LONE CENTENARIAN BURIED AT ASTORIA

Rose Storey, Who Was a Domestic Almost to the End and Who Loved Poor Children.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
 Astoria, Or., June 22.—The funeral of the late Rose Storey was held yesterday afternoon from Paul's funeral parlors. Rev. C. C. Rarick of the Methodist church officiated. Interment was in Greenwood cemetery.

Rose Storey of Seaside, who died at St. Mary's hospital Friday morning, aged 100 years, left Portland over 20 years ago, and had resided at Seaside hence till her death. On her arrival here she went to work for a private family, who left there one year after, leaving her almost destitute. After working around, doing washing mostly, she became housekeeper for a family at Seaside and worked there for many years. About five years ago she became a county charge and two months ago was brought here to the hospital as a county patient. What little money she used to earn she spent in charity, buying useful articles for children. She was never married and was very eccentric. A subscription was taken up by residents of Seaside for her burial. Among Rose Storey's eccentricities was reticence concerning her past life, and hence practically nothing is known of a life which from its great length alone must be of interest to this generation.

TOO DRUNK TO TELL WHICH WAS HIS GRIP

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
 Hood River, June 22.—Although Tony Ferrati, an Italian laborer, who was arrested here yesterday, had a grip in which was $50 in gold belonging to another man, he was unaware of the fact until the city marshal opened it and produced the money. Ferrati was put off the train for being drunk about a mile below the Hood River station, and when he left the car he took the grip with him. His loss was not discovered until the train reached The Dalles, when the agent at Hood River was notified by telegraph and instructed to take an engine that was here and go in pursuit of Ferrati. The latter saved the engine crew and city marshal, who was aboard the engine, a trip in quest of him by appearing at the station just as they were getting ready to pull out. Search revealed the money in one corner of a suit case he was in possession of, wrapped up in paper, in the shape of three $20 gold pieces. If found to have had bearings on the train of his own, it is said, Ferrati will be released, as it is thought he took the suit case by mistake while he was drunk.

ROLLING ROCK BEARS BOY DOWN MOUNTAIN

Grover Longmire Probably Fatally Injured on Rainier's West Slope—Started Rock Himself.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
 Tacoma, Wash., June 22.—Grover Longmire, the 14-year-old son of Cain Longmire, and a grandson of the late noted pioneer, James Longmire, was injured so badly in an accident on the west slope of Mount Rainier Sunday that he will probably die. The Longmires live at Longmire Springs, seven miles from the foot of the Nisqually glacier. Sunday the child guided Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Bridges of Tacoma, through the woods and up the raging Nisqually river from the Springs to the point where the river bursts in a streak of foam from the glacier. After spending an hour sightseeing they started on their return. As they were descending a steep incline the boy climbed upon a large boulder that lay in his path. The stone loosened and went crashing down the hill to the Nisqually river, hurling the child forward and beneath it. The boy landed alongside a large stone, which partially protected him from the rolling projectile he had started. The rock passed completely over the boy, but striking the larger stone beside him, barely touched his body. This touch was sufficient, nevertheless, to break one of his thigh bones, fracture his leg and inflict internal injuries. Bridges watched by the boy while his wife went four miles through the woods to get a doctor. The boy was carried home and word sent to Eatonville, 28 miles distant, for the nearest physician.

CHEHALIS WANTS EVERYTHING PAVED

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
 Chehalis, Wash., June 22.—The Chehalis city council has let the contract to Anderson & Robinson of this city for the construction of a macadamized street of crushed rock on Cascade avenue for a distance of about 5,000 feet. The job will aggregate close to $13,000. A resolution for the improvement of Frindle street from Market to connect with the Trawway addition, an improvement that will cost about $5,000, was introduced. Chehalis citizens and the council have begun a campaign for more street improvements than ever before.

At the Citizens' club meeting last night a project was considered for a general street improvement plan to embrace every part of the city. The market street brick pavement proposition is moving along satisfactorily, and the friends of the project hope to have bids called for the work and contracts closed within 30 days. The estimated cost of this improvement is $20,000.

SCIENTIFIC MEN IN SESSION AT EUGENE

Interested Auditors Hear Learned Papers—Future Meeting Plans.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
 University of Oregon, Eugene, June 22.—The Oregon State Academy of Science is in session, with about 60 members present and a considerable attendance of interested auditors. The opening day was filled with interesting features.

J. F. Boyard, an instructor in the biological department of the university, delivered an address on "The Structure and Movements of Protists." Professor W. P. Boynton followed with an address on "A Large Electro-magnet." Professor Boynton is at the head of the department of physics.

The faculty of the university tendered a lunch to the members of the organization at noon, which was very greatly enjoyed.

The most important lecture in the afternoon was by Professor Orin E. Stafford, head of the department of chemistry, who gave a general resume of the recent developments in chemistry.

This was followed with the reading of a senior thesis, "A Demonstration of 'Leaking' and another address on "Air Hammer Drills," by A. C. Terrill, head of the department of mining at the university.

This meeting at Eugene will probably become a regular affair, for the academy is planning to hold one of its meetings at Corvallis each year and one here. Ordinarily they hold a meeting each month, most of them at Portland.
