

ALASKA TRADE OURS IF WE CAN CAMPAIGN FOR IT

Conditions Favorable for Taking Bulk of Business
Away From Seattle.

LINE OF STEAMERS
WOULD HELP GREATLY

Julius Durkheimer, Just Returned
From Northern Mining Camps, Believes Aggressive Fight Would Make Rose City Greatest Port.

Julius Durkheimer, of Wadhams & Co., has returned from a brief trip to Alaska, enthusiastic in the belief that Portland can gain a foothold in the Alaska trade and eventually control it. Mr. Durkheimer says he realizes the trade cannot be taken away from Seattle without a struggle, but believes conditions are favorable and urges that the proper time to start an agitation for a campaign to that end is the present.

"Portland is also superior to Seattle in many ways in a commercial sense, and if her merchants would only make an aggressive fight with the determination to stick to an adopted, outlined campaign for a year, they would not only secure the trade, but would build up Portland into a city far surpassing anything we have yet thought of. Seattle owes her present standing to the Alaska trade. We could take the trade from her, or at least 40 per cent of it.

There is but one way to secure the trade and that is to put on a line of steamboats—first-class steamboats. Coming back from Alaska I made the trip on the City of Seattle, and found at places passengers refused to ride in her, preferring to wait several days for a better steamer. For that reason, I say, put nothing but first-class vessels and put efficient men in charge of the business.

"In regard to the freight rate to Alaska which the four lines have put in force, I need only say that a rate of $45 a ton prevails, with exceptional rates on many commodities, ranging from 10 to 100 per cent additional. For instance, carries an additional rate of 20 per cent. That means the rate is $11 a ton. There is no wonder that the merchants in Alaska demand 10 and 12 cents a pound for this necessity.

Competition Is Barred.
"There is no escaping these rates. The four companies have adopted them uniformly and control the trade. They rest secure in that they have no fear of competition and the Alaskans have to pay the price.

"I said that sentiment among the Alaska merchants favors Portland dealers. I found that true wherever I went. My trip was not for business purposes and I did not transact any business while away. Whenever I had an opportunity to put in a good word for Portland merchants I did so, not alone in my own line of business, but wherever I found a merchant of any branch dissatisfied with the treatment they had received. Most of the contracts made in the fall of the year and that is why I urge that we should make our initial move as early as possible.

"Then comes the question of a steamboat line. There should not be less than three first-class steamers plying in the trade. The line should be in the control of Portland.

IKHNATON'S WORK IS DISCOVERED

Three Crumbling Columns of Sandstone Are Found by Chicago Explorer.

(Journal Special Service.)
Chicago, July 9.—In three crumbling columns of sandstone in an almost inaccessible region of Nubia, Professor James Henry Breasted of the University of Chicago, has discovered the only remaining monument of Ikhnaton, the greatest of the Pharaohs. Scientists for 40 centuries past have vainly sought this object. Relief, declared to be the most valuable finds of this century, are the sole remains of the gorgeous temple of Sesebi in the buried city of Gmih.

Professor Robert F. Harper, of the university director of the Oriental exploration fund, under which Professor Breasted worked, received the news in a 10-page letter from Professor Breasted. The life work of the famous Pharaoh lies all but invisible at the foot of the great cataract of the Nile, approached by such dangerous rapids that explorers of this century have feared to brave them. In the past, the foot of the cataract in the great plain stretching from the Nile to the hills of the Sahara desert, Ikhnaton, who is identical with Amenhotep IV, according to Professor Breasted, is a most remarkable figure in ancient history. He was the first king to introduce monotheistic religion and he worshiped Amon as his single divinity. His date is about 1850 B. C.

OLD VETERAN STILL DEFENDER OF FLAG

(Journal Special Service.)
San Diego, July 9.—"No, I don't own any allegiance to the American flag; it is a dirty rag," Samuel Higgieman, 77, marked before a crowd of men in the square. Just then a man in the crowd with his eyes streaming blood, brought forth by the fist of a sturdy old veteran of some 80 years of age, Higgieman and Cas Hove, both members of the Industrial Workers of the World, were discussing socialistic topics with an American Federation member when the former made use of the expression quoted. Almost before the words left his lips the old man floored him, remarking that he had fought under the stars and stripes and would allow no man of his lineage to blaspheme it.

SAY WAR TALK IS UNFOUNDED

Representatives of Japan Declare the Best Feeling Exists Officially.

(Journal Special Service.)
Washington, July 9.—Representatives of Japan as well as the United States, regard with impatience the talk of war between the two countries. While realizing the danger of unbridled Jingoism, they declare that there is absolutely nothing but best of feeling existing between the two governments, and it seems almost impossible that the equilibrium could be disturbed.

The Japanese embassy it was remarked that "semi-official" statements about negotiation of a new treaty with the exclusion feature could not be discussed seriously, but it can be said here that no such negotiations are under way. No draft of a treaty has been submitted by Secretary Root to Foreign Minister Hayashi, and therefore the latter could not have rejected any such proposal.

The ambassador declares there is nothing but the kindest feeling in Japan toward this country and that this state of affairs would have continued had no American papers printed things about Japan and the Japanese which were read there and caused comment.

The Japanese papers replied to editorials advocating exclusion and feeling was fanned by the discussion. Naval officers of course, are gladly speculating on the chances of war, with its accompanying glory and prospective promotions, but the facts seem to be against them.
