TACOMA CONGRESSMAN RECALLS WHEN PEOPLE DIETED ON CLAMS

Francis W. Cushman of Tacoma, one of Washington's congressmen, is registered at the Portland hotel. In addition to being one of the best speakers in the lower house of congress and a close personal friend of President Roosevelt, Mr. Cushman is also rated one of the best story tellers in the country. He always has a fresh supply ready whenever he meets congenial company, and last night was one of the occasions.

Perhaps his most famous tale is known as the "clam story." It deals with the hard times experienced by residents of Tacoma after the panic of 1893, when the chief diet of the Tacomans was clams. The people did not wait for the clams to be brought to them, either, but went out to the beach and dug for themselves.

"Clams!" said Mr. Cushman. "Why, we used to eat clams until our stomachs rose and fell with the tide."

When asked about the story last night, Congressman Cushman said:

"Everybody seems to get a lot of fun out of that story, but to me it is the most tragic affair of my life. There was nothing funny about it in those days, and it comes nearer expressing the truth than anything else I can think of."

Congressman Cushman was the orator of the day at Vancouver yesterday. He will spend several days in Portland.
