Imagine a woman who, in a city of the United States, can command a larger audience than the president of the United States. That woman sits in her room at the Imperial hotel in a dark blue suit made perfectly plain with a blue tie at her throat and a huge enveloping cape thrown over herself, with a red-lined hood tossed back from her short shock of curly brown hair. She is Evangeline Booth, the youngest daughter of General Booth of the Salvation Army, and beloved the world over. Miss Booth has just returned from a remarkable trip through California. At Berkeley she spoke in the Greek amphitheatre, was introduced by the governor and there collected to hear her the largest crowd ever assembled there, not excepting the occasion of President Roosevelt's visit a few years ago. The vast seating capacity of the wonderful people stood in every available space; 2,300 extra chairs were put into the orchestra area, and still people climbed trees and sat on the surrounding hillsides to hear this remarkable woman speak. Miss Booth with her full dramatic voice tells of it as the most wonderful experience of her life—the marvel of being the center of that throng and being heard distinctly by all of them when she spoke. "When I was through speaking," she said, "I could not get away for a long time and when I finally managed to get into my automobile they fairly fell on top of me and as far as I could see they waved their adieux to me. The demonstration of affection was wonderful and pathetic."

Valuable realty holdings were put up at public auction in the lower corridor of the chamber of commerce building this morning by J. Whyte Evans, Auctioneer. Real estate is a new feature in Portland real estate circles, but is a practice common in San Francisco, New York and other metropolitan cities as well as in some smaller cities. "The Washington," a rooming house at 695 Northrup street, completed about eight months ago, was sold under the hammer for $29,000, a price much below the figure placed on the building by real estate men generally. Mr. Evans considers the building worth every cent of $30,000 and says that it pays big interest on that amount. Later in the day two other men appeared and said that they had bid $40,000. The auctioneer asserts that he did not hear the bid, but the property will be put up for sale, so Mr. Evans stated this afternoon. The offers were considered ridiculously low and the reason for the low bids is given by Mr. Evans to be that the newness of the scheme of buying at auction rather than starting the buyers who tend to be very careful before purchasing. Residences were placed on the market by the auctioneer, Captain H. J. Meagher, but were taken off without being sold to give time for investigation by prospective buyers. J. Whyte Evans took the stand this afternoon to personally conduct the auction. There are still a number of residences to be sold before night. The next auction will be held June 15.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Salem, Or., June 4.—Following the opinion of Attorney-General Crawford, given this morning by the referendum petition asking for the referendum on the measure appropriating $125,000 annually for the University of Oregon, did not meet the requirements of the initiative and referendum act passed in 1907, Secretary of State Benson has refused to file it and to certify the petition to be placed on the ballot for vote at the next election. Timon Ford, attorney for the petitioners, will start mandamus proceedings in the circuit court of Marion county to compel the secretary to certify the petition. The attorney-general has agreed to waive formal pleadings, that the suit may come up as soon as possible.

Yesterday's election, while unusually quiet and orderly, was without the ludicrous features, and especially so in the north end, where a number of efforts were made to run in illegal voters, which but for the watchful eye and determination of the Lake workers might have succeeded. A well-known Burnside street saloon-keeper knowing of a registered voter who was out of town made an effort to vote a son of sunny Italy in place of the absent man, but tangled by the close questioning of the Lake watchers the Italian forgot the name under which he was to vote as well as his place of residence and every other important fact necessary for a voter to know. Finally the Italian and his saloon-keeper sponsor abandoned the effort, the Italian receiving a volley of profanity for his stupidity. At the same polling place, precinct 10, another north end liquor dealer tried to run in an illegal voter, who when he presented himself to the poll, gave the name of a resident of the precinct who was out of town. Again the Lake watcher began to ask the would-be voter embarrassing questions, with the result that he turned to his liquor dealer friend and said in an undertone: "You will have to get some one else to do this, I'm afraid of getting pinched." Repeated efforts were made to swear in voters, who had neglected to register, but for the most part were unsuccessful.

