SPEED KING WILL FIGHT

Suit for Defamation of Character May Be Brought Against Instigators of Suit Against Him—Race Meet Declared a Fizzle.

Suit for criminal libel and defamation of character to be brought against those who have instigated the suit against him for obtaining money under false pretenses is threatened by Barney Oldfield, the automobile demon driver. Oldfield will not discuss the matter for publication, but refers the question to his attorney, C. G. Murphy. Mr. Murphy in turn maintains a discreet silence, stating that the question of damage is in the future. Friends of the racer, however, say that Oldfield has made up his mind to follow the famous maxim of General Grant and "fight it out if it takes all summer."

The district attorney's office evidently has lost interest in the suit against Oldfield, for yesterday an effort was made to have the case dropped on the ground that Oldfield had been punished enough. The complaining witnesses, however, hung to their contention, and the matter of the dismissal is still in statu quo.

Dealers Support Oldfield.

Prominent automobile dealers of the city have come to the support of Oldfield in his time of trouble, and yesterday afternoon depositions were taken by the district attorney's office concerning the opinion of the dealers regarding the most and relating the facts which made it unsuccessful. These depositions will be brought up at the preliminary hearing tomorrow morning and entered as evidence.

According to these dealers the race of July 3 was a failure, but not a fake, and the failure was caused by circumstances over which neither the dealers nor the managers of the meet had any control.

The unfortunate meet which has caused all the trouble was sanctioned by the Portland Automobile club at a meeting held on June 27, and a prominent automobile dealer last night. "The running race committee of the club held a meeting on that date at which were Lewis Russell, president of the club, J. B. Kelly, R. D. Inman, Dr. C. B. Brown, all members of the board of directors of the club, and several others had the proxy of H. M. Covey, another director.

Fizzle But Not a Fake.

"There is no doubt in the minds of anyone that the race was a fizzle, but it was in no sense a fake. The fizzle was due to unavoidable circumstances over which neither the dealers nor the managers of the meet had control. E. A. Moros, Oldfield's manager, made an honest effort to make the meet a success and had the best of the race, and every dealer in the city to enter cars for the various races advertised.

"These cars through various causes did not get there. The reason, therefore, that the meet fell down was because the entries scheduled did not arrive. That is the true cause of the failure of the race meet.

Oldfield himself was present at the meet and did not know until the hour of the race that the cars would not be there. For that reason he could not run the race as scheduled. The meet was too close to the former meet and the dealers worked a hardship on the race. They overestimated what they could do and failed.

"Again the rain spoiled the 50-mile race, the only feature on the local program. Three cars were entered in that race and were on hand stripped, ready to compete. They were a Pierce-Arrow, a Pope-Hartford and a Tourist machine. The rain prevented their running.

"In view of all these circumstances, therefore, the dealers do not consider that there was any shadow of a fake in the meet. It was a failure caused by unavoidable circumstances, but it was

THE COLONEL AMAZED AT NEW YORKER'S IDEA

Argument Offered by Easter ner Regarding Fourth Celebration Nearly Feazed Gallant Southerner— Ended Adjournment to Cafe for Mint Juleps.

By Chauncey Thomas.

"A great Fourth, sah! A great Fourth! A glorious Fourth!" exclaimed the Colonel as he sank into his chair in "The Colonel's corner" on the Hotel Portland veranda.

"The Fourth of July," said the New Yorker slowly, as he withdrew his cigar from his lips, "The Fourth of July should be celebrated with crepe. It should be the one day of American sorrow and chagrin."

"What's that?" demanded the Westerner, while the Colonel sat speechless.

"Simply this," continued the New Yorker, calmly. "The Fourth of July and all it stands for instead of freeing England from England in reality freed England from America. If it were not for the Fourth of July, America, the successful outcome of the American revolution, right today England and America would be one nation, with the capital in America. As it is, America extends over only about half the North American continent.

"If the revolutionary war had not been fought, or had not been won by the Americans, right today this nation of ours would include England, Scotland, Ireland, India, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, Egypt and all other present British possessions besides the United States, Alaska, the Philippines and other smaller places under both flags. Granting for the moment that such was the case, who there who could successfully maintain that the political control of such a vast domain would have remained long in London? It would long ago have shifted to this side of the Atlantic.

