

BOURNE NOW MEMBER OF KITCHEN CABINET

Oregon Senator Becomes Chief Adviser to Roosevelt in All Northwest Affairs.

SEDULOUSLY CULTIVATES CZAR OF WHITE HOUSE

Interesting Course Pursued by Senator Since His Election Became a Certainty—Has Achieved National Prominence in a Short Time.

(Washington Bureau of The Journal.) Washington, May 11.—There is no doubt that President Roosevelt has taken to his bosom in a political relationship...

This is notwithstanding the lex non scripta of the senate—that new senators shall remain in the background and not attempt to take an active part in national affairs here at the national capital until they have served at least the major part of their first term.

Senator Bourne, disregarding precedents, ignoring unwritten laws, has stepped forward and claimed a share in the influence which attaches to an incumbent of a seat in the nation's highest law-making body.

Bourne's Long Campaign. Senator Bourne came to Washington last December, took apartments at the Shoreham hotel, employed a stenographer and secretary, and began to get acquainted.

When Oregonians came to Washington and wanted to call at the White House, Senator Bourne escorted them thither. Letters began to come to the senator-to-be from Oregon constituents, and the incoming member promptly attended to these matters around among the departments.

Senator Bourne did not cultivate only one class of senators; he gained the acquaintance of both administration and anti-administration members.

So he cultivated other senators and cabinet members, and bureau chiefs, and studied just as hard here in the school at Harvard, perhaps harder.

But all the time he kept his weather eye on the large mansion next to the treasury building, where Theodore Roosevelt lives.

Understanding conditions in the Pacific northwest, Senator Bourne began to be one of the president's advisers. Always, the new senator kept in mind the president's political interests.

He began to give out personal statements that Mr. Roosevelt would succeed himself. He told many that was his opinion.

A few small matters of Oregon patronage came up. Senator Fulton was not enjoying the warmest entente cordiale at the White House.

He had established again a footing with the president, and was often a caller, after being for a time somewhat at odds with Mr. Roosevelt.

Clash With Moody. The appointment of register and receiver at The Dalles came before the president. Ex-Congressman Malcolm A. Moody visited Washington quietly and tried to induce the naming of those of his choice.

For years, Mr. Moody has been influential with Mr. Roosevelt. Senator Bourne determined to stake his all on forcing the turning down of Mr. Moody at the White House.

He presented an intimation one day that perhaps Mr. Moody might dilute those appointments at The Dalles, Moody's home town.

He joined with Senator Fulton in fighting Moody, and then, when Moody's influence had been spoiled, engineered a plan to have prominent Republicans meet in Portland and debate The Dalles appointments.

The outcome was the naming of Moore and Arneson, both agreeable to Bourne. He had won his first campaign.

Visits to White House. Still these White House visits continued. Congress adjourned, but Senator Bourne did not adjourn. He remained in session, working like a beaver, and every day coming closer and closer to Roosevelt and strengthening his hold on the president's affections.

It is claimed that he even became an ardent pedestrian, going on long walks with the president, although Bourne never before had habitually enjoyed the pleasures of rambles along country paths and in wooded glens.

But in view of the president's penchant, the new senator, somewhat against his leaguer, started towards club life, and added pedestrianism to his list of official activities.

The senator is strictly temperate. He never partakes of strong drink. He is a man of being, and he built up a system of admirable efficiency.

The senator does not rush into print. Few members of the upper house are so reticent to interview. He speaks when he is ready to speak; before that, newspaper correspondents must wait.

Keeps Silence Well. The sum total of Bourne newspaper utterances has been his statement saying that Mr. Roosevelt must be renominated, and the one telegraphed to Portland, The Journal, averring that he was not mixing in the majority fight, incidentally giving a homely on the proper sort of men for political appointment.

Eastern newspaper men caught on to the situation and half a hundred letters have gone to as many papers from here saying that a new star has arisen in the political firmament, that it is to be seen through a well-focused telescope standing directly over the Pacific northwest, and that henceforth Roosevelt will mark down that star in his book on political astronomy and instruct his associate professors to observe it regularly and account it as fixed firmly in the heavens.

The new senator from Oregon has not been loafing during the past four months. If a college training is to teach a man how to learn, certain Senator Bourne has applied his college training here, and is already fit for the reception of a sheekskin from the president of the national political college.

