Important Meeting of the Fourth of July Celebration Committee Tonight—Ex-Cow Puncher Desires Others in Parade.

The most important meeting of the Fourth of July celebration committee yet called will meet in the council chambers at the city hall at 8 o'clock tonight. The official program of the two days' celebration is to be arranged and agreed upon and a number of other important matters will be brought to the committee's attention.

Colonel James Jackson, chairman of the committee on parade, requests that all organizations and business firms desiring to take part in the parade will make known that fact to his committee, which has established headquarters in rooms 23 and 25 Hamilton building.

The following letter which has been turned over to the celebration committee was received by The Journal:

Portland, May 29.—Editor of The Journal—Looking forward and anticipating a grand old time the coming "Fourth of July," I would like to suggest that a call be issued to all the ex-cow punchers in Portland and vicinity to meet and take part in the parade on the "Fourth." There are many ex-cow punchers from all parts of the United States located in this city, and as one of the craft I would like to see them all take part in the celebration.

"Hoping that you will turn this matter over to the committee, or round up the bunch yourself, I remain, Yours truly, CHARLES TREAU, "Ex-Cow Puncher."

BEER IS BEVERAGE AT PROHI ELECTION

Nick Marquet Jailed for Distributing Intoxicants on Election Day.

Prohibition may have been the issue but beer was the favorite beverage in Sellwood precinct yesterday and as a result of the gratuitous dispensation of the liquor Nick Marquet landed in the city prison on a charge of giving intoxicants away on election day.

Information was conveyed to the police yesterday afternoon that six kegs of beer had been stored in the basement of a house at East Thirteenth and Spokane streets and every voter with a ballot was being accommodated with glass of the foaming brew.

Detectives Hellyer and Baty were detailed to make an investigation and after ascertaining the condition of affairs Hellyer went to a nearby telephone to receive instructions as to what course to pursue. The officer's conversation with police headquarters was overheard by the butcher in the shop in which the telephone is located and a warning was given to the congenial spirits gathered about the kegs in the basement.

Marquet, who is alleged to have had charge of the beer, was the only person found in the cellar and was promptly placed under arrest. He was released upon deposit of $50 cash bail and the case will be heard in the police court tomorrow. Sellwood went "wet."

LIVE TROLLEY WIRE FALLS ON STREETCAR

Car No. 341 on the Montavilla line was running rapidly when a live wire fell directly across the tracks, near Wiberg Lane. The motorman brought the car to a sudden stop, but not in time to prevent the wire from striking the car.

Fortunately the wire struck just above one of the car windows and fell harmlessly to the ground. It sputtered and coiled itself about the wheels, clogging them so that more than half an hour's effort on the part of the crew was necessary to remove it.

ARRAIGNED ON CHARGE OF STEALING LETTER

Wolverson in city court in the United States district court for stealing a letter addressed to the Olympia Bottling works. With the consent of Assistant United States Attorney James Cole, Meister was allowed 10 days in which to plead guilty.

Badly Mixed Up. Abraham Brown of Winterton, N. Y., had a very remarkable experience; he says: "Doctors got badly mixed up over me; one said heart disease; two called it kidney trouble; the fourth believed it was the stomach and liver trouble; but none of them helped me, so my wife advised trying Electric Bitters, which are restoring me to perfect health. One bottle did me more good than all the five doctors prescribed." Guaranteed for blood poison, weakness and all stomach, liver and kidney complaint, by Red Cross Pharmacy, 50c.

ATTORNEYS QUESTION ACT OF LEGISLATURE

Point Raised at Trial of Suit for Damages for Death of a Chinese Child.

Twelve jurors, five lawyers and a bailiff of the United States circuit court went to Second street between Morrison and Alder streets this morning for the purpose of examining a street car that had been placed there by the Portland Railway, Light & Power company and the lay of the street where little Wong You Nom was killed by a street car last year, to aid them in deciding the suit of Wong Kim, father of the dead boy, brought against the street car company to recover $5,000.

In the meantime tiny Kum Yuk, Wong You Nom's mother, and very little larger than a healthy 10-year-old American girl, sat in the courtroom weeping her eyes out at the memory of the tragedy which separated her forever from her offspring.

Later the jury returned and the monotonous grind of justice was resumed. J. R. Hainline, an engineer, was placed upon the stand, testified that he had seen the accident and that, while the little boy ran from the east side of the street, the motorman was looking toward the west and was talking to a man standing to his left.

The attorneys for the plaintiff will attempt to prove that the car was running at the rate of three or four miles an hour at the time the accident happened and that the motorman, had he been looking ahead, could have stopped the car in time to prevent the accident. They will also attempt to prove that proper fences were not in use on the car which killed the boy. This is a point that is regarded as important because of the fact that the legislature passed an act providing that the city council and mayor of any incorporated city could adopt any approved fence instead of the one provided by the state law, which stipulates that the fence must extend two feet in front of the car and be not more than three inches above the rails.

The attorneys for the plaintiff contend that the legislature exceeded its constitutional legislative power by passing an act granting such provision. The streetcar company will endeavor to prove that the child came to its death through contributory negligence. The case was tried in the state circuit court last December and the jury disagreed. The present trial was commenced yesterday and promises to be long fought.

EXPOSE METHODS USED BY BEVER

Witness Says the Statements in Butte Boys Advertisements Are Untrue.

BRISTOL BEGINS HIS ARGUMENTS TO JURY

Declares Mine Advertised as Eldorado Does Not Need Armed Guard to Protect Heaps of Gold, as Was Advertised.

United States Attorney William C. Bristol first surprised the attorneys representing George W. Bever, manager of the Butte Boys' Mining company, charged with using the mails for fraudulent purposes, by introducing another witness when the preliminary hearing was re-opened before United States Commissioner J. A. Sladen this morning, and then later tore into the methods employed by Bever and his associates in furthering their project.

J. B. Carille was the witness and his testimony was in effect that the surrounding mining property was not as valuable as advertised by the mining company; that the Nancy Donaldson was not an El Dorado, necessitating an armed guard to defend the horde of wealth as pictured in Bever's advertisements, and was more than one half mile from the Butte Boys' property, instead of 500 feet, as claimed by the advertisements of Bever's company.

In his argument, Mr. Bristol stated that if the Butte Boys' company were to go bankrupt tomorrow all the creditors would have to fall back upon would be the money paid in for 312,000 shares of stock, amounting in all to something over $6,000, after deducting money paid out for expenses, and the mining property which he said is still only a prospect and has never been a producing mine.

Mr. Bristol stated that it was not the purpose of the government to show that Bever and his associates intended to defraud when they organized, but to show intent to defraud in the use of the mails wherein he claimed glittering and deceitful statements had been sent by Bever, or with Bever's consent, for the purpose of securing money to further their project.

The morning session was occupied by Carille's testimony and Mr. Bristol's argument. This afternoon Lawyer C. M. Idleman commenced the argument in Bever's behalf.