"The Fourth of July cost America the control of over half the English speaking world. But for the revolution America would by this time have absorbed England, just as Roman supremacy overhauled and at last dominated Greece. The Greek and serenely blew a large smoke ring. The Westerner stared, while the Colonel was plainly amazed.

Issue Most Remarkable.

"Indeed, sah, that is a most remarkable idea, sah. I never thought of it in that light, sah. I must consider it, sah."

"Do, do," replied the New Yorker, coolly. "The old idea of the American revolution is rapidly dying out. The New Yorker's opinion of the revolution of it that has lasted for over a century is not founded on fact; it grew up as a weed-idea, to coin a phrase, and the wrong teaching of the school histories, which were largely written and published in Boston, and Boston you know, is the hub of the universe. She won the revolutionary war, she did everything, don't you know."

"True, sah, true!" blurted out the Colonel. "If it had not been for Boston there probably would never have been a civil war."

"But more of that later," interposed an honest failure and Oldfield is entirely free from any suspicion of trickery or fraud."

Oldfield's preliminary hearing is scheduled for tomorrow morning in the municipal court before Judge Cameron.

HUNDREDS EXPECTED—THOUSANDS CAME

Cove's Fourth of July Changed by Rail Line to a Most Stupendous Affair.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Cove, Or., July 6.—It has been customary for Union Cove and La Grande to take turn about in the four-day celebration of the Fourth. This year it was Cove's turn, and, having hitherto prepared for a crowd of hundreds of people for each of the four days, prior to the advent of the railroad, she found her preparations for feeding the thousands who came in daily on the Oregon Central railway, beyond her capital, not equal to the emergency, sent out for enough extra provisions to feed all comers.

Besides the streams of private vehicles from all over the country, automobiles run all day from Union and La Grande, the Central railway collected

PIONEER OF LINN PAST FOUR SCORE

William Anderson a State Builder Since Fifty-Three.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

Albany, Or., July 6.—Linn county has lost another of its old pioneers in the death of William Perren Anderson, of Plainview, whose death occurred yesterday at the age of 84 years. He had a recurrent stroke of paralysis Saturday and remained unconscious to the last. The deceased was one of those old pioneers that came west in the early fifties and carved homes out of the wilderness. He had been identified with the upbuilding of the state ever since his advent.

The story of his life shows him to have been a man of sterling qualities and one who possessed all the strong traits of those early pioneers that crossed the plains with ox teams. He was born in Carroll county, Ky., on February 18, 1823. He moved with his parents to Daviess county, Iowa, in 1837, and was there married to Laura J. Land January 8, 1846.

After this he moved to Eddyville, Iowa, in 1848, and at that place in 1850 became a member of the Odd Fellows and transferred his membership to the Albany lodge in 1861. He was the oldest Odd Fellow in the county at the time of his death.

In 1853 he crossed the plains with an ox team and settled on a donation land claim about 12 miles south of Albany in the same year.

He leaves a wife and four children, Mrs. E. J. Arnold, of Tallman; R. B. Anderson, of Plainview; Mrs. C. G. Burkhardt, of Albany; and E. Anderson, of Plainview. The funeral was held today in Sand Ridge cemetery, Plainview.

CHINESE ARRESTED IN RAID ON JOINTS

The "Chinatown squad" consisting of Acting Detectives Kay and Klen, made a successful raid on a Chinese gambling joint at 131 Second street between Washington and Alder streets. Ten Chinamen were taken and released on a small bail.

A second raid was made on a place at 245 1/2 Couch street where two Chinamen and a white man were taken in custody for conducting a lottery. The charge placed against the white man, Frank Poland, was having lottery tickets in his possession.

At first the Chinamen refused to furnish bail for Poland, but when given the alternative of putting up $100 for the two or $75 for all three, after a lengthy discussion they decided they would risk the white man's bail in order to make a present saving of $25. A chest of tickets was also secured.
