

WILL FIRE LAST GUN

At Empire Theatre Tonight Governor Chamberlain, Mayor Lane and Other Prominent Speakers Will Close the Campaign.

The last gun of the Lane campaign will be fired tonight at the Empire theatre, when Governor Chamberlain, Mayor Lane and other well-known speakers will tell of what has been done by the present administration and what will be done if it is extended for another two years.

This last meeting is expected to be the best of the lot. Governor Chamberlain has not spoken before during the campaign and his reputation as a forceful campaigner is attracting much interest to the meeting scheduled for tonight.

Special music has been provided for the occasion. There will be in attendance to see that the audience is provided with comfortable seats. It is expected that the theatre will be all too small for the crowd which will come to hear the official closing of the campaign.

The Republicans will close their campaign tonight at the Empire theatre. The speakers slated for that occasion are Judge Webster, Mr. Devlin, Wallace McCamant and Louis Zimmerman. Invitations have also been sent to the members of the legislature from Multnomah county, to the various Republican officials and to the state officials at Salem, asking them to lend the dignity of their presence to the occasion. Their attendance is also desired to show that the Republican party is back of Mr. Devlin and that Republicanism is the issue of the campaign.

HONORS YOUNG MAN

great deal for the strong friendship the young man incites that as soon as it became known here that he was lost, several of his friends quit their positions and went to Fairfax to assist in the search for him. The little boy who was lost with Lindsay also happened to be a general favorite wherever he was known.

It was under these conditions that the mines at Fairfax and the coke ovens at once shut down when it was learned that they were lost, and all the men were ordered by Superintendent Sterling to quit work and form in small parties and search for the pair.

At One Meal

The two had no matches with which to build a fire, they had no blankets, and when they started had but a light lunch sufficient for one meal. This was all eaten by the man and boy the first day, a pet dog which accompanied the boy being encouraged to rustle for itself. This the dog was unable to do, and during the six days they were lost it starved. Lindsay carried a revolver and made many attempts to find and kill game, but the two made so much noise going through the woods that not a trace of game was seen with the exception of a wildcat.

While the two were lying, weak and worn out, with the dog curled up beside them, the wildcat cautiously parted the brush 40 feet away. Lindsay had already heard the animal coming through the forest, and the instant it came into view he fired at it, but missed. The animal was gone in a twinkling.

For three days the two were penned up in a wild canyon, the savage steepness of the banks of which forbade their climbing out in their weakened condition. While they wandered listlessly down the stream flowing through the canyon Lindsay made countless attempts to catch it with his hands, small trout that could be seen swimming, but did not get one. It was in this canyon, however, that he caught the frog, which proved to be their only food for five days.

Walked Hundred Miles.

It is estimated that the pair covered 100 miles during the time they were out. They did great deal of their traveling from 3 a. m. to noon, then resting for several hours in the heat of the day, and after beginning their afternoon march they continued until night's shadows fell.

To appease the gnawings of hunger they tried to eat various kinds of leaves, but their stomachs refused all such fare. Lindsay believes that they would both have perished if they had not taken frequent baths in the stream, which followed and passed. It seemed that these baths greatly refreshed each of them, and whenever the boy fell unconscious, as he frequently did, Lindsay would have recourse to this water cure, sometimes being compelled to carry the boy a distance to reach water.

The dog seemed to realize the extremities his little master was facing, and followed closely at his heels whining dimly whenever the boy stumbled and fell.

Fairfax has never seen such a time as it did when the two were brought back. They were found near Carbonado, and 500 people from that place accompanied the rescuing party on the train to Fairfax, where, amid a general hurrying of men, weeping of women and blowing of whistles, they were welcomed as ones never expected to be seen alive again.

None of the vicissitudes the two saw shook their courage, and there was no crying or hysterics on the part of either when found. The child laughed when he saw his rescuers, and shouted to one whom he knew, "Hello, Stub; what are you doing here?"

in his publication of today, whereas, his former complaint had been specifically against certain houses which I had closed to meet his apparently just complaint.

He came, and among other things stated that he would consent to sell his business, a hotel, to be used for such purposes if he could do so and also, quite frankly, admitted that he carried on a business in the city which scattered throughout the city if he succeeded in driving it from its present quarters, the objections to which, urged upon me by many, I explained to him fully.

Relief From Snarling Curs.

As a matter of fact, and to be plain, it looked and does look to me as if Mr. Anderson has been engaged in an attempt to use the police force and myself to force someone to buy him out for his personal profit and benefit. Whatever he states as to conditions there which are true and conceded by me, but where does the limit lie? I have forced out of business and away from the contamination of a far larger number of persons and young girls the gilded dens of vice which spotted the town.

Earnestly and with little help, and at times against much opposition, have I worked and fought to better the conditions of this city in behalf of the people who live in its homes, in this as well as other matters. Harassed and badgered, and now set upon by all the interests which fatten and thrive upon or aim to make gain from vice and other grafts and grabs which they have tried to visit upon the city, it seems ill requital for service honestly rendered to be so treated, and I appeal to the people of the little homes and to all persons who know of the conditions which formerly existed, to help me kick from my heels the snarling curs who seek to detract your attention from the real and vital interests which are at stake.

