his summer vacation that he may spend few days each month at his desk

Although the report represents an illustration of "high finance," the like of which the world has probably never before known, it does not contain the endorsement which the president had made it clear he would make under certain contingencies.

But the recital needs no denunciation

But the recital needs no denunciation to emphasize the character of the conditions which it reveals. Clear and concise, it presents its findings almost as dispassionately and calmly as the unctuous greetings of the will Harriman when he mingled here during the winter with leading senators in a fruitless affort to secure an invitation from President Roosevelt to confer with him at the White House, and held open house at his hotel to whoever called upon him.

Stupendous One-Man Power

But what a stupendous revelation of one man's power is contained in the simple recital. Several great railway systems, great steamship lines, lines of the Southern Pacific of Puget Sound and the big steamship lines of the Atlantic are declared to be owned or controlled by Harriman and I religious. trolled by Harriman and 11 railroad systems and one express company are iantic are declared to be owned or controlled by Harriman and 11 railroad systems and one express company are partially controlled by him.

"His power seems well nigh absolute over his entire system," says the report which declares that his policy has been to gather under one head all transcontinental lines and to exclude all competitors. It says that Harriman laughingly admitted that he would have acquired other railroad property had he thought the law would permit it.

Relentlessly has Harriman forged ahead. Within three years after the reorganisation of the Union Pacific in 1897, he became the dominant spirit in that corporation. Its policies were those of Harriman, and his purpose to rule the commerce of the world never faltered. The legal offense is in gobbiling the Central Pacific. The commission says that an act of congress of June 20, 1874, still effective, prohibits its being operated other than a railway free from discriminations under penalty of fine and imprisonment.

Many Violations of Law. Many Violations of Law.

His defeat in the Northern Securities

His defeat in the Northern Securities case but gave zest to his spirit of conquest. He violated the law, it is charged, when he absorbed the Southern Pacific, Los Angeles & Salt Lake railroad and entered into an iron-clad agreement with the millionaire, ex-Senator W. A. Clark, of Montana, under a joint control and monopolized the California trade until a few weeks ago when the agreement was abrogated.

The control of the Santa Fe and Illinois Central increased his power. Flushed with victory he gathered in the Chicago & Alton by a system of jugglery, extracted from it, through the issuing of bonds, nearly $114,000,000 from an expenditure of less than $56,000,000. A dividend of $0 per cent was paid out of the $5 cents on the dollar realized on common and preferred stock and this was later covered up and an obligation of the railroad for almost $1,000,000 credited as an asset. The syndicate of Gould, Stillman, Schiff and Harriman realized a profit of $8,000,000 on this deal.

Recent Acquirements.

Within the past year, the Harriman system has acquired interests in the Baltimore & Ohio, Chicago, Milwaukes & St. Paul, Calcago & Northwestern, Northern Pacific, New York Central and St. Joe & Grand Island to the extent of almost $132,009,000.

In commenting upon Harriman's achievements and what the country faces, the commission says:
"If his policy or purchasing and controlling stocks in competing lines is permitted to continue, it must mean the suppression of competition." suppression of competition."
The only resolutions publicly made by

The only resolutions publicly made by the commission are:

To confine the business of railroads absolutely to the furnishing of the transportation; to punish offenses of railroads in acquiring control of competing or parallel lines; to prohibit railroads from having common officers or directors; to regulate the issuance of securities by interstate carriers and to prevent them from inflicting securities for merely speculative purposes,

Indefensible Financing.

Indefensible Financing.

The commission called Harriman's methods of manipulating railroad stocks indefensible financing.

The report in part says:

"From this brief synopsis of the exploitation of Chiengo & Alton, it is evident that its history is rich in illustrations of various methods of indefensions financing. First, the profit to the stockholders from the sale to themselves of $32,000,000 of bonds at 65, which sold for several succeeding years for $2½ to 94. Second, the 30 per cent dividend based on amounts expended from income for improvements; the transfer to Stanton and his contract under which the new company paid $10,000,000 in cash for stock which cost less than $7,000,000; the conversion of 183,224 shares of common stock plus 194,390 shares of preferred in the railway company, part of which was sold to the Union Pacific at $6½ a share and several other instances, winding up with the fee of $100,000 to Harriman for financing the enterprise.

close examination of the method of "A close examination of the method of capitalizat a, the report says, shows that while the total of bonds and stocks was doubled, there was no such proportionate increase in the fixed charges of the railroad. Under the Blackstone management, when 8 per cent was paid on the stock, and but a small bonded debt restated on the property, the yearly rested on the property, the yearly charges for dividends and interest amounted to $2,792,986, whereas, with greatly increased present capitalization, the charges amount to but $3,471,590, without taking into account the present common stock, upon which no dividends practically all the transactions of this company, Harriman, while chairman of the executive committee, acted on his own initiative and his acts were conse-quently ratified and approved by the extensive company.