With his death hourly expected from a fracture of the skull and a blood clot on the brain, Hamilton Knott, aged 60, lies at his home, 314 East Seventh street, and Joseph McVittie, a young expressman employed by Olsen's Transfer company, Seventh and Irving streets, is being held at the city prison without bail, accused of having inflicted the injuries which may result in the old man's death. Both men are employed by the transfer company—the injured man as a furniture packer and McVittie in the capacity of teamster. According to the story told by relatives of Knott, last Thursday morning, McVittie and the man now facing death, became engaged in an altercation in the barn at Seventh and Irving streets. In the fight which followed it is claimed that the young teamster felled Knott to the floor with a blow on the face and then proceeded to beat the unfortunate man engaged in an altercation in the barn at Seventh and Irving streets. (Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Salem, Or., June 4.—At the initial meeting of the state text book commission, which is in session at the state house today, Harvey W. Scott of Portland was chosen chairman of the commission and Frank K. Lovell of Salem, for many years chief clerk in the office of the secretary of state, was chosen secretary. The personnel of the commission is as follows: H. W. Scott of Portland, President; F. L. Campbell of the University of Oregon at Eugene, William M. Colvig of Jacksonville, C. A. Johns of Baker City and M. A. Miller of Lebanon. One of the members of the board said that there was a general demand for cheaper books but that he would feel like recommending a few expensive books in case it was superior. Commissioner Johns thought the commission had a much better class of books from which to choose than it had a year ago. Many more firms are represented than in the last year, and as a whole there is much more interest manifested in the selection of the books.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Seattle, June 4.—An order which Judge Albertson of the superior court has just signed, prohibiting intimidation or picketing by union molders and kindred evil handiwork in this county. It comes as a result of the court's decision in the cases brought by the Moran company, the Washington Iron Works and other employers for an injunction against acts of violence, picketing, the use of persuasion and other means employed by the unions to prevent nonunion men from going to work at the shops where the strike is in progress. The unions are prohibited from visiting the boarding-houses or residences of the nonunion men or other men employed by the shops in order to persuade them to quit their employment.

(Journal Special Service.) Washington, D. C., June 4.—It was unofficially announced today that the cabinet meeting today that the government will proceed against the anthracite carrying roads on the grounds that they violated the Sherman anti-trust laws. The matter was discussed at the meeting and it is understood the president and his advisers believe the government has a strong case.

(Journal Special Service.) Oregon City, June 4.—A meeting of all the committees which have in charge the affairs of the fruit and flower show which is to be held Friday and Saturday of this week is being held at the courthouse this afternoon for the purpose of making final arrangements. They all report everything in favor of a big crowd at this show and also of big exhibits of fruits and flowers. The women who have charge of the decorations and refreshments report that the work progressing favorably and that the hall will be decorated beautifully. The large posters advertising the Fourth of July celebration which will be held in this city are now printed and will be posted in all parts of the county within a few days. The committees are working hard and are securing more money each day for the event. The ladies have decided to take charge of the parade and this part of the program can be relied upon as being one of the grandest events of the day. Who the orator will be has not as yet been given out but it is very probable that it will be some well-known orator of the county. Several more prizes have been added to the list with respect to past few days and it is expected that many events of interest will be pulled off during the day. The committees are bound to outdo any event of its kind ever given in the city before. A number of the leading business men are including all their customers to spend the day in this city. The fireworks in the evening will be discharged from a point below the falls, where they can be plainly seen from any part of the city.

(Journal Special Service.) Chicago, June 4.—President James Hoge of the International Independent Telephone association, in opening the season of the annual convention today, reported that 500,000 telephones have been added to the independent system in the past year. He estimates that the Bell had the same number, which makes 1,000,000 new telephones. He reports that many telephones were obtained in the past year.