THERE IS NO JOY IN IDAHO TODAY—SALOONS ARE CLOSED

Dr. G. L. Tufts, superintendent of the Pacific district of the International Reform bureau, is jubilant over the victory won by the bureau in Idaho at the last session of the legislature in securing the most stringent Sunday closing law in any state west of the Mississippi river.

Dr. Tufts says that the new law goes into effect today. The new act prohibits the opening of saloons and places of business on Sunday except drugstores, livery stables and hotels. The measure provides a penalty from $50 to $250 with imprisonment not to exceed 90 days for the first offense.

On the second violation, the culprit can be fined and sentenced and his license taken away from him. All public officials are required to enforce the law or be guilty of a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of from $50 to $100 and removal from office.

Dr. Tufts will speak this morning at the Central Baptist church and this evening at the Second German Baptist church. At both meetings his address will be on the local option question.

STARTED FOR THEATRE, BUT CHANGED MIND AND GOT MARRIED

A marriage license was issued this afternoon to William F. Cassidy and Elizabeth Margaret Mook, and the issuance of the license caused considerable speculation at the young woman's home.

She left home at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, saying that she was going to the show. She failed to return, however, and had not returned at a late hour last night.

Efforts on the part of her mother and friends failed, and it is believed the young couple were married and left the city immediately after the ceremony.

Young Cassidy is 23 years of age, and has lived at 500 East Oak street. The young woman lived with her mother at 321 1/2 Morrison street.

MAYOR LANE INDORSED BY MUNICIPAL ASSOCIATION

The indorsement of the Municipal Association was given to Mayor Lane at a meeting held last night. It was decided that a statement be prepared by the association setting out the reasons for choosing Mayor Lane for the indorsement of the association, and this will be prepared and given to the public at the next meeting, which will be held tomorrow.

No definite action was taken regarding the indorsement of any other candidates, nor the choice of any independent candidates. The association is considering the election and indorsement of independent candidates for councilmen at large, and this question will in all probability be decided at the meeting tomorrow.

CARS SIX HOURS ON TWO STREETS

MAYOR CHIDES POLICE FOR LACK OF ZEAL

All Throwers of Missiles Arrested on Charge of Using Deadly Weapons—Woman With a Red Flag Makes Defiant Statement.

(Best News by Longest Leased Wire.) San Francisco, May 11.—Today between the hours of 10 a. m. and 5 p. m. the United Railways ran cars on Sutter street from Stanyan street to Market and on the Turk and Eddy street lines between Market and Develador streets.

The disturbances were hardly noticeable. Many passengers rode on Sutter street and quite a few ventured on the Turk and Eddy street cars, though for the most part the latter were little patronized.

Mayor Schmitts personally went to the most active points, particularly to Eddy and Fillmore streets, and ordered the police to be more active in keeping the crowd back and in protecting the running of the cars. He demanded of Chief Dignan that his men show more interest in the welfare of the United Railways.

There were 13 arrests during the day. One of these was a printer who incited the crowd to rescue prisoners from the police. Some were of men who refused to move on when ordered to do so. Other persons were of those who threw missiles. When anyone was struck with a stone or brick the thrower was charged with assault with a deadly weapon.

The only gathering that at all approached a mob was at Eddy and Fillmore streets. There, after the noon hour, a crowd collected and some bricks were thrown. One strikebreaker on the latter street was hit on the head, but an effort was quickly supplied upon it.

On Sutter street, between Kearny and Montgomery, some bricks and concrete were thrown at the first cars from several tall buildings that were under way, but no one was injured. Some arrests were made here.

At Eddy and Market streets there was a gathering of men who made insulting remarks to those who rode on the cars, the burden being "You are worse than the scabs."

Women Take a Hand. At Jefferson square there was something of a demonstration from the female refugees encamped there. Mrs. Lichtenstein ran out and waved a red flag. Other women gathered and cheered her. Finally she planted herself directly on the tracks and stood grasping her flag, defying the motor-car to run her down. The car had to come to a stop, while the assembled women taunted those riding upon it. The police removed Mrs. Lichtenstein and the flag but did not arrest her.

Between Webster and Fillmore streets a bullet struck a man over a torpede cap, but the explosion was not heavy enough to cause any excitement or panic. This incident gave rise to a sensational rumor that a car had been dynamited by strike sympathizers.

