reservation, in an uproarous Fourth of July celebration in Pendieton and then carried an over-night supply of "fire water" on the reservation.

This is contrary to the federal statutes and rulings of the war department, and Wild Bill and his companions were arrested. When brought before Judge Charles E. Wolverton in local United States district court this morning, all wore repentant expressions on their noble countenances and nervously twisted their brilliant red neckties.

They explained to the court they were drunk when the act was committed, therefore they could offer no extenuating circumstances. None prayed for leniency, but backed up the opinion in which their forefathers are held as to stelldity and indifference to punishment by looking the court squarely in the face while awaiting sentence. When the court fined Wild Bill $25 and sent to jail for 50 days, Charles Bellinger grunted an amused grunt. Bill only gazed at the court.
