

ENGINEER'S WIFE FORETOLD DOOM

She Had Arranged for Extra Man to Take His Run Night He Was Murdered.

BUT CLOW LAUGHED AND CALLED EVERYTHING OFF

Shot Because of Unexplained Movement His Nervous Captors Failed to Understand—Body Bullet-Riddled After Death.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Butte, Mont., May 13.—Justice of the Peace Less of Whitehall has resumed the official inquiry into the murder of Engineer Clow, who was shot by bandits on the North Coast Limited last Tuesday morning. William J. Crawford, a youth who traveled in company with the hold-up men from this city to the scene of the hold-up, has been taken to Whitehall.

Railroad men who have come in from Livingston relate a peculiar coincidence in connection with the tragic death of Engineer Clow. They say that on the day Clow was to leave home on what proved to be his last trip over the division, his wife had a strange presentiment of impending evil. She sought to throw off the impression but to no avail and after her husband had left home she telephoned the roundhouse and asked that an extra man be sent out in place of her husband.

Clow laughed at her fears. These arrangements were actually made in accordance with her wishes, but when Clow was informed of the circumstance he laughed at the fears of his wife and telephoned the man at the roundhouse that he would go out with the North Coast train as usual.

Later in the day, despite the pleadings of his wife, he went out on the limited, which he pulled to Butte. As he rounded the curve west of Livingston, he blew the whistle for stop on the track. At the sound of the whistle Mrs. Clow burst into tears. She says that never before had she been subject to such a strange fear as possessed her the day her husband left her and the news of his tragic death did not come as a surprise. She had expected something terrible to happen.

Officers are still engaged in the search for the bandits, but report no progress.

Killed for Over-Obedience.
One of the most lamentable features of the murder of Clow is that it was entirely needless, even from the point of view of the train robbers. An employe of the road who was on the train at the time of the attempted hold-up gives this version of the tragedy in the cab:

"There was no occasion for the murder of poor Clow. The fireman's story of the shooting is in the main correct, but it is a fact Clow was shot first after he had applied the air. There must have been something wrong with the brakes for the engine did not stop quickly, and Clow, who had climbed down from his seat when the robbers had chucked a gun in his face, went back to set it easier. He had offered no opposition to the work of the robbers and did not intend to; neither did Fireman Sullivan, but the going back of Clow after he had set the air once cost him his life. The robbers thought he was going after a weapon, perhaps, and with loud curses fired upon him.

Bullet-Riddled After Death.
The first bullet penetrated his body and was sufficient to cause death, but Clow, with his purpose still strong, kept on at the air cock, which he applied and brought the train to a standstill, the last act of his life.

"When he dropped back to the floor of the cab the robbers turned their attention to Sullivan, who was shot several times. Clow's body was filled with bullets after he was dead. Clow had been in the service of the company 18 years."

300 YEARS AGO ENGLISH LANDED

Anniversary of First Settlement Celebrated at Jamestown Exposition.

AMBASSADOR BRYCE AMONG THE SPEAKERS

All Warships Partake in Brilliant Water Carnival at Hampton Roads—Big Fair Practically Complete.

(Journal Special Service.)
Norfolk, Va., May 13.—The three hundredth anniversary of the landing of the first permanent English colonists was celebrated on Jamestown island today with patriotic exercises, and addresses by the speakers including Hon. James Bryce, British ambassador to the United States, Governor Swanson of Virginia, and Dr. Thomas Nelson Page. Scores of boats were pressed into service to carry the thousands of visitors from Norfolk and the exposition grounds to the historic island.

Brilliant Carnival.
The celebration of Jamestown day will close tonight with a water carnival on Hampton Roads, which promises to be one of the most brilliant spectacles of the exposition. All of the warships have been decked with myriads of incandescent lights of many colors, and in addition many beautiful electrical floats and decorated yachts and steamers will take part in the pageant.

Much rivalry has developed among the crews of the different warships in preparing the floats and electrical displays, and as a result the naval spectacle will undoubtedly be the most beautiful ever witnessed anywhere.

The arrival of Jamestown day finds the exposition practically complete with the exception of some of the state buildings and concessions. The Warpath is yet in an incomplete state, several of the concessionaires having commenced construction work since the exposition opened. A month will probably elapse before all the features are ready and the big fair finished in all its departments.