GOVERNOR'S ULTIMATUM If Mayor Schmitts Does Not Keep Order He Will Do It Himself. (Special Dispatch to The Journal.) San Francisco, May 11.—Governor Gillett tonight served official notice on Mayor Schmitts that in the event of the latter's failure to protect the United Railways in their attempt to operate cars in spite of the strike which is now in progress, he will take personal charge of the situation and furnish sufficient state troops to restore order.

"I will not cooperate with you," said the governor in his ultimatum, "but I will assume personal control, and promise that there will be no disorders."

BABY GUILTY OF ASSAULT ON MAN

Three-Year-Old Child Sentenced to Jail for Assault and Battery.

Paris, (Journal Special Service.) May 11.—George Tolut, a child of 3 years has been sentenced by the criminal court to 10 days imprisonment for "assault and battery." The plaintiff, M. Winkel, is a full-grown man of 30 and it would puzzle a Philadelphia lawyer to guess how a child of 3 could have assaulted him.

The answer to the strange conundrum is this: The plaintiff alleges that he was assaulted by a man about his own age named Tolut, and he took out a summons against "George Tolut." But George Tolut happens to be aged 3, and the father, whom the plaintiff really intended to prosecute, is Albert Tolut. But this was all unknown to the court, and when no defendant appeared in response to the summons, George Tolut was sentenced by default to 10 days imprisonment for damages to M. Winkel.

The infantile defendant has lodged an appeal—not by himself, as he is under age, but by his father as legal guardian. But by the courts' knowledge of no case against any other Tolut, the 3-year-old baby must appear in person in the prisoner's dock at the hearing on appeal.

This will be quite an unprecedented occurrence, so far as is known here, but if the baby were not to come forward in person the appeal would fail and conviction be confirmed. There is no doubt that the court will solemnly denounce the charge against the infant, who will be set free, probably by that time.

MUST HAVE FORTUNE TO KEEP UP ROYAL FRONT

His Highness Wants Lady of Pleasant Manners, but Is Not Particular About Her Looks as Long as She Has Money.

(Journal Special Service.) London, May 11.—Much has been written about impetuous British noblemen who exchange their titles for the dollars of American heiresses. But the hard-up English aristocrat never openly avows his mercenary motive. Nor does the American heiress acknowledge that she marries his lordship to obtain a high social position. The pretense at least is maintained that cupid is at the

Here's a Wonderful Opportunity for Men of Limited Means to Make Big Money on an Investment of $4.00 Down and $4.00 Per Month

It is a man of exceedingly limited means who cannot raise $4 every month if that $4 will back up his error and help to make him rich. It is our business to tell him how he may do this thing. We are incorporated, and

Our Name is the North Coast Co-Operative Lumber Co.

And our capital stock is $1,000,000, represented by 1,000,000 shares of the value of $1 each, fully paid up and non-assessable, and every share is sold at its par value and not a penny less. We sell these shares in blocks of 100, but no more than 1,000 to any purchaser. The share is negotiable, and may therefore be employed as security for loans, but our purpose is to inform the public what we do with that

There is Absolute Safety in Our Business

There is not a possibility of loss, for the reason that THE MONEY-MAKER IS A VISIBLE THING. The trees are in the forest—ACTUALLY STANDING THERE—and there is a clamorous market for every one. In fact, the race for timber is almost akin to a race for life. And there is no speculation in our transactions. We do not have to "survive" that we will come out all right. We do not have to "hope" that we will strike something good. We invest no money except in that GOOD thing, and that is why investors in our shares KNOW WITHOUT QUESTION OR SHADOW OF DOUBT that their money will yield immense returns.

bottom of the business. There is no such pretense about the following advertisement translated from the "Vossische Zeitung." "A prince, highness, a royal chamberlain, 35 years of age, Catholic, in good health, without debts, finds himself in the necessity, being a younger son, of contracting a rich marriage in order to maintain an establishment suited to his rank. His highness desires to marry a lady of pleasant manners, not more than 25 years of age, and of loving and artistic temperament. She must possess not less than $1,250,000, of which $100,000 must be in ready money. The highest references will be required." The initials given are W. K. Concerning the identity of the prince there has been much speculation. And people are wondering whether any American heiress will rise to the bait. Chicago is in the field for the Republican national convention. It will have an exceedingly narrow margin. Lewis and Fitzhugh have already entered the field, and several other cities are expected to enter the race before the national convention meets in December to select the president. It is believed that the Republicans will hold the convention.
