

HEAR AFTER ASSASSINATION TO TAKE PUBLIC ORCHARD'S THREATS

Easterly Admits That Guilty Knowledge of Crime Was Concealed by Him.

SLOW PROGRESS MADE BY HAYWOOD DEFENSE

John Nugent and Edgar Wilson Stay Quarrel With Darrow—Attorneys Still Seek to Prove Orchard a Liar.

(By Hugh O'Neill, special commissioner for Denver Post and Oregon Journal.)
Boise, Idaho, June 28.—A steaming hot morning, with a cool breeze lifting occasionally from somewhere, and a court room almost vacant of spectators and "Bill" Easterly, once of Cripple Creek, is on the stand to call Harry Orchard a liar. If it goes on as it has started the defense will be calling somebody to prove that Orchard used to eat peas with his knife and often neglected to have his hands manicured. And by that time counsel for defense may be denuded of two of its members. Edgar Wilson and John Nugent were not present with the defending counsel yesterday and they are not present today.

When Darrow had ended the examination of "Bill" Easterly and Borah had wiped him out as a creditable witness, John Nugent said this or something like this to Darrow:

"Putting a man like that on the stand putting a noose around Haywood's neck."

Also he has told Clarence Darrow that the nonunion miners in Victor were often rude to the union men. And the day after the independence depot explosion he was at a meeting in Victor.

Fireworks Begin.

"A man called Hammond," said Mr. Easterly, "made a few remarks. He said the independence explosion was a dastardly act of the Western Federation. He said that if the citizens did not take that in hand and hang 50 or more and run the rest out of the district that the citizens would get their just dues. Then," said Mr. Easterly, smiling, "the fireworks began. I had a revolver. I got a bit excited myself."

"Then," said Clarence Darrow, "where did you go?" and the next moment he tried to stop Easterly in his answer, but Easterly finished at a gallop.

"Then," he said, "I went home and got my gun and on my way home I called in and saw Steve Adams and told Steve Adams of the threats that had been made."

Now the defense is anxious to keep the name of Steve Adams out of this case and it is more than anxious not to have its own witness displaying any particular friendship for him.

However, Easterly had been too quick for Darrow.

Thereafter he testified to the beauty of Pettibone's character, to his great friendship for Western Federation men and to his generous hospitality. Then Darrow, with slow impressiveness:

"Now, Mr. Easterly, did you ever at any time or place have any conversation with Harry Orchard or bear any conversation of his, with reference to committing any crime or act of violence?"

And Easterly answered him with equally deliberate impressiveness, pausing well between each word:

"No, sir, I did not."

Had Letter From Orchard.
"I had a letter from Harry Orchard," said Mr. Easterly, "written from Caldwell in December, 1905. But I have not got that letter. The subject of the talk was in Pueblo with reference to my going into the life insurance business with him. He said that he was in Caldwell selling mining stock. He said that Caldwell would be a nice field for that kind of work. He wanted to know if I would quit the mines and take up the life insurance work with him. I replied to him, but I didn't keep a copy of the letter. I wrote me again, but I haven't got that letter either."

Shortly afterwards Borah took the witness.

"You say that in August, 1905, Orchard told you and Davis and Parker that he would kill Steuenberg?"

"Yes, sir."

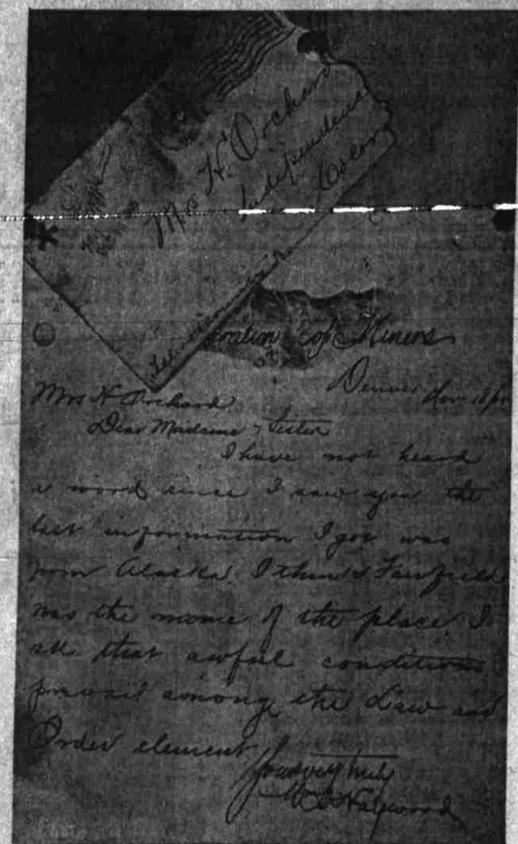

"You understood that he was making a statement in your presence that he was going to kill the governor of this state, and you believed that he meant it?"

