BURNS CHAMPION WITHOUT EFFORT

Canadian Lands a Knockout Blow in Two Minutes and Eight Seconds.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

San Francisco, July 5.—Two minutes and eight seconds was the exact time required by Tommy Burns at Colma yesterday afternoon to find an open place in Bill Squire's guard, drive a straight arm punch to the latter's jaw, then stand over him while Referee Jim Jeffries counted off the 10 seconds which gave Burns the heavyweight championship of the world and $18,000 in gold.

Tommy Burns, who won championship from Bill Squires yesterday in one round.

Squires was helpless from the start and it was apparent a few moments after the gong sounded which sent both men to the center of the ring that it was only a question of time before Burns would prove his mastership of the arena.

The end, however, came quicker than was expected by the 9,000 persons who filled the grandstand and surrounded the ropes. The audience represented several western states, and people from many of the California towns were present. Nat Goodwin was also one of the spectators who paid all the way from $2 to $20 a seat for the privilege of seeing scarcely more than a dozen f nts and blows struck before the Australian was sent to the mat and the fight finished.

Challenge to Winner.

Both men entered the ring a few minutes before 2 o'clock. They advanced to the center, shook hands and retired to their corners. The usual announcements were made, Joe Rogers challenging the winner for $5,000, then the gong sounded and the Australian champion and the Canadian stepped briskly to the center.

Squires began an aggressive lead at once, feinting several times, but doing nothing effective against his antagonist who sparred, held his ground and waited for the opening which he wanted. Ten seconds after the two had put up their guards, Squires was lying on the mat.

Burns had shot a well-directed blow on Squires' jaw after breaking down the Australian's defense. Jeffries stood over him and began to count, but Squires rose to his feet in four seconds and the same tactics were resumed as at the start.

The two rushed together in a clinch. Jeffries separated them. There was another close encounter and Burns' powerful right landed again on the point of the Australian's jaw. For the second time Jeffries stood over him and began counting and the second time Squires got up and stood unsteadily on his feet.

Burns Was Not Touched.

Burns was untouched and had reached the warming-up point where he was eager for faster work, but an exhibition of his skill and staying powers and all the other lines upon which to judge of his work were denied the large audience. The fight was over a few seconds after Squires had recovered himself and made his last stand.

Squires looked fagged. His arms after the second time down lacked the rigidity and activeness that characterized them at the start and Burns quickly took advantage of his opponent's helplessness.

Burns immediately began a fierce aggressive battle. He followed Squires about the ring, forcing him to exchange blows, and landed on him at will. To the audience it was plainly apparent that if the first round was completed, Squires could not last through the second.

But the second did not come. Burns waited his chance, feinted once or twice, brought down Squires' guard, then with the power of a blacksmith's stroke drove a crashing blow to Squires' chin, felling him in a heap on the canvas.

Referee Jeffries counted 10 and the ring was immediately surrounded by hundreds of spectators who wished to shake hands with the winner. Squires lay on his face the full time and then was carried by his seconds to the dressing rooms.

The total receipts for the day amounted to practically $27,000. Of this amount Burns will be paid $18,000 as his share of the prize money. Squires will receive 24 per cent of the gate money.

Los Angels, July 5.—Walter McCredie carried a package of firecrackers in his pocket yesterday. He exploded a part of them at the forenoon game and finished the parcel during the afternoon gambol on the green by defeating Los Angeles the second time.

Portland's percentage in consequence took a noticeable hickey toward the .400 mark. Casey yesterday refused to live up to the reputation of his namesake and slugged everything that looked like a baseball in the afternoon contest. In both games he traveled all over the lot, nabbed everything in sight and came through with 12 chances and a clear skin. Groom held up his reputation in the afternoon and pitched Portland to a clean cut victory, Califf doing equally as well in the first encounter. The scores:

SPRINTER MAY NOT RUN AGAIN

Dan Kelly's Injured Leg Is Likely to Close His Year's Work.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

University of Oregon, Eugene, July 5.—Dan Kelly, Oregon's famous sprinter, is in Eugene suffering with a strained leg which he injured in Seattle. Kelly's limb is still far from being well and he was unable to go to his home in Baker City to run in the races in which he was advertised as the star attraction on the Fourth.

Dan Kelly, Oregon's famous sprinter, may be forced out of racing events this summer owing to an injured leg.

Kelly's leg is in such condition it is not likely he will participate in any other events during the summer. His plans are undetermined, but it is pretty well understood that he will return to the University of Oregon again this fall.

THOUSANDS SEE AQUATIC SPORTS

Vixen Wins Motor Boat Race —Yacht Event Goes to Skylark.

Yesterday's aquatic events were one of the most novel and interesting features of the Fourth of July celebration. The waterfront and harbor were gaily decorated and thousands of people lined the bridges and docks to witness the events.

Motor boats, row boats and indeed every kind of craft fussed busily in the stream carrying loads of sightseers. Before the races the decks of the big steamers in port were crowded. Those in charge of the sports had planned the details precisely for there was not a hitch and everything went as smoothly as could be desired.

The big event of the afternoon was the race between motor boats. The course was from the starter's boat, a short distance south of the Morrison street bridge north to a beacon in the river near the Portland Flouring mills, around which the boats must go and then return to Ross Island, round a stake boat, and then back to the judges' boat at the Morrison street bridge. The course was nearly eight miles in length and there was a good list of entries when the signal for the start was given.

The race was won by the Vixen, owned by J. E. Wolff, with the Flirt 14 seconds behind. The time made by the winner was 25 minutes and 18 seconds. Other boats finished in the order named: Silver Heels, third; Kittie, Teaser, Arrow, and Anita. The Zip, the other entry, did not finish, as she began to fill with water after covering a portion of the course.

The next race was pulled off at 3:30 between four 12-oared cutters from the cruiser Charleston. The course was from the starter's boat above the Morrison street bridge to the bow of the Charleston in the lower harbor. The race was won by the cutter in command of Boatswain's Mate Coughlan in 10 minutes and 22 seconds. The second race in the same cutters was won by the one in command of Rogers.

The yacht race was won by the Skylark, after a pretty contest. The course was from the Madison street bridge south to the lower end of Ross Island, where they rounded a stake boat, then back to the bridge and around a flag buoy.

The last race was between various kinds of boats from the Charleston. It was one of the most exciting races of the afternoon and there were 12 entries. Judges of the events were Lieutenant Tarrant and Midshipman Woodworth, of the Charleston, and W. A. Knight, L. V. Woodward and E. P. Young were starters.

PORTLAND LANDS ROWING HONORS

Portland carried off all honors in the senior fours yesterday at the Seattle regatta. The Portland crew was so far ahead at the finish that there was little to remind one that a race was in progress. Ten lengths ahead of the Vancouver crew, which finished second, was the distance. The time was 9:37.

Portland took one first and two seconds in the two days' racing, which is a better record than that carried away by any other club.

Glors upheld Portland's credit by taking in the senior singles, and Luders and Gloss also took second in the senior doubles.
