has developed much talent as a mimic and is assured of a bright future. In her two weeks' engagement at the Columbia and Hammerstein's indoor theatre, she had set the hall of favourable comment rolling and made a decided hit. Plays That Stay. The list of open Broadway theatres and their plays remains about as it was a week ago. In almost every instance special matinees will be given on Decoration Day. Miss Adelaide Klein, who has scored a huge hit at the Metropolitan theatre, was seen on Monday in 'Fanchon the Cricket,' a domestic drama in five acts adapted from an old German romance. It is quite some time since this bright dramatic offering has been seen in this city, and not since the days of Maggie Mitchell's triumphs has Fanchon been portrayed by a recognized star in the metropolis. Miss Klein, who appeared in the title role, possesses all the charm, brightness, magnetism and elasticity required for the part. 'The Christian,' Hall Caine's beautiful dramatic creation, which for many years has been one of the favorite offerings of stock companies, was presented by Ralph Stuart, and his capable company at the Yorkville theatre. Mr. Stuart, who impersonates the minister and most conspicuous character in the play, has established himself as a favorite with the Yorkville patrons. At the Grand Opera house, Henry B. Harris production of 'The Lion and the Mouse,' Charles Klein's dramatic masterpiece, was produced on Monday. Grace Billson and Oliver Doné Byron enacted the leading roles. This week's bill at the West End theatre, where the Van Den Berg Opera company began the fourth week of its engagement in revivals of popular operas, was the 'Chimes of Normandy,' which, while old, retains its charm. Alexander Clark sang the role of Gaspar and Miss Louise Beaudet was the Serpolette. The other roles were sung by the Misses Alice Craft Benson, Mae Calder and Messrs. Harry Luckstone, Vernon Sykes, Tom Singer and W. J. Walsh. Despite the fact that the regular dramatic season is tottering on unsteady legs, there are many stars who have as yet shown no inclination to step for a much-needed vacation. Miss Grace George closed her engagement on Thursday night to prepare for her coming engagement in London. She is to make her debut on the English stage, in the play which she has been appearing here, 'Divorcee.' 'Wine, Women and Song' at the new Cirle theatre is nearing its third century run. For more than half a year Bonita's dazzling ways and good voice have appealed with certainty. She introduces new songs often enough to add interest, while Lew Hearn the Harlot Tucker of the company, has fresh bits of humor every day. 'The Harkins-Barber new and novel dramatization of 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' has succeeded so well in pleasing the patrons of the Majestic theatre, that the second week of its run at that theatre began more auspiciously than the first, and has succeeded in creating a very favorable impression. The cast contains the names of many prominent players, and that alone is a guarantee of excellent performances. The leading roles are in the hands of John Sutherland, Fred A. Steu and Lucilla Le Verne. 'The Builders' has made a favorable impression at the Astor theatre. This play should have struck Broadway earlier in the season, before New Yorkers were tired of plays and had begun to think of July's summer entertainments. It has made a deep impression, though on those who have seen it, and it has secured its reputation by New York as only a new playwright of whom much may be expected in the future, but a new actress, as far as metropolitan audiences are concerned, who will soon be numbered among our Broadway favorites. The author is a woman—Marion Fairfax—also the inmate of the play, and has shown in 'The Builders' much skill as a writer. Miss Amelia Gardner, in the part of Eliza Norris, has a chance that should have come to her long ago to show New York how excellent an actress she is. Miss Gardner comes a little while from New York to see how well she fits the way of leading women, and it is slowly and surely she does it. Master William Gibson, who has been in the city for some time, has made a splendid success of his part as Tom. The company, in general, has made a splendid success of its part.
