Closing Out Shoe Stock.

The "Korrect Shape Shoe Store," at 293 Morrison street, is being turned into a specialty shoe store by E. W. Skinner, general agent for the Pacific coast of the Burt & Packard factory at Boston. All that is necessary to do this is to close out the stock of ladies' shoes. This is being done in a hurry by forced sale and when it is over the stock of Burt & Packard shoes will be greatly enlarged. The guaranteed line of patent leather shoes for men, known as the "Burrojap," has been a mark of distinction for the Burt & Packard factory and brought the Korrect Shape Shoe Store many a customer it would never have had without it. Burt & Packard have been well known in this country as manufacturers of men's shoes only for 50 years, but only recently have they seen fit to open an agency in Portland. Owing to the phenomenal increase in sales, the management of the Korrect Shape Shoe Store has decided to close out the ladies' shoe stock and handle only men's shoes. Closing Out Shoe Stock.

several hundred at bay with a loaded shotgun before he was captured through the aid of a preacher.

Seal sat in his home with a loaded shotgun and vehemently shouted that he would kill any one that dared enter the gata. The police, fearing that he might carry his threat into execution and not only kill one person but many, because of the large number of spectators crowded into the street, refrained from entering. and placed Seal under arrest, locking him in the women's cell in the city jail. The prisoner succeeded in freeing himself and, going to his home, prepared for the two hours' siege by providing himself with a shotgun loaded with nucleon. The police were notified of Seal's action and Chief Bateman went at once to the Seal home, where he found Seal ready for him. An effort was made to get him to come out, but this he flatly refused to do. Then an attempt was made to enter the yard but Seal drew up his gun, crying that he would shoot the first man that tried to enter.

Seal sat in his home with a loaded shotgun and vehamently shouted that he would kill any one that dared enter the gate. The police, fearing that he might carry his threat into execution and not only kill one person but many, because of the large number of spectators crowded into the street, refrained from entering. At last, through the efforts of Rev. T. E. Elliott and others, Seal agreed to surrender, provided he was allowed ball and was not taken to jail.

Broke Out of Jail.

Early yesterday morning Seal started out with the avowed intention of collecting sufficient evidence against the saloons of the city to file a case against them for keeping open on Sundays. It is said he visited a number of saloons, in which he took one or more drinks. Shortly after noon he went to the home of J. E. Harris. Mrs. Seal, who recently returned from a trip to California, was in the Harris home. Seal, it is alleged, started a quarrel with his wife. The police were at once called.

Wilson, a well-known local fected Haywood most pregnantly—he newspaper man, will leave tomorrow for avoided or slurred over altogether. And avoided or slurred over altogether. And all the time he made the impression of a man who had failed to gain the intellectual sympathy of his jury. The 12 jurymen trying the case all are essentially and altogether western men. They are frontiersmen, hard-bitten in the life of the frontier, believing in the methods of the frontier, and be-lieving in the type of men it has pro-duced. And Darrow is intellectually the product of a great city. His view of industrial conditions is the view of a city man, believing in the alleviating benefits of anarchy, watered down by gentle words and pink lemonade altruisms. And in talking to his jury the thing he seemed to miss was the grave impression made upon the jury, not by the allegations that Haywood had been concerned with the killing of men, but in the secret, unwarned methods of that killing.

Point Darrow Missed.

rif a man comes to me," said one frontiersman to me yesterday who was friendly to Haywood in the beginning of this case, "and tells me that he is going to shoot me on sight—why, that's all right. The one of us that gets the drop first wins out. If he don't—well, he takes company to hell with him. But hiding a bomb in my gatepost, or dropping arsenic into my milk—why, that's not American."

That last word seemed to impress him greatly. "That's not American." he repeated. And the point Clarence Darrow missed in talking to his jury this morning was just that. The crime charged against them was "not American." And he was talking to essentially an American jury. But he talked to his jury as though it was a jury of Chicago packing house hands.

These jurymen were men of their hands—sun-baked. hard-gritted, deepbitten men, small farmers, ranch owners mostly, who thought for themselves and believe above everything in the individual freedom of individual Americans. And this morning Clarence Darrow bellowed at them as though they were a parcel of emigrants, fresh and bewildered, from Ellis island. And all the time he abused and reviled Orchard.

"This monumental liar," he called him "this leper." this "shoe-string."

the time he abused and reviled Orchard. Calls Grehard a Leper.

"This monumental liar," he called him. "this leper." this "shoe-string gambler." He implicated the mine-owners time and again in continued efforts to wreck the Western Federation. He alleged that the explosion in the Vindicator mine was a "pure accident." He spoke of Pettibone as "a lighthearted, good-natured citizen of Denver: the friend of every dog and child and cat in the place."

"A simple gentleman selling clothes wringers." A happy-Hooligan fellow, he called him, "who was always ready to help anybody."

Pettibone, Darrow said, had supplied the sawed-off shotguns for Moyer and Orchard when they were to Ouray together. He admitted that Orchard had gone to Ouray with Moyer as a "guard." He got rather complexed explaining how it was Orchard had gone with Moyer. He was vague in his facts and his dates and his places, and he had to turn often and consult Richardson who, after all, has outclassed Darrow altogether. He talked like a man who had never gripped his case, he falled altogether to grip his jury and he left the defense at 12 o'clock a little weaker than it was at 16 o'clock when he started.

KEEP COOL

Electric Fans FOR SUMMER COMFORT

No matter how hot it may be, cooling breezes are at your command by the twist of a switch.

In the home, in the office, or in the store, the ELECTRIC FAN is ever a boon, a comfort, a luxury at a trifling cost.

In up-to-date stores, during warm weather, a number of fans are kept going day and night, making the establishment so equipped more comfortable for and attractive to patrons. The cost of this service is so small that there is really no excuse for its omission.

A 16-inch ELECTRIC FAN can be operated at a cost not to exceed one cent an hour and a 12inch FAN can be run for even less.

The new model ELECTRIC FAN is specially adapted to use in private residences and offices. It may be carried to any room and attached to any convenient lamp socket. Fans on sale at the company's Supply Depart-

How Can You Do It

Is a question often asked of us and easily explained. We buy our diamonds from people who need the money. We have a broker in New York always on the lookout for "snaps," and when we buy from importers we buy for cash, not on 8-12 months' credit, therefore buy cheaper than others do.
