

VISITING DIVINE LIKES PORTLAND

Salt Lake City Minister Sees Element of Stability in Rose City.

REV. ELMER I. GOSHEN VERY ENTHUSIASTIC

Of Himself Noted Guest Has Little to Say—His Aim is the Uplifting of All Humanity—is a Hard Worker.

"You have an interesting city here," says Rev. Elmer I. Goshen of Salt Lake City, who is to preach tomorrow morning at the First Congregational church. He says moreover that he sees in Portland an element of stability which means much in the associations which gather round the rising generation, which before long will make traditions and sentiments such as have hallowed New England, and these, he says, will make it indeed the "greater west."

Of himself Mr. Goshen has little to say, disclaiming any talents and genius other than that of hard work. "Yes, my work is growing," he says. "I should be much disappointed if it did not grow. With the influx of new life and energy into Salt Lake the city is fast becoming a modern western town and the old things are passing."

Interesting Personage. He is an interesting man, this keen, virile and large-voiced preacher, essentially modern, intensely alive to the problems of the day and full of the message that he has for mankind. He gives one the impression that he has accepted the largest creed that he could find as a foundation for his work, but that he is himself so much larger than any creed that it becomes an incidental thing. It is the dawning of the new day in Christianity that he sees, and that it is rushing to its full-orbed day he fully believes.

We may not live, he says, to see the actual blending of all creeds and all theologies which are based on fundamental truth, but already he feels and sees the breaking down of barriers, the fuller grasp of essentials and the linking of impotent traditions. This he finds not in any one section of the country, but everywhere, and with optimistic faith he looks to the future for its fulfillment.

All Make Religion. "Don't be afraid," he says, with a characteristic gesture of his long, energetic and forced hand, "the universe is not going to fall to pieces. For, look, he says, 'the inherent right of a man is to do his duty. No man shall tell me what I must think. He may guide me, he may be to me a savior or a prophet, but when it comes to its last issue I must do the thinking and the believing myself. But that does not mean that the gospel of Jesus of Nazareth is going to fall—never. It is the gospel that the world wants and needs."

"What the great stream of humanity needs and waits to be told is that no man can be harmed except by the things that he lets into his heart. Nobody else can harm him. He can only harm himself."

"All the religion that we have is what we are living by— isn't it? No more—no less." Mr. Goshen has a growing church in a growing city. He admits that between 200 and 500 Methodists come to hear him every Sunday. He says that they come because they are disappointed in the things they have had, and something that helps them to live better for that week.

"But he never preached a sensational sermon in his life," says his friend, Haven't time," replies Mr. Goshen. "There's too much to be said—too many big things."

SAYS HE DIDN'T SEEK POSITION

Rev. H. C. Collins Takes Exception to Published Letter by Dr. Morrison.

The editorial letter by Rev. A. A. Morrison, D. D., which appeared in this month's issue of Trinity Chimes, and which was in part reprinted in the Journal of June 25, brings the following letter from Rev. H. C. Collins, who was chosen delegate to the general convention, a position for which Dr. Morrison was also a candidate:

"It was for the people of Trinity church and not for the Church of Oregon that the account of the convention of the diocese of Oregon was printed in Trinity Chimes. Since it has become generally circulated, I want to say to Trinity people especially, and Oregon churchmen generally that I did not seek the position of delegate to the general convention. I am opposed as Dr. Morrison knows, to parties. I am an independent. For this reason I esteemed it an especial honor to be desired by the convention to represent it at Richmond. It was not, and never has been a question of Trinity church, for Trinity is represented among the delegates; it was the question of Dr. Morrison, and the convention did not choose him to represent it."

"I voted for Dr. Morrison throughout. I believed him an able representative, but the result of the vote of the convention showed me and should convince him that he was not wanted to represent its members at the general convention, and he should gracefully abide by its decision. May I say, being as independent a churchman as himself, in broad, perhaps—that there was no question of churchmanship, as I told him at the time—no question of churchmanship."

"As an independent, not in the councils of the various schools or parties, I am convinced there is a misunderstanding on both sides. That Dr. Morrison is bitter in his judgments and unjust in his suspicions I am sure."

"As one who has generally held his point of view, and in this last convention voted for him, I think his party spirit and bitter antagonism was more marked than that of those differing from him; that his discourtesy to those differing from and opposed to him, his alignment of party against party, his personal attacks upon members of the convention—these caused his defeat. Were Dr. Morrison broad, liberal, open and frank in his acts in convention, courteous in his bearing, tolerant to the opinions of others, with his great abilities he could have anything in the gift of the diocese. Instead, he is cold, intolerant, bitter in invective, very partisan, supporting party against party. He has built up a following, not always as happy in his choice as he might have been, antagonized those differing from him until they have left him alone, to his splendid isolation. I for one heartily regret it is so."

MARQUAM GRAND IS SAFEST PUBLIC PLACE

City Officials Grant Extension of Time to Management to Make Minor Improvements.

Upon the showing of the Marquam Grand theatre management of the improvement it had made in fire protection the executive board yesterday granted a 45 days' extension of the license in which to complete the requirements now lacking. Fire Marshal Roberts and Building Inspector Spencer made a complete examination of the Marquam several days ago and found that the theatre people had complied with the requests of the authorities in all but a few minor instances. These, it was explained, were due to the inability to secure materials. The Marquam Grand is now believed by the officials to be the safest public building in the city.

NO PARKING OF SHAVER STREET

Majority of Property-Owners Object and Council Rescinds Resolution Formerly Passed.

A resolution recently passed by the council ordering the parking of Shaver street between Williams avenue and Commercial street was rescinded at the meeting of the council street committee yesterday afternoon. Dr. L. M. Davis, president of the Multnomah Improvement club, appeared before the committee to protest the parking on behalf of a majority of the property-owners in the affected section. Those opposed to parking contended that the street would be too narrow.

Everybody in the district, it seems, favors hard-surface pavement, but they are strongly divided on the parking question. County Judge Webster and County Commissioner Lightner submitted a communication calling attention to the weakened condition of the Burnside street bridge. City Attorney McNary will give an opinion as to whether the city or county must proceed with the improvement.

CAT-AND-DOG TIME ABOARD THE SPENCER

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Hood River, Or., June 28.—A bison square, who had been at Hood River during the strawberry season, caused a commotion on the steamer Spencer yesterday by boarding the boat with a small sized menagerie on her person. None of the animals was visible until a search was made when it was found that she had put four good-sized kittens and three young dogs in one of her bundles and tied it up. Passengers were apprised of their presence by a yelping, meowing and scratching and insisted on an investigation. The bundle was then untied by the deck hands and the hereditary foes separated for the remainder of the trip.