REFUSES TO PAY SHREVE

Judge Cleland Holds That Justice of the Peace Is Not Entitled to Salary and Must Rely on Fees—Will Go Higher.

The supreme court of Oregon will be called upon to decide whether Justice of the Peace T. C. Shreve of the Mt. Tabor district is entitled to a salary of $2,400 a year from the county as do the justices of the districts in the city of Portland, because the precinct in which Justice Shreve holds court was annexed to the city at the election last June.

Judge Cleland in the circuit court this morning decided that Shreve is not entitled to the same salary as a justice in the city and Shreve will have to content himself with the fees he collects. Shreve's attorney announced immediately after Judge Cleland's decision that an appeal would be taken to the supreme court.

Shreve applied to the county court for a voucher for $1,500 which he alleged was due him as salary since July 2 of last year. The claim was based on the fact that the precinct in which he holds court was annexed to the city last June. The county court refused to allow the claim and proceedings were begun in the circuit court for a writ of mandamus compelling the county to pay the salary. In passing on the question Judge Cleland said:

"The part of Mt. Tabor district annexed to the city was included in precincts 68, 69, 70, 74 and a part of 87. The larger part of the district was left without the city. It is true that the precinct in which the justice resides was brought into the city, but he has jurisdiction only over those upon whom processes are served within the district. Therefore if the justice is to be paid as a city justice, the city would be paying for a man who serves only those people of the city who live in the precincts that were annexed last June.

"The court can not believe that the justice's residence in the city is sufficient to entitle him to a salary as a city justice, and the proceedings for mandamus will be dismissed."

by pleading guilty. Then he said that he never sent the letter through the mail, but gave it to a young man at the Union depot, who in turn was to hand it to Miss Walker at the Young Woman's Christian association at Seattle. Shuman was the personification of perplexity when he endeavored to arrive at an understanding, or misunderstanding, of how the letter reached Miss Walker at Tacoma, care general delivery.

Just Cried and Explained.

For 10 minutes Shuman explained and for 10 minutes he cried. Finally, Judge Wolverton said that he had heard enough, and sentenced Shuman to serve five months in the county jail. The fact that Shuman has been in the county jail a month shortened his term of imprisonment for that period of time.

Shuman was employed as a bartender by Charles Piltz, 786 Washington street, prior to his arrest.

WINGS AN ESCAPE

Fagan took the hammer with which he had been breaking rock, selected a board in the stockade that had a knot across its entire width, broke it with a blow, crawled through the hole and made a dash for liberty. He was fired at by the guards and says that buckshot struck him but did not penetrate his skin. He kept on running until Engineer William Eschel shot him with a 28-calibre revolver at a distance of 200 yards.

Fagan then crawled into the brush, where he lay for three hours, when the guards found him. Commenting on Eschel's shooting, Fagan said:

"You bet, he is ace high with a revolver, that plug."

Fagan was sentenced to serve a year for stealing some copper wire in Albina. He had been working on the rockpile about a month and a half. His wound was dressed last night and this morning by County Physician Geary.

LANE 164, DEVLIN 117

declare themselves. Every voter who came along was buttonholed and asked the question: "Are you for Lane or for Devlin?" The result was, therefore, as fair a test as could be devised.

Voters of every character and description, from the hod carrier to the banker and from the hobo to the statesman, were polled at the corner of Washington and Fourth streets between 9 and 10 o'clock this morning, with the result that out of 127 registered voters, 71 declared that Mayor Lane should be continued in office, while 56 favored giving Candidate Devlin an opportunity to clean up the north end.

The reporter taking the straw vote soon had a bunch of Lane and Devlin partisans around him, watching the progress of the canvass; but as the Lane tally steadily forged ahead, the Devlin supporters lost heart and moved on.

Eager to State Choice.

An interesting feature of the canvass was the eagerness with which the voters declared their choice. Occasionally a glum, sour looking individual would brush past, making no response to the request for his preference. A few voters looked with suspicion upon the proceeding, fearing to announce their choice, lest some advantage might be taken of it. Now and then a piece of good-natured rally was hurled at the canvasser, but for the most part the voters were anxious to proclaim their preference.

On Upper Washington.

On upper Washington street the main thoroughfare of Portland, where all classes of the city's residents pass, the straw vote gave Mayor Lane 16 votes to Devlin's 12. In this case only those who are voters were asked. Many of the men who were approached said they were strangers in the city or had lived here only a short time, and from them no expression of choice was asked.

Beginning at 9 o'clock on the west side of Washington street at First street, men who were coming down town to their places of business from their homes were met. A poll of these men from Fifth to Thirteenth streets gave Lane 11 votes and Devlin 4. One of the Lane voters said:

"I am a Republican; never voted for a Democrat in my life, but I intend to vote for Dr. Lane."

