

ARE YOU GOING AWAY? Have The Journal follow you to give you all the news from home.

The Weather—Fair tonight and tomorrow; northwest winds.

Oregonian

Journal Circulation

Yesterday Was 28,407

VOL. VI. NO. 113.

PORTLAND, OREGON, TUESDAY EVENING, JULY 16, 1907.—SIXTEEN PAGES.

PRICE TWO CENTS.

ON TRAINS AND NEWS STANDS, FIVE CENTS

NATION'S LEADER IS FOUND IN FAIRBANKS, SAYS SENATOR FULTON

MORE CASH AVAILABLE FOR BOARD

DECLARES SHE WOULD NOT TRADE HER NAME FOR TITLE OF ROYALTY

FREE REIN TO TRADE IN CITY LIMITS

Republican Speaker at Seaside Lands Vice-President as the Only Logical Successor to President Roosevelt's Position.

Indiana Man Responds, but Has Nothing to Say in Regard to the President's Administrative Work or His Policies.

Something Like $20,000 Additional Will Be Added to School District as Result of Recount, Disclosing 1,909 Names Misplaced.

Mistake in Original Compilation Called Attention to by The Journal—Much Work Can Be Accomplished as Result of Increase.

MRS. POTTER PALMER.

Anti-Trust Ordinance, Broad in Scope, Will Be Presented to Council Tomorrow Afternoon by Councilman Belding.

Proposed Measure Has Been Prepared With Great Care by City Attorney Kavanaugh and Council Seems Favorable to Its Passage.

Three weeks of continuous hunting in secluded nooks, shadowed corners and deep recesses of the city school clerk's office has succeeded in dislodging 1,909 names of children of school age in this district which were laid carefully away beneath a big stack of books and papers in a forgetful moment by School Clerk H. L. Allen.

Instead of having 29,139 children of school age in the county, the figures first filed by Mr. Allen with County Superintendent Robinson for apportionment, the city contains 31,048 names in the subsequent filing made this week. This means that there will be something like $20,000 more money for the district.

Attention was called to the shortage in the increase of the school census taken last February over 1905-6 by The Journal, June 28. My figures turned out of the school clerk's office it was shown that the increase in the enrollment in the city schools was over 140 per cent greater than the increase in the school population. This percentage greatly amazed the city school authorities when it was considered that the general proportion of the enrollment to the population is but 29 per cent.

Several of the school directors were seriously considering a recount, but it was believed it would be too late in the year to complete another census in time for the county superintendent's apportionment of school money.

The increase in the first report made by Mr. Allen of 29,139 children of school age in the district was an increase of 2,171 over 1905-6. The increase in the enrollment in the district in the same period was 3,358 pupils. Since the 1905-6 census was taken five new districts have been annexed by Portland independent school district No. 1.

Upon this showing the school authorities could see that something was wrong in the enrollment in the school population should number some 4,000 or 5,000 pupils.

With the additional $20,000 which will come to the district on the usual $10 per capita apportionment, considerable work can be carried on that must have been postponed had the error not been rectified.

This morning the county school census was completed and shows a total of 35,533 pupils. Of this number there are 18,343 girls and 17,190 boys. This is an increase of 1,895 over 1905-6. Portland school district is the largest one and district 30 with five children the smallest.

The St. Johns school district has forged steadily ahead in the number of children enrolled and has now graduated from a second to a first class district. Districts of the first class must have over 1,000 children of school age. St. Johns has 1,004 such children. This gives the district five school directors and an opportunity to make their own rules and regulations.

Senator Fulton, in his introduction of Mr. Fairbanks at the Seaside banquet, declared that in the late President McKinley's administration no man stood closer to the president than did Charles W. Fairbanks and no man was so often consulted. In his speech following this introduction Mr. Fairbanks eulogized the late McKinley and ranked him as a liberator with Washington and Lincoln.

The Fairbanks speech was by many classed with "sounding brass and tinkling cymbals." It was a type of the good old glory, hallooing oration which delivered on the Fourth of July to sundry yeomen seated on planks in a cove, would have been a cracker-jack. He spoke it in a strong, sonorous tone with inflections that reminded the elderly listener of an old-fashioned preacher delivering a general sermon that was reminiscent to most of the congregation.

