Friday was Flag day, a day set apart by the Daughters of the American Revlution, commemorating the first flying of the United States flag, which is often observed as a festive day but has not been made a legal holiday. This morning there was some demonstration in several of the public schools, with exercises appropriate to the day. The national hymns were sung, and there were patriotic readings. In some of the schools the Declaration of Independence was read, and almost all the school-rooms throughout the city were decorated with flags even where there were no exercises. Some of the schools were unable to hold exercises because of examinations. The board of education at its meeting Saturday recommended the observation of this day and it will probably be placed regularly on the program of special exercise days after this year. of the United States flag, which is often

The furniture was removed later but the water still was running into the basement this morning. Other basements in the vicinity were also flooded with sewer water but the damage was not so great. A fire engine pumped some of the basements dry.

Fire Marshal Roberts, who is completing the survey of the factories and pleting the survey of the factories and warehouses in the city limits for better fire protection, stated this morning that there were at least 35 or 46 more of these than in the preceding year. From the ground already covered by the survey Mr. Roberts estimates that there are at least 156 factories and warehouses in the city limits. Two experienced men will be added to the force in a short time and it is hoped that the survey of factories and warehouses will be completed early next month.

"We must start our house under the most favorable circumstances in order to give it a fair trial and a good start is more than half the battle in a successful theatrical enterprise," said John F. Cordray this morning. "We cannot expect the most favorable results until Grand avenue is improved with hard pavement and more lights. To build our theater now would be like buying a silk hat when one had no dress suit."

Architects have assured the committees that the theater could be completed and ready by January 1, but as that time is a poor one to launch a new theatre it has been thought advisable not to hurry the project. Accordingly: the committee is working slowly and carefully so that with more time given them a better and more suitable building can be provided with the funds at hand. 1, 1908, promoters of the Cordray the-

Not since the Lewis and Clark exposition have Portland hotels been so crowded as they were last week. From morning to night and from night to morning hotel clerks have been driven to the limit with inquiries for rooms which they did not have. This condition was not only true at the leading hostelries but extended down to the smaller places where rooms rent from 50 cents up.

There are many reasons for the crowded conditions, but hotel men agree

There are many reasons for the corowded conditions, but hotel men agree that the chief one is due to the fact that Portland has not sufficient hotel accommodations. She has but few more hotels now than in 1900 when the population of the city was only about 90,000. Of the new ones, only one is usually associated with a place for the accommodation of the traveling public.

Guerts' Wishes Unobserved.

With a population now bordering on 200,000 it is not surprising that visitors to the city have to take what accommodations they can secure without regard to their wishes.

Another reason for the crowded condition is due to the manner in which tourists are spending their time in the Rose City instead of San Francisco. In years gone by the Bay City attracted and held thousands of travelers who would spend several weeks there and two or three days in Portland. Now the conditions are reversed and because so many guests spend several weeks in Portland instead of several days, the congestion at the hotels is all the greater.

Since the Lewis and Clark exposition, Portland has become known as a place well worth visiting and travelers coming to the Pacific coast now figure on More Traveling Men Come.

The only route by which the children would pass in going and re-turning lies along the tracks of the Oregon Water Power & Railway com-pany, on the bank of the Willamette river, from Park avenue to the crema-torium.

He also commends the judicious advertising being done throughout the east by the Southern Pacific and says that all their big signs give prominent place to Portland's beauty and climatic conditions.

The "Road of a Thousand Wonders" is crowded to the front in these advertisements and it has been arranged so that nearly all people who come to the coast either come north over the Oregon & california line or go south over that line. "Hood River is the best advertised town in the state," said Mr. Wilson.
"Jonathan Bourne is giving Hood River apples away in Washington. Hood River alone, of all Oregon is properly exploited at the Jamestown exposition and it is a shame that Oregon has not been better represented there. In every agricultural district I have visited Hood River is known and spoken of."

Ar. Wilson spoke some of the marvelous growth of the Home Telephone system all over the United States. He says that this growth is being made at the expense of the Bell system.

The double tracks would further confuse children who chanced to be on the tracks, and it is said there would be great danger of fatalities.