Professional and business men coming into their offices were unanimous in the sentiment that "Lane is good enough for me." On the return to Fifth street on the north side of Washington street, in which men living down town were met, Lane had no votes, every one being for Devlin. Another trip up to Thirteenth was taken, on the south side, and the final score stood 16 for Lane, 12 for Devlin.

Tenderloin for Devlin. The straw vote taken along Third street, from Morrison down toward oak, including a block of Chinatown along Second showed Lane 19, Devlin 25, while 40 refused to answer and 8 were undecided.

The sporting element was strong for Devlin, while those who refused to vote were largely of the laboring class, that apparently feared some kind of a trap. The undecided were largely confined to working men and business men. The sporting element mostly had no doubts whatever, nor were they bashful about asserting their choice.

The last canvass made was at Third and Oak streets, and many of those who approached were habitués of the North End. The canvasser mostly had no doubts of this class were for Devlin; and the ballot showed only two Lane votes, while 13 were for Devlin.

The total of these straw votes, including that taken by the employes of Bell & Co., is 164 for Lane, 117 for Devlin.

that the time varied from 5:30 to 7:26, but the running was steady and the grammar school lads as they neared the city and finally reached the residence districts were cheered by the many people who watched the progress of the race.

The time of the 13 relays was as follows: 1—6 minutes; 2—6 minutes; 3—5:32; 4—5:49; 5—5:39; 6—5:42; 7—7:26; 8—5:54; 9—6:32; 10—6:16; 11—6:31; 12—5:30; 13—6:42.

The schools finished in the following order: Roy Flaherty, Hawthorne, 1:19:26; George Crump, Highland, 1:21:18; Byron Wright, Mount Tabor, 1:23:04; Joe Celestine, Shattuck, 1:23:07; Carlisle Gelsler, Almsworth, 1:26:32.

Owing to a misunderstanding in the matter of arranging the relays Almsworth runners were seriously handicapped after the first relay. Pension was compelled to run two relays and there was no one to finish on the home stretch.

Autos Follow Runners.

Two automobiles, bearing the timers, judges and a party of guests followed the runners into the city. In the first auto were Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Stone, Mrs. Philip Buehner, Mrs. L. W. Mrs. Miss Buehner, Miss Newhall and H. P. Buehner. Professor H. Jenkins of Atkinson school, A. M. Grilley and L. M. Myers of the Y. M. C. A. acted as timekeepers and judges.

The race was successfully carried out from start to finish and was in charge of L. M. Myers, who directed the relay of last year. The runners were taken to their various mile posts by boat and on street cars, and at 11 o'clock, when the race was scheduled to start, every one of the young participants was eager and waiting for the cloud of dust which announced the coming of the runners.

It is the intention to present the silver cup to the winning team at the Hawthorne school as soon as the arrangements can be completed.

THEIR HEARING IS RESTORED

Astonishing Demonstration Is Made by the Great Fer-Don in Portland.

Young Man Gives Another Sample of Work Which Aroused the Eastern Cities During the Past Year.

On last night some remarkable demonstrations were made in public by the Great Fer-Don, who is introducing into Portland the remarkable remedies which created a sensation in eastern cities.

The demonstrations, as usual, took place at the free show grounds at Washington and Twentieth streets, and were witnessed by hundreds of people. Fer-Don promised that one application of one of his preparations would make the deaf hear inside of three minutes, and would also make the lame to walk in the same short space of time.

There were many deaf people present, and about a half dozen of these were given a demonstration of the Fer-Don Magic Relief with unvarying success. Mr. George Seely, who lives on East Burnside street, was the first to test this remedy. It relieved him of deafness of long standing.

R. McKenny, 309 Clay street, who had long suffered from deafness, was greatly relieved.

The hearing of these and others who came upon the platform was tested after an interval of two and three minutes. The test consisted of questions put to them in an ordinary conversational tone at distances varying from five to fifty feet.

The results were remarkable in the extreme. Some of those treated had been deaf for a number of years. When the first question was asked a look of amazement would spread over their features. As the questioning was repeated the look of surprise would give way to one of pleasure.

In giving an account of these demonstrations, Fer-Don said: "The preparation used is not the one with which I accomplish most, as my 'Fer-Don's Medical Discovery,' as it is called, and to which I owe my success, is for treatment of all forms of stomach trouble, and the general breaking down of the system that follows in the wake of diseases of this character.

"The stomach is the seat of a great many troubles; for instance, my remedies will relieve thousands of people in this city of rheumatism, simply by getting the stomach in working order."

Many people seen who were present at this demonstration assert positively that Fer-Don's remedy undoubtedly made these deaf people hear again.

Fer-Don Takes Boys to Theatre.

It was a happy lot of boys who as guests of the Great Fer-Don witnessed the very excellent entertainment at the Grand Saturday afternoon. Fer-Don announced some days ago his intention of forming this theatre party, and invited all the boys of the city to accompany him. From the large number who took advantage of this invitation it appears that Fer-Don is popular with the youth of the city.
