MAKING SOLDIERS OF CITIZENS ALMOST IN A DAY

Fort Stevens Camp, Where the Oregon Militia is Encamped.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Fort Stevens, Or., July 15.—The Third Oregon regiment of infantry is still maintaining its reputation for excellence and efficiency. Regular army officers are loud in their praise of the regiment, but its well-kept streets, correct deportment and promptness in response to the calls of duty say more than words for this body of men.

Americans Soon Soldiers.

It takes a very short time to change an average American into an excellent soldier. He learns to obey instantly, and is the equal of any regular in getting into line. Heretofore no formations have taken place at night, but the new order of things seems to work no hardship on the citizen soldier. They answer any summons, day or night with equal alacrity, and nothing drags here because of the tardiness of the men in falling in. On the march it is always necessary to send out scouts or "feelers." These men are the eyes of the army. The men composing these advance parties must be active and intelligent, and they must, above all, be good shots. For all these duties the westerner is admirably equipped, and the fitness of the information and the efficiency with which it was procured has brought forth much favorable comment from regular army officers.

Benefits of New Militia Law.

On January 21 Senator Dick of Ohio succeeded in having passed through congress a bill providing for the reorganization of all the militia of the United States, and making it a great national reserve. It was to be supplied with the same equipment as the United States army and part of the expense of equipment was to be borne by the government. The good effects of the bill have already been felt in Oregon, with the result that the Oregon national guard stands well to the head of the states of the union in point of efficiency and readiness for war.
