Miss Anna Breese Asks Princess to Be Bridesmaid at Her Wedding.

PATRICIA WILL SERVE IF ETIQUETTE ALLOWS

William Waldorf Astor Plans to Entertain on Lavish Scale and Hopes to Have Enemy, the King, at His Castle.

London, July 13.—At a big party the other night I was met by half a dozen angry women each trying to tell me at once that she had never heard such a piece of audacity in her life, even for an American, as that of asking Princess Patricia of Connaught to be a bridesmaid at the wedding of Miss Anna Breese and Lord Alastair Innes-Ker. I tried to soothe them and said there was nothing like being "original."

Now, it would be interesting to know if Miss Breese or her mother, Mrs. Higgins, are aware that in the annals of English history a princess of the blood royal has never acted as bridesmaid to the daughter of a commoner. Be that as it may, I am told Princess Patricia is much delighted at the possibility and unless royal etiquette intervenes and says she must not she will be charmed to act in the capacity for her very dear friend Anna Breese, with whom she is on terms quite as intimate as she is with Nellie Post and Clare Frewen. But you can imagine the flutter the very thought of such a thing has caused. Princess "Pat" has a great capacity for holding her own, is never so happy as when she is doing something which other princesses have not done so there is every reason to expect she will use all her persuasion to carry out this unique idea.

Astor Entertains.

William Waldorf Astor appears to have taken a new lease of life. A few months ago his health was said to be so precarious that his friends were indulging in the gloomiest forebodings concerning him. And now to the amazement of his intimates he has taken to entertaining on quite a lavish scale at Liver castle.

Those who know him best used to insist that he restored the old feudal castle with so much pains and secrecy to provide himself with a sumptuous retreat in which he might bury himself from the world's eyes, and that his pious meditation for a better one where the cares of riches are unknown. But now it seems that idea was all wrong. It would appear that he intends to make up for lost time.

At Hever castle he is going to entertain his friends like everyone else only much more sumptuously. He has built a big addition to the old place in the form of a guest house. Here every guest is assigned a flat, or suite of apartments, which has its own hall door, bathroom, sitting room and bedroom.

Expects King Edward.

There is a royal flat which it is expected the Connaughts will one day occupy, or better still King Edward himself. For all the unpleasantness of other days is now wiped out between the Prince of Wales that was and William Waldorf Astor. Everyone knows King Edward is a giving man and was ready to come round long ago if only Astor would meet him half way. But not a bit of it. Until King Edward and sensitive, the multimillionaire kept in the background and sulked. But his clever American daughter-in-law, Nan, who has been at the castle for some time, got him to be polite to the king, and the ice being broken between the two men, the story goes in society that the king will be asked to Hever, so burning with curiosity is he to see the place which is the amazement of everyone who visits it.

tents with a probability of not being alarmed further during the balance of the night, but a repetition of the firing was made. The Howard No. 2, as she was then called, the original Howard having been the one which was sunk at the attempt to sneak in. Again the enemy was picked up and treated in a like manner to that of the preceding night. The batteries of Columbia and Fort Stevens opened fire, and there was a terrific din. The submarine company had so well placed their mines that it was shown that both vessels had been the victims of them and that they had been fired automatically.

GEARHART PARK AS A SUMMER RESORT

Developments the Past Year—More Improvements to Follow.

No section of the coast line that is well adapted for a summer resort has been shown in the past year as Gearhart. Theodore Kruse bought the tract last year there were made improvements to which the beach goes had become very much accustomed. Now there are over 70 up-to-date cottages and Gearhart Park is not only the summer home of one of the most prominent citizens of Portland, but of those of other towns and cities farther inland.

Improvement in the way of lights, improved streets, water mains, sewers, and the like that were promised has been provided. A new hotel that will accommodate over 600 guests is being erected on a commanding spot overlooking the ocean. It will be provided with every modern convenience, hot and cold water, speaking tubes, telephones, etc. Other improvements at Gearhart Park that are contemplated by Mr. Kruse will call for an expenditure of thousands of dollars.

The spirit of this enterprising townsman is well illustrated by his announcement in this issue that three valuable prizes aggregating hundreds of dollars will be given to the persons suggesting the three best improvements to be made in the park, to cost from $10,000 to $15,000. No amount of money will be spared to make Gearhart Park Oregon's most attractive beach resort.

Besides having a most beautiful beach, tennis courts, golf links, wooded parks, beautiful drives, in short everything to minister to the pleasure of guests, there are other features that might be mentioned which greatly add to the comfort of visitors to Gearhart. For example, there is an ideal dairy farm not very far distant that was stocked with Holstein cattle imported by Mr. Kruse. Cottages at Gearhart are furnished with fresh butter, milk and eggs from this dairy farm at nominal cost. Everything conspires to make Gearhart just the place to spend one's vacation for either health or pleasure. So it is this resort promises to stand alone in widespread acknowledgment.

It is already Portland's high-class seashore resort, and the summer home of a rapidly increasing number of its busy men.

are rightly entitled to final entries. In many cases they have not been allowed to prove up, but have lived on the land the required time and met all the obligations placed upon them by the government.

Because of the large number of these "holdups" many complaints have been made to the land office. It is Judge Ballinger's intention to raise the condition as much as possible, and for that reason he is believed to have brought Mr. Dixon to Portland with him to consult in the conference between Judge Ballinger and Mr. Neuhausen, because he is well acquainted with conditions due to his service in Oregon for the past several years.