"I was not well enough acquainted with the man to know whether he intended to carry out his remarks or not."

"Well, you were impressed by that remark?"

"Well, yes."

"Did you make any reply?"

Facsimile of Letter Sent to Mrs. Orchard by Haywood White Orchard Was in Idaho.

And it was not until a year after the governor's death that you did tell any one of that threat, and then you told it to the counsel for the defense?"

"No, sir," said Mr. Easterly.

Easterly Loses Confidence.
Clarence Darrow, who had been lounging in his chair, stood up and leaned across the back of it. Mr. Easterly was drooping slightly and losing a little of his confidence. Borah has a way of asking brief questions briefly, when he gets into action cross-examining a man he has something of a galling-gun effect, and he doesn't "pump lead" either. He lights for an eyeshot. After those admissions about Steuenberg that had been hammered out of him so sharply, Mr. Easterly's voice was not so loud and high, and his manner was not so cheerful. But then, of course, a man who takes the witness-stand in a courtroom with the intention of impressing a jury with his own simple honesty and integrity, and then admits the "guilty knowledge" of the intention of another man to assassinate a governor of one of the states of America, cannot well feel very comfortable. Mr. Easterly's business had been to tell the jury that Harry Orchard was a liar, and to make the judge believe Easterly. The jury probably does believe that Harry Orchard is somewhat of a liar, but after those admissions of Easterly's to Borah the judge will not be likely to disbelieve in Orchard on the word of Easterly. The man who goes for equity must go with clean hands.

Operators Accuse Employers of Accepting Public's Coin for Service Not Given.

(General Special Service.)
San Francisco, June 28.—Although the Western Union company claims to be handling all of the business tendered it and officials declare that the company is keeping up with its work, the striking telegraphers allege that instead of sending messages received out by wire they are being mailed.

It is claimed by the operators that less than 400 messages are being sent out of the Postal offices here each day while the usual number exceeds 2,000, and that less than 100 are received from the east daily, while the usual number is approximately 8,000.

Both sides are confident, the operators declaring that the companies will meet their terms, while the employers declare that the strike is simmering out.

Washington, June 28.—Labor Commissioner Neill has returned to Washington presumably in connection with the trouble between the operators and telegraph companies.

CATTLEMEN ACCUSED OF ILLEGAL FENCING

Montana Grand Jury Probes History of Land Grabbing by the Beef Barons.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Helena, Mont., June 28.—The federal grand jury, which has been in session here for nearly two weeks, reported to Federal Judge Hunt today and was discharged. Twenty-nine indictments were returned, and of these 16 were made public. Warrants were issued in other cases and turned over to the marshal for service.

Some rather startling results are anticipated. It being understood that included in the list are some of the leading cattlemen of the state, charged with fencing public lands.

Of the indictments made public, the most important are those of Antoine Nemesah, charged with murder on the Flathead reservation, and Hugh Bucher and Fred Nelson, charged with theft of postal supplies destined for the postmaster at Spokane, from a wrecked car on the Great Northern. The others are minor in nature, such as introducing liquor on the reserve, larceny and criminal assault.

NEW PAPER MILL TRUST FORMING

Twenty-Five Plants to Combine in Such Way as to Be Beyond Sherman Law.

(Journal Special Service.)
Milwaukee, Wis., June 28.—Another paper mill trust is said to be under way. It will embrace 25 mills in Wisconsin, Michigan and Minnesota. It is planned on the lines of the International Harvester company and will thereby dodge the Sherman law, its projectors hope.

An official of the old Memorial Paper company who is interested in the new plans said:

"If the company is organized along the lines now contemplated it will be a manufacturing and owning company after the style and character of the International Harvester company. It will in no way be in conflict with the federal anti-trust law. It will not be a sales combination as was the General Paper company."

Up to the present time no definite move has been made for the formation of the company as all depends on reaching an agreement among the manufacturers regarding the values of the different plants.

Unsatisfactory Prophecy.

Rochester Union and Advertiser.
The Rev. Benjamin Harper prophesied that on Wednesday, June 5, 1907, the water in and around New York city would be turned to blood for one day only. The prophecy was not fulfilled. It is getting so that it is impossible to rely on our prophecies any more.