Growth of System.

"When the Union Pacific was re-organized, it owned 1,822.59 miles of railroad, including branches which exrailroad, including branches which ex-tended into territory on each side of its main lines.

"Thus in six years past, the Union Pacific has brought under its control the following lines: Oregon Railway & Navigation company; Oregon Short Line; San Pedro line, (projected by Sen-ator Clark as an independent, which Harriman absorbed), together with all the lines of the Southern Pacific, including the Southern Pacific railway; Cen-tral Pacific; Oregon & California rail-road. Added to this Union Pacific conroad. Added to this Union Pacific con-trols every line of trans-Pacific steam-ships out of Pacific coast ports; the Pa-cific Mail line, the Morgan line of freight and passenger carriers between New York, Havana, New Orleans and New York, Havana, New Orleans and Galveston.

Can Travel on Own Lines.

"Harriman may thus journey by steamship from New York to New Orleans, thence by rail to San Francisco, across the Pacific to China, and return by another route to the United States, to Ogden by rail, thence to Kansas City, to Omaha, without leaving the deck or platform of a carrier which he controls, and without duplicating any part of his journey.

to exclude all competitors, as many transcontinental lines as possible by the issuance of $100,000,000 convertible bonds by the Union Pacific. With the proceeds, the Union Pacific purchased control of the Southern Pacific, and a majority of outstanding stock of the Northern Pacific which latter incidentally carried with it control of one half of the stock on the Burlington system, the stock of which was purchased jointly by the Union Pacific and Great Northern companies.

Epigramatic Recommendations.

"The function of a railroad corporation should be confined to the furnishing of transportation. "It is contrary to publicity as well as unlawful for railroads to acquire control of parallel and competing lines.

"The time has come when some reasonable regulations should be imposed upon issuance of securites by railways engaged in interstate commerce.

"Old established railways systems having good credit should . be prevented from inflating their . securities for merely speculative purposes. They should be encouraged to extend their lines and develop the country, but reasonable regulation will tend to make transportaton safer and more secure investments, and thereby benefit not only the railway companies, but the re-

By J. S. Dunnigan. (Hearst News by Longest Leased Wire.)

Boise, Idaho, July 13 .- Haywood's defense was closed this morning, the expert witnesses who were to testify regarding the dynamite explosion not having arriver. The court directed the Fact That Petty Troubles Have state to proceed with its rebuttal and the day was used up in a scatter of words emitted by inconsequential witnesses and Prosecutor Hawley and Attorney Pichardson who argued pro and con on the definition and admissibility of rebutting testimony. Heaps of time was destroyed by "its" and "tis not" by the opposing lawyers. This sort of proceedings is pretty tough on the fagged jurors, and all indications are that there will be at least a week more of it.

First the state produced several witnesses to prove that John T. Elliott, the G. A. R. man and former inmate of the state asylum, was not a reliable witness. The railroad superintendents and train dispatchers came to court with their train reports and testified that no passenger trains ran on November 28 and 29, 1905, at the time Elliott said he talked with Orchard about Steunenberg.

Boise, Ida., July 13.—"Defense rests."

This statesment from Edmund F. Richardson, chief counsel for the defense in the trial of William D. Haywood for the murder of former governor Frank Steunenberg today started the third epoch of the famous trial.

With the end of the trial in sight, a disagreement of the jury seems inevitable. There are many reasons for this. The 12 men composing the Haywood jury are beyond the middle age average; are not by nature sympathetic; they have already been bickering among the murder of former governor Frank Steunenberg today started the third epoch of the famous trial.