No Hotel Extortion.
Stories of the extortion practiced by Norfolk hotels have been greatly exaggerated, there having been few complaints of the prices charged for accommodations, although many visitors have been vociferous in their objections to the quality of service rendered. The opening of the exposition has found many of the new hotels totally unprepared to care for their guests in a proper manner, but this has been remedied in great measure. Considering that Norfolk has a normal population of about 50,000, it is wonderful that so much has been accomplished in the way of caring for visitors.

Washington, May 13.—The anniversary of the Jamestown settlement was observed by special exercises in all the schools of the capital today. Several special meetings have been arranged by patriotic societies for this evening. Proclamations for a special observance of the day have been issued by the governors of nearly all eastern and southern states.

William E. Leeds, the "tin plate king," had a wife in his little home in Richmond, Indiana, long before he became a millionaire. She was a sweet, home-loving woman, who aided him to become rich. Then he met Mrs. Nannie Stewart Worthington, who was the wife of George E. Worthington of Cleveland. The couple had drifted apart and Mrs. Worthington listened willingly when Leeds suggested that she get a divorce. This accomplished, the "tin plate king" found an excuse to put aside his own wife and then married Mrs. Worthington.

In Paris, Antonio Terry met the beautiful Sibyl Sanderson, a grand opera singer, born in California, but who made her reputation in France. Four years of litigation ensued before Terry succeeded in getting his freedom. Then he married Miss Sanderson. He died shortly after, and his widow survived him a short time.

Henry M. Flagler, one of the richest men in the United States, forced a complaisant Florida legislature to pass a law making insanity grounds for divorce. With this for an excuse, he put aside his wife and married a woman 35 years his junior. The former Mrs. Flagler is well provided for financially, lives in a handsome home on Riverside Drive, and Broadway thinks she got the better of the bargain.

Goldie Mohr's Case.
Alan W. Wood, a Pittsburgh steel magnate and two-times widower, married Goldie Mohr, a singer in the Weber & Fields company. He died shortly after and his widow inherited the bulk of his millions. And Broadway thinks Goldie was "the wise one."

The case of Harry Shaw might be cited, but after all it would be hardly fair to the young Pittsburger. With all his faults it cannot be said that he put aside a wife in order to marry the young chorus girl. Broadway says give the devil his due.

But these few straggling instances, which might be multiplied many times over, show the allotment that women of the stage have for men of lately acquired wealth. The romance of Mr. Corey, however, presents this somewhat unusual feature. It was the belief of his associates in the steel corporation that he was the last man who would yield to the attraction of a stage queen. As the old father over in the little Pennsylvania town said: "They never thought Ellis would do it." But he did, or is going to.

From the time he took a place as a worker on the coal apple dumping cars at Bradock, until the directors of the steel corporation made him president at a salary of $100,000 a year, Mr. Corey came into public notice only as an indefatigable worker. He gave fullest credit to his wife for a large portion of the success that came to him. This is the wife he put aside because of his love for Mabelle Gilman.

Mabelle Gilman has been more or less known to the stage in New York and London for a dozen years. She was born in San Francisco and she had her own way to make in the world. Her first New York engagement was with Augustin Daly's company. She understudied Virginia Earle in the Gelscha company. Later she appeared in musical comedy, and subsequently won some popularity in "Dolly Varden," "Cinderella" and other plays. The most striking incident in her career, aside from the mention of her name in the divorce proceedings of the first Mrs. Corey, who obtained her decree of separation, with charge of her son, on July 30 last, may be said to be the publication of several love letters addressed to her by the crown prince of Sliah, who met her in London when she was playing in "The Belle of New York." These letters were couched in the most extravagantly devoted language, and even contained selections of poetry.

Rumor once had Mrs. Gilman engaged to marry Dan McAvoy, the comedian, but if the betrothal ever existed it was broken. After one of her numerous tiffs with managers, Miss Gilman said: "The only contract I have not yet broken is the marriage contract. I was never married. So there's no knowing." And that's what Broadway says. "There's no knowing."

Saved From Electric Chair.
Atlantic City, N. J., May 13.—Joseph Labriola, the Klinitola constable who was sentenced to be executed today and who was expected to be the first man electrocuted in New Jersey, has been granted a reprieve pending action on a writ of error returnable before the state court of appeals in June. Under the new law electrocutions will hereafter be the legal punishment for murder in New Jersey. A building for this purpose has been erected adjoining the state prison in Trenton.
