ART DISPLAY IS WONDERFUL EXHIBIT

means of keeping in touch with the thought of those interested in the development of art must recognize the large opportunity which this display brings. And that surely is worth while.

Had an Idea of Her Own

THE arts and crafts exhibit now in place at the Art museum is remarkable in many ways. For one thing, Portland people are by this means enabled to see and to study at their leisure much of the finest work which the Boston society of arts and crafts was able to cellect from its members, and that means semething.

In the next place it gives an opportunity of admiring and forming acquaintance with the choice treasures from many Portland homes, rare articles which have been gathered in all parts of the world, and that is not to be overlooked.

For another thing it is broadly educative and we who live remote from the art centers of the world and have few means of keeping in touch with the thought of those interested in the development of art must recognize the large.

Developed Differe Process in the crafts among individual workers in the crafts and to do away with the merely mechanical and mercenary motive in all branches of work. Indeed, a woman who ought to knew better, while looking at these fine examples of individual work said: "It's quite the intest thing to have this kind of work." Shades of William Morris! The latest thing!

One of the most interesting displays to the discriminating visitor is the hammered brans and silver.

The work of J. Nelson Wisner of Oreits individuality and the fine thought in the design. Mr. Wisner exhibits a bowl of copper done by himself and another attention is the silver bowl loaned by Mrs. David Honeyman.

Portland Differs From Boston,

Portland Differs From Boston.

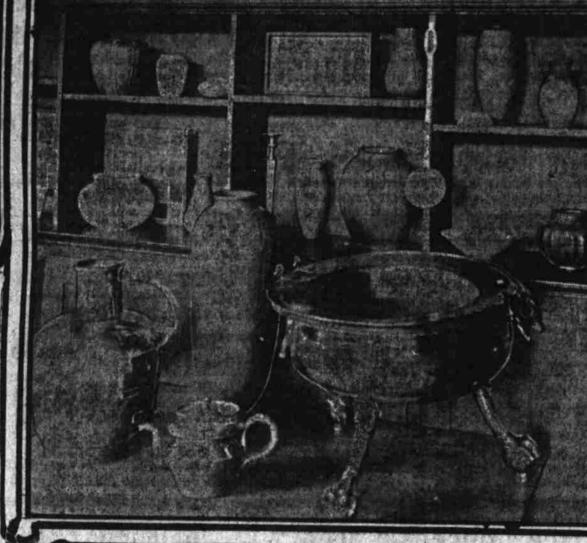

Oregonians should be particularly interested in this when they remember that Mr. Winner does these beautiful things simply because he wants to, the aris and crafts movement among these who have but a slight acquaint-ance with its aims. There is more or less prevalent a notion that the renewed interest in handwork is an attempt to revive processes and aris which have been superseded, to turn the clock of the world backward and to insist upon doing by hand the things which should properly be done by machinery. This is far from the spirit and the intention of the supporters of the arts and crafts movement. They feel that what can be as well or better done by machine should be so done; but that such things should be colone; but that such things should be and free from attempted decoration.

A machine is incapable of design or of art feeling and decoration, it is felt, as correctly used only when the elaboration is in keeping with the purpose for which the article is to be used and when it is the result of individual tasts and discrimination.

Much attention has been attracted by the fine silverware and enameled work and the jewelry done by Miss Mildred Watkins and Miss Jane Carson of Cleveland, who work together. Since the announcement has been made that Miss Watkins has been engaged to conduct a summer school in metal work and jewelry under the auspices of the Art association there has been great rejoicing among many who hope to see a better knowledge of the arts and crafts disseminated among us. Miss Knowlton, a sister of Mrs. Fred Strong of Portland, also shows some of her handlwork in this line.

out on the great Nes Perce prairie. The read as now practically completed four SHORTAGE IN ACREAGE miles or more from this city.

Out on the great open prairie between Cettonwood and Grangeville three large sange are at work, and contractors are employing every man that can be secured at big wages to push the grade work to completion. The grading gang will have the roadbed completed to Grangeville and ready for steel by July 4. The steel gang will then take charge and will, if possible, complete the extension in time to get the big Nes Perce wheat crop off this fall. Cottonwood is now to be the hospital headquarters, and already the company is removing the hospital from this city to that point. The farmers all along the line are jubilant over the new road and are putting a larger acreage in crops than ever before, as it is now certain the road will be built to move this season's crop.
