Portland's Rose Parade Viewed by Lovers of the Aesthetic in Mute Wonderment-Quiethood Displaying Honor Due to the Queen of Flowers.

A day in June! that radiant, beautiful month dedicated by ancient Romans to Luna! Not a sweltering, broiling day of the east or middle west, but an Ore-gon day, and just what this means can only be understood by those fortunate enough to reside in or visit Portland during this favored month. On this "perfect" day the Royal Rose, having been duly accorded "the freedom of the been duly accorded "the' freedom of the admired, as were those of the private city," graciously descended from its turnouts. Decorations were almost exclusively confined to the rose in numerous varie-ties of its cultivated form, although a dissenting note was occasionally struck by the introduction of some foreign genus, Canterbury Bells or Black-Eyed Susans modestly soliciting apturnouts.

throne and formally opened summer. Long before the time arrived for the setting forth of the royal procession, the loyal subjects were in their places, having utilized, by a peculiarly metroproval proval. A suggestion of Old Nippon was con-veyed by the use of Japanese parasols, while beautifully gowned women and dainty and exquisite children added the necessary human element to the perfect having utilized, by a peculiarly metro-politan accomplishment, all the avail-able space along the route of parado, and forming the usual well-dressed, prosperous-looking representatives of the great western empire. It was not a peevish, fault-finding crowd, such as might be found in some parts of our hand. From the quiet, and perfect order maintained, one almost fancied it an English crowd awaiting the approach of its own royalty, but minus its cordon of guardsmen and polics.

Childish Treble Heard.

Childish Treble Heard. Now and again a childish treble might be heard, inquiring, "Why don't they parade comins, mama?" But in the main the quiet continued undisturbed, except when broken by a slight ripple of laughter occasioned by the approach of a gaily decorated dog, driven by one small boy and gravely escorted on the right by abother, the harbingers of the parade to come, or the mild murmurs of amusament aroused by the appear-ance of a ross-caparisoned pony with its caudal appendage completely ob-curred by flowers. The colors of the plature were in de-fightful harmony, the asure of the sky, the exquisite and varied green of the parade bunting in jurtaposition with Extent of Moldings Unknown. When asked as to the general policy of the Weyerhaeusers outlined at the meeting of Thursday, which will be pur-sued in the future, Mr. McCormick said it was simply to buy timber wherever it could be obtained at reasonable figures and sell it as desired by actual manufacturers. Purchases by timber speculators will not be encouraged. When asked how much timber the Weyerhaeusers now owned he replied that with the aid of all their crulsers they had not been sible to even get ap-proximately at the figures. "We own about 1,500,000 acres of tim-ber lands in Washington." said he, "and several hundred thousands of acres in Oregon, or a little less than 2,000,000 acres in the two states. Then we own some mountain pine lands in Idaho." When asked relative to the value of the Weyerhaeuser timber holdings, reference being made in the question to George A. Wells, J. Frank Watson and Walter F. Burrell; Charles E. Ladd and Frederick V. Holman; J. C. Ainsworth and Robert Smith: Andrew Hoban and J. W. Taggart; Phil Metschan Jr., and Samuel Y. Hyde; W. H. Rockefeller in railroads and oil, Mr. McCormick replied that he had never made an estimate of the value of the timber held by the syndi-cate and could not even approximately guess what it was worth, classing, as he spoke the magazine articles as the height of absurdity and intimating that Rockefeller would never have occasion to envy Mr. Weyerhaeuser.

DECLARES RATE IS A JUST ONE

sel for the O. & N. Ry. Co., has filed an answer with the state railway commission to the complaint lodged May 27 by Secretary F. H. which the association holds are pro-hibitive. The railway company states that the rate of $1.50, which the lumber men wish restored, was "made as a tem-porary proposition only and under con-ditions that existed at that time." It is further alleged that the dis-tance from Saginaw to Asbland is 199 miles and that the normal regular rate is 53 per ion and that the present rate of $2.50, which went in effect August 1, 1906, is not unreasonable and is the same as applies from Springfield to Ashland, a distance of 216 miles.

An order was issued by Mayor Cau-field this atternoon to the effect that drinks are not to be sold here tomorrow. The same hours in which seloons are closed in Portland will prevail here. The mayor issued his statement as soon as the news of Judge Cleland's decision in the Fortland cases was made known. Since the order closing Portland's seloons on Sunday was issued there has been a great deal of speculation as to what the mayor here would do. Oppon-ents of the liquor business feared that this place might become the rendezvous on Sunday of all Portland's thirsty thousands and the place be overrun. Consequently they urged the mayor to close the saloons here. Iduor men, on the other hand, prom-ised the strictest order would be main-tained and urged the increase in busi-ness that would follow if the mayor took no action at all. The mayor re-fused to discuss his intentions with either faction, and nothing was known of his policy until today when he issued an order that saloons and other places where drinks are sold must be closed tomorrow.
