girl nor the right sort of man taking it too seriously, but there is lacking among girls the little reticence, the diffidence, which gives zest to the game.

Certainly the nice young man does not imagine that a girl, hopelessly enamored because she accepts gifts of candies and flowers, nor does she pine all her chances of future happiness upon his few invitations; nor does she imagine that the course of his life is to be turned by the mere fact of his acquaintance with her. It is all a part of the pleasant game of being young and happy, and as such is not to be considered too seriously.

However, this note of warning is sounded and observing men and women have frequently said the same thing. Girls of today are frequently too ready; they are too willing to make advances, to plan outings, to suggest the tete-a-tete which are the part of the man, are his share of the game; in fact, they are not in the girl's province at all.

The girl who is too ready to make appointments, who suggests, or even hints at canoe ride or the drive home from the picnic lessens the value which the man would attach to these favors. The zest of the game, from the masculine side, is in action, in the planning, the maneuvering, in the chase in fact. Can one imagine a hunter following with zeal a bird which he could see morning see walking across his lawn? None of us want the thing which is easy to get. It is too cheap.

The thing which makes a girl attractive is a little hesitancy, diffidence, the pretty feminine art of aloofness which keeps her modesty in the foreground and interested her, in fact he has succeeded in doing so at all. It belongs to the girl's share of the flirtation game as eagerness in the pursuit belongs to the man.

A girl sometimes succeeds in making herself cordially despised by the very man whom she would be glad to attract by calling him up at inconvenient times over the telephone and suggesting pleasant and harmless little diversions. It is in the worst possible taste and shows a deplorable lack of good sense. Often a man is by this means made ridiculous in the eyes of some man whom he is trying to impress with his business sagacity. Gossip about a tennis game or invitations to picnics and boat rides do not commingle with deals which may be of great importance. Use the post, girls, for such conversations, and let your notes be brief, and be sure that they include the name of your chaperone. Silly girls' notes may be the cause of much embarrassment at some future time.

Be warned, girls; don't let the young man who is interesting to you know it. Let him feel a little bit uncertain. Don't do the suggesting, and don't fall into his plans too readily on all occasions. Remember it was the high hung fruit which caused the fox anxiety.

Sheets in Texas.
They have various kinds of trouble down in Texas, but there is one kind which they have determined to put out of business. It is written upon the state books that hereafter sheets shall be nine feet long.

In other parts of the world mankind will still wrestle with the sheet problem. He will vainly pursue the kind which imagines it is a neck muffer and which he awakens to find slowly strangling him, or which in a moment of mock humility crawls down to the foot of the bed and as softly as a loving mother wraps up his little feet from the cold night air. But down in Texas mankind will find emancipation.

According to reliable advices, the sheet situation has been rapidly going from bad to worse down there. With every point gained by the cotton market during recent years there was a sympathetic shrinkage in the length of bed coverings until finally it was necessary for the traveling public to curl up like kittens in order to conform to their scanty proportions.

Nine feet of sheet will be sufficient to envelop even the longest specimen of the genus homo, and ordinary folks can fold one end neatly over the harassing blanket while knowing that the other end is safely anchored. A mighty good idea.

MISS TUTTLE IN SOLOS AT HEILIG

Mr. Coursen Presents Vocalist Who Has Been Studying Under German Masters.

A large audience gathered yesterday afternoon at the Heilig to hear Miss Ada Tuttle, who was presented to the musical public of Portland by Edgar E. Coursen. Miss Tuttle has spent six years in musical studies at Leipzig. She proved herself a thorough master of technique in the Liszt concerto in which she was accompanied by the Portland Symphony orchestra, and in her solos she demonstrated her artistic temperament and the purity and liquid tone quality which she uses. Her able handling of the Chopin music greatly delighted her audience.

Mrs. Walter Reed sang with her usual fine power and was enthusiastically greeted and recalled. Beautiful floral offerings testified to the warm regard in which she is held. Miss Tuttle was also presented with numerous and beautiful arm bouquets. Two little lads, Masters Wayne and Earl Coe, played a duet for piano and violin in a creditable manner.

The Portland Symphony Orchestra again demonstrated its ability as an organization and testified to Mr. Coursen's ability as a leader. The closing numbers which they rendered were delightful.
