A class of 27 young men and women were given their first communion yesterday morning at a solemn high mass at Sacred Heart church, Milwaukie road. In the evening the communicants became socialists. Both services were largely attended and were impressive and beautiful. At the evening service, a statue of St. Anthony, presented by Dr. and Mrs. Rogers, and one of St. Francis of Assisi, presented by Mrs. A. Muesel, were blessed and dedicated. Rev. Father Gregory, pastor, was in charge of both services.

With appropriate exercises, the Baptist church, East Main and Forty-fourth streets, was dedicated yesterday morning. The church was started several years ago as a mission by the Second Baptist church, but has grown so rapidly that the members decided a short time ago to stand alone in the new building. It is expected that a large church will eventually be built in the neighborhood, which is growing rapidly in population.

One of the largest cabbage roses in the city is owned by Mrs. Allie Scarf, 376 East Eleventh street. It measures 11 inches in circumference. The rose is perfectly formed and has been admired by the entire neighborhood. The mammoth bloom is the only one on the bush and looks like a sentry standing guard over the other roses in Mrs. Scarf's beautiful garden.

At Portsmouth, on the St. Johns line, an addition is being built.

DESIRED "HUBBY" PARDONED FIRST

Wife of Prison Convict Desired to Give Man Chance to Defend Himself.

After an effort to have her husband pardoned from the penitentiary in order that she might obtain a divorce without taking advantage of his imprisonment, Mrs. Maude Marchand brought suit for divorce this morning on the ground that C. E. Marchand, her husband, was convicted of a felony. Marchand was sentenced in July, 1905, to five years in the penitentiary for assault and robbery with a dangerous weapon.

Some time ago Mrs. Marchand went to the courthouse and had the record of the trial looked up. She took the names of the trial judge, the jurors and the district attorney, and stated that she would see them and try to obtain a pardon for her husband, so when she sued for divorce he would be at liberty to defend. This purpose was apparently abandoned, for Judge Cleland, who pronounced sentence on Marchand, was never approached for his assent to the pardon. Marchand is now in the penitentiary at Salem.

PUGET SOUND NOT IN CONTROL NOW

Butter Manufacturer Says Portland Dealers Would Be Able to Get Its Share—Advanced Prices Are Now Justified by the Ruling Conditions

By T. S. Townsend of Townsend Creamery Company.

Much has been said of the recent advance made in the value of butter, and while the present price is unusually high for this time of the season, yet there is nothing very strange or startling about the matter when all the conditions are understood, which are about as follows:

During last winter all of the warehouses, both in the east and on the Pacific coast, were completely emptied of their cold storage stocks, and this, too, long before the spring make of butter came into the market. Hence, it will be readily seen that the markets throughout the east and west could only be supplied with the fresh-made goods, and coupled with this scarcity, the general prosperity all over the United States seems to have made an unprecedented demand and high prices. Even up to this late date, there has been no surplus in the east, as is usual at this time of the year.

Getting Alaska Trade. Now what are the conditions at home? The Alaska buyers at this time buy large quantities of butter, (most of them buy enough to run them for one year) and until recent years the Puget Sound cities have enjoyed a monopoly of the trade, and the only reason we have been able, during the last three years, to take away from Seattle and Tacoma a large portion of the Alaska trade, is because we are prepared to fill large orders quickly. But the Seattle houses still do an enormous butter business in Alaska and usually buy their stocks of butter and eggs direct from the east with which to fill their orders, but the conditions throughout the east, as above mentioned (and with the added poor railroad service) has forced the Seattle buyers to almost fall over one another and even bid against themselves almost daily to buy Portland butter—hence the local creameries regarded it not only the proper thing to do, but a very opportune time to advance the price of butter and pay the farmers, who have helped us to be successful, the highest prices for their butter fat.

Many of our creamery men seem to think the present price cannot be maintained for a very long time. Supposing this proves true, we can allow the price to decline, and while the unprecedented high price does continue, we will have the satisfaction of paying the farmers the highest price for their butter fat they have ever received at this season of the year.

As will be seen, the general conditions throughout the country have proved blessings to the Oregon people at this time.

Referring again to the monopoly the Seattle houses had in the butter trade of Alaska, I might incidentally remark that Portland not only could have the lion's share in the butter and eggs trade, but in all other lines as well, if the apparent combination against a steamship line plying between Portland and Alaska ports could be broken up.
