The Realm of the Needle

BY HELEN HAWTHORNE

Women and the Crafts.

Since the display of the applied arts has been in place at the Art Museum many girls and women who have examined these beautiful things have felt that they, too, could learn to do something with their hands, and could get a deal of wholesome pleasure out of the doing, if only they had a little direction. There are doubtless those in the city who teach these arts, or some of them, though who they are I cannot say—but it also seems to me it would be possible for one who is really in earnest about learning to do artistic hand work in the simpler lines to accomplish much by getting a book of directions and simply going at it with determination to allow her own inventive faculties play.

Why have we so completely laid aside raffia work? It is light, easy and capable of a number of uses. The basketry is pretty and serviceable, but if one and one's friends are all supplied with baskets there are the mats, shopping bags, sofa pillows and hats which are all useful. Nor is raffia the only material available for basketry. Reeds and cane can be bought and one can easily find books of instruction. Bead work is one of the most fascinating of feminine employments and an art which is constantly being revived.

The apparatus for chain making is so simple that any of our boys who have had the manual training course at school can achieve it. Two upright stocks to hold a spool two bars a little higher supporting a cross-piece which is grooved to allow the threads to fit in, and a hole in the bottom piece through which to pass the threads, and one will have as complete an outfit for chain making as is necessary.

A loom is required to make the larger articles, such as bags, but these are not difficult to construct and the beautiful articles which may be made—and sold if one is willing to look at this side of it—are well worth striving for.

Those who are particularly attracted by the metal work and jewelry, may find instruction in the summer school which Miss Watkins is to open here. We have doubtless many good workers in these lines in Portland, and it will be a step in the right direction if their talents may be developed and made a means of support, instead of ignoring them and letting the girl or woman who possesses them, drift into the merely mechanical and mercenary lines which are already supplied with workers.

What a girl can do if she tries is exemplified in the case of Miss Lowndes, one of our foremost window designers and painters. She is self-taught and her work shows originality and is highly praised. Another woman who has won success is Esther Moore, of Bedford Park, who excels in metal work; her electroliers and lamps are much sought.

There is a growing appreciation of good metal work, and the woman who can make articles which are both durable and beautiful need not hunt hard for a market.

Women have long been employed in binding books and of late years have won laurels as designers of covers and repousse workers. Women's work in the crafts has been sometimes accused of a want of character, of a pettiness which comes from limited vision, but it seems quite possible that this may be the result of the lack of training and the amateurishness which would mark the first trials of a beginner. Women who want to learn are usually patient, painstaking and even capable of drudgery in mastering the details which go to make skill in any line of work, and it seems not unreasonable to suppose that these qualities would carry them far in the crafts.

The making of picture frames might well receive more attention than it has and there is no good reason why women should not learn this useful occupation. When one has occasion to put it to the test it is astonishing to see how few dealers know how a picture should be framed or can even carry out the ideas of the owner of the picture who wishes to give it a proper setting. It does not mean that every picture should have a plain piece of pine stained black for a frame, though the mission craze we have lately had would seem to suggest that this is the ideal in many shops.

Elaborate frames are sometimes needed, and carved frames are often in demand. Many of the gilded novelties which confront us could well be banished, but sometimes a picture needs a gilded frame. It depends upon the picture; but it depends upon the worker whether a picture receives a deeper interest and appears to good advantage, or whether it is killed by the frame it receives. Many people would be willing to pay for good frames if they knew where to go for them and the women who would make this a study would not long remain unknown.

There are only a few of the crafts in which women could make a good living and still be doing the thing which would be interesting and which they would enjoy doing. The first requisite is the desire to do, and the second an inquiring spirit which will find out how the beginning can be made. After that determination to carry the thing through and some energy and spirit in finding a market for her wares, and the craftswoman will be on the high-road to success.

Some Recipes.

Dream Cakes.—Slice thin layers of bread cut into small squares. Place a layer of Swiss cheese between squares of bread after sprinkling a little salt and red pepper on cheese. Have a little melted butter in chafing dish and toast the sandwiches a golden brown. Serve with black coffee.

Honey Ginger Snaps.—One pint of honey, one teaspoonful of ginger, and one teaspoonful of soda, dissolved in a little water, and two eggs. Mix all, then work in all the flour possible, roll very thin, and bake in a moderately hot oven. Any flavoring extracts can be added, as you may wish.—From What To Eat.

Dark Cake.—One cup sugar, one cup molasses, one cup butter, two eggs, one cup sour milk, three cups flour, two teaspoons soda, one teaspoon cinnamon, one-half teaspoon allspice, one-quarter teaspoon cloves, little nutmeg, one-half package of seeded raisins.

Luncheon Cakes.—Three-quarters cup sugar, three-quarters cup molasses, three-quarters cup butter, one egg, one cup milk, two and a half cups flour, one level teaspoon cream tartar, one heaping teaspoon soda, one teaspoon ginger or one-half teaspoon of all kinds spices, one tablespoon vinegar.

Potato Biscuits.—These biscuits must be started in the morning. Fill a cup two-thirds full with hot potato mashed, put into this one-fourth of a cup of butter. Have in a mixing bowl one teaspoonful of sugar, one teaspoonful of salt, add one cupful of milk that has been scalded and cooled to lukewarm with one-fourth of a compressed yeast cake dissolved in it, the beaten white of one egg, and flour enough to knead smooth. After the dough has risen well cut it down and let it rise the second time. Shape in small biscuits and put in a cool place to rise. Bake quickly and serve hot.

Beef Pie.—Some people never know what to do with the remnants of cold roast beef. Cut the remnants of the beef into small pieces and stew slowly one hour, then place in a baking dish, add the gravy that was left over, a lump of butter, some slices of onion, salt, pepper and water until it nearly fills the dish. Put over the fire and thicken with flour. Have ready some mashed potato, season with butter, and heap this upon the meat. Brown the top with white of egg and place in the oven to brown.
