

WIND BLEW WITH HURRICANE FORCE

Norwegian Steamer Finn Narrowly Escaped Foundering Off South Coast.

ARRIVED LAST NIGHT WITH CEMENT CARGO

Sister Ship of the Mathilda, Which Left Orient Today for Portland Under Charter to Load Lumber for Return Cargo, Now in Harbor.

The Norwegian steamer Finn narrowly escaped foundering in a fearful hurricane that caught her off Buenos Ayres on her way to this coast from London.

The Finn arrived here last night and berthed at Greenwharf dock to discharge 16,000 barrels of cement, then to proceed to Tacoma to load lumber for export to Australia.

The Finn is in command of Captain Jacob Laugesen, who took charge just before her departure from London. She belongs to Jacob Christensen of Bergen, who also owns the steamers Mathilda, Hercules, Lecl and Oscar, all of them now in Pacific waters.

In speaking of the Finn's voyage from Europe, Chief Officer Alik Joell stated that the storm encountered near Buenos Ayres was the worst he had ever experienced since going to sea many years ago.

Coming up the coast nothing occurred to create cause for alarm until the vessel was in five days, which is the average time for a tramp.

BOZORTH FAMILY HOLDS THIRD ANNUAL REUNION

The Bozorth family held the third annual reunion yesterday at Woodland, Washington, in the oak grove on the old homestead settled in the early fifties.

In 1846 Squire Bozorth, with a family of 11 children, arrived in Oregon, lived for a time in Washington, county, Oregon, then went to Vancouver, Washington, and later took up a homestead on Lewis river.

Four large steamers have been engaged by the government to load coal at Baltimore or the Virginia ports with Pocahontas or equal high-grade coal for shipment to the coast.

The war department denies that the business is due to the Japanese interest, asserting that the coal is to be shipped around the Horn in order to prevent a fuel shortage this winter at the navy yards, where the supplies have run low.