NO GREETING

he will arrive in Portland, nobody knows. Seemingly nobody cares. At all events, no banquet has been tendered by the Commercial club, no expedition up the Columbia has been planned by the chamber of commerce, no reception has been announced by the board of trade, and the grand monastic institution is to be given under the auspices of the harmonized Republican clubs.

"What's the matter with the quarrelsome industry of the leading Republicans yesterday afternoon. Is Charley Fulton the only man in the state who is going to show Fairbanks any intention? We don't want the vice-president to get frostbitten, even if he is going to run against Roosevelt. Why can't some of the boys get down to Astoria and help to whoop it up?"

No Friend of Roosevelt.

But this the "boys" are apparently reluctant to do, and the reason is not far to seek. One of the leading Republicans of the state and a staunch adherent of President Roosevelt, explained it thus:

"Of course everyone knows that Fulton is not a Roosevelt man. And of course Fairbanks wants to see Roosevelt out of us, and for he knows that otherwise he has no chance himself. Fulton and Fairbanks are quietly playing politics and the only man in the state who is going to notice that many of the prominent Republicans of the state will not be at the Seaside banquet? That's why they had to call in George Chamberlain and John Manning and a lot of other Democrats."

VISITS THE NAVY-YARD.

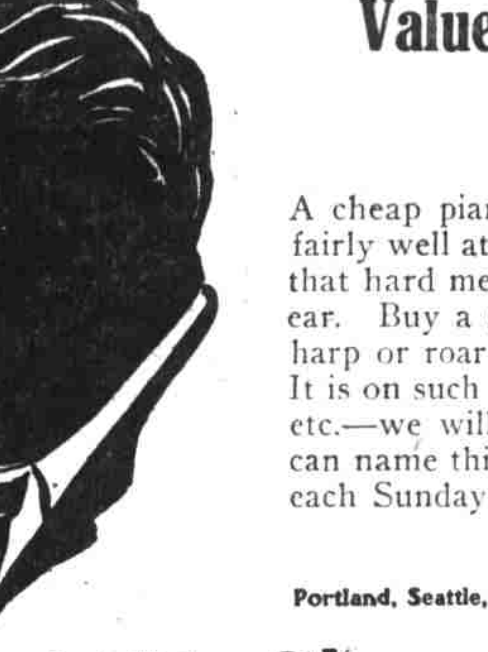

Fairbanks Is Given Vice-Presidential Salute at Bremerton.

(Special Dispatch to the Journal.)

Seattle, Wash., July 13.—Vice-President Fairbanks visited the Bremerton navy yard this afternoon, where he was welcomed with a salute of 49 guns. When the Santa Rosa, bearing officers and speakers of the Christian Endeavor convention, the vice-president and the congressional party reached the navy yard dock hundreds crowded the docks and a company of marines was drawn up on the pier. The navy yard band was also present.

Fairbanks and a few others disembarked, and the former spoke a few words to the crowd, after which he was presented to the officers at the yard. Those who landed were Senator E. H. Files and Mrs. Files, Congressman Will E. Humphreys, Dr. Francis E. Clark, president of the national Christian Endeavor, President T. F. Kane of the state university and their wives, John P. Harrison, Dr. John Pollock of Belfast, Ireland, and Dr. William Shaw,

Silhouette Series of Notable Musicians No. 9

He Was Here Last Winter

Be Content Only With Highest Value and Real Tone-Quality in a Piano

A cheap piano is a poor investment. It may look fairly well at first, but it is soon out of order and has that hard metallic sound so torturous to the musical ear. Buy a soulful piano, one that can "sing like a harp or roar with the volume of a great orchestra." It is on such a piano—Steinway, Knabe, A. B. Chase, etc.—we will give a ten-dollar payment to all who can name this series of ten musicians now appearing each Sunday in this paper.

ELEPHANTS RAMBLE

Break Away From Exhibition Near Paris and Make for the Wood.

There is a colonial exhibition going on at Nogent-sur-Marne, a pretty village near Paris, and from it comes a story quite in the Klipspring spirit of a strike on the part of the tame elephants which are a feature of the show. There are twelve of the big beasts, and they are attached to the Indo-Chinese village. As they were supposed to be the tamest elephants in captivity they were not chained or tied up in any way. To create the illusion of a herd roaming the jungle they were turned loose in a copse surrounded by an unobtrusive barrier when they were not busy doing stunts under direction of their keepers.

Nobody knows what prompted the freak, as the elephants haven't told any one, but one fine day, without warning, the whole herd began trumpeting and then moved in solid phalanx on the unobtrusive barrier. They went through it as if it was made of jackstraws, and trampling over the shrubberies and rockeries and butting down numerous "native huts" which were features of the exhibition, they started across the country for the Bois de Vincennes, one of the tame forests of Paris, where they proceeded to enjoy themselves as if they were in their native wilds.

They pulled branches off big trees and snapped little ones in two and devoured all the saplings in sight until their keepers, aided by the employes of the show, made a cordon around them and drove them back to their enclosure with sharp hooks and goads. They were hardly back and the barrier patched up around them when they began trumpeting again. With a rush they once again made their way to liberty, creating havoc as they passed.

This time the whole village of Nogent turned out to see the elephants. When they were surrounded in some meadow land the animals showed no sign of temper. They let themselves be driven quietly back to the show. When they got them there the keepers put heavy chains on the feet of all the wanderers.

A Republican primary election will be held in Oregon next April for the United States senatorship. Several of the party leaders are already planning to enter the race for the top, among them being Frederick W. Mulkey and H. M. Calk. It is probable that when the time arrives Governor Chamberlain and ex-Governor T. T. Gear also will be found in the lists.
