WASHINGTON OPINION ON TAX INCREASE

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Olympia, Wash., June 7.—Attorney General J. D. Atkinson today rendered the opinion that a county board of equalization has no authority to raise the assessed valuation of real estate without giving legal written notice to owners of intention to raise its value for assessment purposes, but in the same connection he holds that when the board has made such increase it cannot be reduced after the board has adjourned, and the county treasurer is without authority to accept any less amount of taxes than shown by the increased valuation rolls. The only remedy is for each individual property owner to bring an action to compel the treasurer to accept the original amount assessed. The prosecuting attorney of Pacific county, who asks for the opinion is advised not to resist the application for reduced assessment if it appears that the increase was illegally made.

GERMANY IS FOSTERING TASTE FOR REAL SPORT

Recreation Which Was Until Recently Tabooed by Kaiser's Subjects Is Occupying Attention.

(Journal Special Service.) Berlin, June 7.—One of the most characteristic signs of modern Germany is the energy with which her ruling classes are endeavoring to foster a taste for sport. One of the many ways in which these efforts have taken shape is a so-called international sport exhibition just opened in Berlin by the crown prince, who also gave expression to his enthusiasm for the objects of display at a banquet just held. Grand Duke Adolf Friedrich of Mecklenburg, who was the chief promoter of the show, also spoke and described pretty fully the position of things in the following language: "The time is not far distant when the word sport sounded unpleasantly to us, and in the last few years even sport was a widespread view that any one who occupied himself with sport was to be regarded as a man of low art and science and love for sport could go hand in hand the German would not admit. He forgot that in history there is the greatest among the emperors of Roman antiquity and precisely the greatest intellectual heroes of modern times have, with glowing passion, taken part in sports. In other nations we have surpassed us in this respect we have now, at any rate, outlived our native opinions. Gradually but with consistent force we have learned that sport is not merely an outcome of superficial strength and time, but a factor of high national importance."

CLOSED TOWN

(Continued from Page One.) Mr. Stevens stated today, however, that he had not made the statement and would cause his office simply to follow the instructions of the district attorney.

Power Is Questioned.

In the opinion of many attorneys there is grave doubt as to the ability of either District Attorney Manning or Mayor Lane to close the saloons of Portland on Sunday, because of a queer and not well known sentence in the city charter. It is argued on the other hand that the charter provision is clearly unconstitutional in that it in effect legislates privileges as exemptions for Portland which are denied other parts of the state. In other words the vision places Portland above the law which lies over the rest of the state so far as the closing of saloons is concerned.

Will Furnish Test.

It is thought, therefore, that the proposed action of the district attorney in enforcing the state law will serve as a test of the law by the Portland liquor interests.