With the end of the trial in sight, a disagreement of the jury seems inevitable. There are many reasons for this. There are many reasons for this the famous trial.

and 29, 1905, at the time Elliott said he talked with Orchard about Steunenberg. Hawley also wanted to read into the record the complaint and commitments on which Lallott was sent to the asylum, which fact the old man admitted. Because he made a mietake in telling who swore to those complaints, the records were copied and certified and brought here to be read. It was a woeful waste of time, as Elliott's testimony was absurd and of no consequence anyway. The defense put him on the stand without knowing that he had been in the asylum twice within two years.

More Time Destroyed. More Time Destroyed.

who thought that Orchard was in his hotel about the time Elliott said he met the murderer on the train.

Elliott was finally disposed of and J. H. Moser, a lodging house keeper, was called to impeach Dr. McGee, the Wallace physician who testified that Orchard was in his hospital in the summer of 1994. The landlord believed Orchard was at his place in Denver some time about July 20 to August 1. He could not remember any other guest who sojourned with him at that time and cross-examination left him uncertain on everything except that he received $165 from the Pinkerions and the state to ome here and testify.

Orchard's Partner Called.

Then the state called Gus Paulson, the former partner of Orchard and now one of the principal owners of the Hercules mine. He told that Orchard sold his interest in the mine is 1898, after many objections had been overfuled and Darrow had a little fun pestering Hawley over the phrasing of questions. Paulson was also used to help impeach Big Bill Davis, who said he worked in the Hercules mine three weeks after the Bunker Hill and Sullivan blowup. Paulson declared that Davis was at the mine, but was not an employe, and left the inference the state wanted that the big miner was hiding out after that the inference the state wanted that the big miner was hiding out after that eventful April 29. Paulson is to be called later on to tell of his gift of $350 to Orchard and also what he heard of the plan to kidnap his children.

Hawley produced and was permitted to read to the jury records from Lawrence county, South Dakota, to show the jury that John M. O'Neill, editor of the Miners Magazine, was convicted and sentenced for manslaughter 27 years ago. O'Neill was prosecuted under the name of Hogan for killing Daniel Falvey and was sentenced to 18 months' imprisonment in the Detroit house of correction.

Inference Is Faulty.

To get an inferential contradiction of stage-driver Ramey, who swore that Orchard wanted to sell him his interest in the Hercules a few days after the Bunker Hill crime, Hawley called Roy Kingsbury, a clerk of the Federal Mining company. The clerk had a payroll of the Tiger-Herrman mine which showed that Orchard worked on April 28 and also worked three or four days after the Wardner dynamiting affair.

Ramey did not fix the date and if he had the defense said it was not subject to rebuttal, for Orchard did not work 24 hours a day and could have worked and also have seen Ramey on the same day.

worked and also have seen Ramey on the same day.

E. L. Hale, master mechanic of the Gem, Idaho, mine testified that he was in the Gem mine ten minutes on April 29 and Hawley wanted to prove that he did not see Bill Davis there. Arguments on the advisability of negatives took more time than it ought and Hale finally said that he saw two persons in town that day, that he went into the gions in which Harriman operates in the west, that the Pacific roads received enormous land grants, and the expressed belief that if the government anticipated there ever would be such a unification of interests it would have placed in the charters of all grant roads, explicit prohibition against union and stifling of competition.

The citation made that Harriman controls a line of steamships between Portland and San Francisco which could be, but is not, a factor in competition, refers to the necessity of competition to develop United States' interests in Hawaii and the Philippines and the upbuilding of oriental commerce, but concludes that Harriman's methods prevent such necessary competition. He declared that Bill Davis distributed the rifles and ammunition at Gem and that he was in command of the expedition from morning until night. At Wardner, Davis was not masked, said Dewey, and he openly led the charge on the mill and shaft house. Orchard said that Davis was masked; so one of the repentants is mistaken. Dewey said he had kept his knowledge secret till after he saw Orchard's confession and read of Davis' denisis. Dewey declares he has not been promised immunity from punishment for his part in the Wardner crime, where two men were killed. Dewey could not recall more than four men who were on the train the day Davis led the mob, and it was significant that one of those he did recall was John Peterson, the man who Orchard says helped him carry powder to the mill from the train. Dewey's details of the expedition are identical with the statements that have been published for years, and he told his story carefully and circumstantially.
