

MORE BATTLESHIPS ARE SENT TO PACIFIC COAST

Navy Department Decides to Form Additional Cruiser Division and Fine Fighting Machines Are Ordered to Take New Stations.

Armored Cruiser Tennessee, Which Will Come to the Pacific.

(Special Service.)
Washington, July 2.—The navy department has decided to send the armored cruisers Tennessee and Washington to the Pacific coast for the purpose of forming an additional cruiser division.
Two other ships that will go to make up this Pacific division are the South Dakota, and California, now nearing completion in San Francisco. The South Dakota is at the yards of the Union Iron Works, and the California has been turned over for completion at the Mare Island navy yard.
The Tennessee and Washington are now in attendance at the Bordeaux Maritime exposition to represent the United States navy.
Probably the Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Colorado and Maryland, all splendid armored cruisers, will also be sent from the Asiatic station.
Rumor says that within a year a preponderance of the battleship power will be concentrated in the Pacific. What ever may be the future policy of the administration, this program is not acknowledged. It is likely, however, that the Pacific fleet, within a few months, will be increased by at least six swift cruisers of large tonnage and that four of these will be withdrawn from the orient. They will not be anchored in some snug harbor, but will cruise about some give their commanders an opportunity to study evolutions and their crews to gain proficiency in target practice.

Ambassador Aoki, when asked regarding the rumor of the change of ships to the Pacific coast, declined to comment on it, but admitted that this country has a perfect right to place its fleets wherever it sees fit. It is declared by officials that the concentrating of ships on the coast has no significance in regard to the Japanese war rumors.
One report said today that all the new battleships are to be concentrated in the Pacific as soon as possible, but this is not generally credited.

ENGINE KILLS OSTRANDER—WAS FIRST THOUGHT MURDER

Struck by the Pilot Bar at Ostrander—Was First Thought Murder.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Kelso, Wash., July 2.—A logger from Ostrander named Tom Fay was killed at the Northern Pacific depot here in a mysterious manner at about midnight Sunday night. The coroner's jury has rendered a verdict that he met his death by being struck by the pilot bar on the engine of the iron road freight which passed through Kelso at 12:30 a. m. From the position of the body when found and the nature of the wound, many had inferred that Fay was murdered.
Young Pessley and Sugars of Castle Rock ran down to the depot to catch the 2 o'clock train for Castle Rock and found the body of a man lying face downward on the platform, the body hanging over the platform and the feet between the rails. They dragged the body up on the platform just in front of an approaching train. The coroner was immediately summoned. The skull above the left ear was crushed in but with the skin scarcely broken.
The body was readily identified as that of Tom Fay, for he had come to town Saturday and Sunday evening and, being drunk, had been ordered out of town by Mayor Morris.
Fay had been working for E. C. Collins at Ostrander since Christmas. Saturday he drew over $300 but had returned the sum to the bookkeeper and had then borrowed $5 from him. He was well known to the loggers in this section but has no known relatives.

ITALIAN SLEUTH TO JOIN MONKS' BAND

(Special Service.)
Rome, July 2.—Capesuto, a well-known officer of the carabinieri, who is considered an Italian Sherlock Holmes and who was mainly responsible for the numerous arrests recently of members of the Camorra, after the failure of the police to suppress that society, has decided to join the Benedictines at Monte Carrino and become a monk. Formalities of entry into the order have been completed, including the donation of $2,000. His decision was due to his aged and ailing mother, who has been worried to the point of death by her son's risk, his murder having been decreed by the Camorra tribunal. Capesuto will retire from the world lest his mother's death be hastened.

SHAYEN JAW TELLS BAD MAN'S SECRET

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Spokane, Wash., July 2.—What is thought to have been a plan to kill the jailer and gain freedom was nipped at Condonully, Washington, when E. Parsons, sent to take John McLain to Walla Walla for life for killing William Cameron, entered the cage and noticed McLain had been shaved. He was asked where he got his razor but refused to say a word.
The men began searching and found a piece of spring steel sharpened to a razor edge, and hid on a shelf in the cage. Under his couch was found a chunk of steel. When these articles were found the Indian began grumbling and cursing, but refused to tell how he got them.

TEXAS SOLONS RESIGN SEATS TO SAVE RAILROAD PASSES

(Special Service.)
Fort Worth, Tex., July 2.—One effort not altogether expected of the new Texas anti-pass law, which became effective yesterday, is the resignations it is causing among members of the state legislature. The law does not apply to persons actually in the employ of railway companies and members of legislature who have been serving also as local attorneys for the railways are now resigning their membership in the legislature in order to retain their railroad passes.

One of the most prominent of these is Judge T. D. D. Cobbs of San Antonio, who was one of the last legislators and who is attorney for the Southern Pacific railroad. Judge Cobbs frankly says he resigned rather than give up his passes. And he says:
"When I voted for the free pass bill I knew that I was voting myself out of office, but I obeyed the wishes of the people and my platform. I am not a railroad attorney, but my connection with the land department of the railroad necessitates the frequent use of his passes to conduct its business. I did not resign until I ascertained that there would be no special session of the legislature."

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)
Wilsonville, Or., July 2.—Scarcely a whole bone was left in the body of Arthur Molstrom, who was killed here Sunday by a fall from the top of the trestle of the Portland & Salem electric line bridge. He was at work at the top of the bridge and in his fall struck a stringer every 12 feet on his way to the earth, a distance of 109 feet. His broken body was caught by a scow that happened to be directly below. Death was almost instantaneous.
Dr. B. Giesy of Aurora, Undertaker Holman and the coroner from Oregon City were called. The remains were removed to Oregon City at once and will be shipped to his parents at Salt Lake. A brother of Molstrom lives at Casadero, on the O. W. P. line.