But in the Seaside instance, the speech was coupled with a fine dinner served by Dan Moore and his help in a brilliant room decorated with green Oregon kinnikinnick and red elderberries, and washed down with three kinds of excellent stimulant, and in the aggregate it was a rousing success that will be long and pleasantly remembered by everyone present.

Fulton Declares His views. Relating in his introduction a story of his entrance into the United States senatorial body, Senator Fulton told of his first acquaintance with Fairbanks, then a senator. He was feeling lonesome when Fairbanks walked over to his desk and asked how he was getting along. In the ensuing conversation Fairbanks, recalling the time when he was a young senator, offered to do anything he could to assist Fulton, and afterwards made good his tender of friendly services.

"When I hear people say the vice-president is in the refrigerating business, I wish they knew him as I know him, and as every young senator knows him," Fulton declared. "No warmer heart beats under any coat in public life than that which sends the warm blood through the veins of Charles W. Fairbanks." Continuing the senator said: "If we are to have the splendid nation we desire, we must have the right leaders. No one is better fitted as a leader than is our distinguished guest here this evening."

"If we are to have the splendid nation we desire, we must have the right leaders. No one is better fitted as a leader than is our distinguished guest here this evening," said Senator Fulton last evening in introducing Vice-President Fairbanks at the Seaside banquet. It was the most signal utterance of the occasion and was interpreted by those present as placing Senator Fulton in the forefront of those who will oppose the renomination of President Roosevelt at the next national Republican convention.

With a vice-president who is a presidential candidate, a United States senator who is a candidate for reelection, and several other gentlemen who are not dodging the senatorial bolt, Seaside last evening was in the "grand rally" class, and Astoria was trotting in the same class during the day.

"We honor him as a part of the great Roosevelt administration," H. M. Coker declared at the Astoria welcome to Vice-President Charles Warren Fairbanks, and it was the only time Roosevelt's name was mentioned by anyone connected with the exercises.

Mr. Fairbanks, who looked in splendid health and was in cordial good spirits all the while, did not utter a word about the Roosevelt administration, its work or policies, nor make a reference to river and harbor improvements, irrigation, forestry, timber land, prosecution, railroad policies, land grants, or any question before the state of Oregon or the country at large.

Glory Talk by Fairbanks. Senator Fulton, in his introduction of Mr. Fairbanks at the Seaside banquet, declared that in the late President McKinley's administration no man stood closer to the president than did Charles W. Fairbanks and no man was so often consulted. In his speech following this introduction Mr. Fairbanks eulogized the late McKinley and ranked him as a liberator with Washington and Lincoln.

The Fairbanks speech was by many classed with "sounding brass and tinkling cymbals." It was a type of the good old glory, hallooing oration which delivered on the Fourth of July to sundry yeomen seated on planks in a cove, would have been a cracker-jack. He spoke it in a strong, sonorous tone with inflections that reminded the elderly listener of an old-fashioned preacher delivering a general sermon that was reminiscent to most of the congregation.

But in the Seaside instance, the speech was coupled with a fine dinner served by Dan Moore and his help in a brilliant room decorated with green Oregon kinnikinnick and red elderberries, and washed down with three kinds of excellent stimulant, and in the aggregate it was a rousing success that will be long and pleasantly remembered by everyone present.

Fulton Declares His views. Relating in his introduction a story of his entrance into the United States senatorial body, Senator Fulton told of his first acquaintance with Fairbanks, then a senator. He was feeling lonesome when Fairbanks walked over to his desk and asked how he was getting along. In the ensuing conversation Fairbanks, recalling the time when he was a young senator, offered to do anything he could to assist Fulton, and afterwards made good his tender of friendly services.

"When I hear people say the vice-president is in the refrigerating business, I wish they knew him as I know him, and as every young senator knows him," Fulton declared. "No warmer heart beats under any coat in public life than that which sends the warm blood through the veins of Charles W. Fairbanks." Continuing the senator said: "If we are to have the splendid nation we desire, we must have the right leaders. No one is better fitted as a leader than is our distinguished guest here this evening."

Vice-President Leads Fulton. Vice-President Fairbanks in turn eulogized Senator Fulton. He said he has watched the Oregon senator's progress from the bottom of the ladder to a position of one of the acknowledged debaters in the greatest legislative body in the world.

He said the United States government is the best government devised by the genius of men since the stars first sang together. He told of three of its wars for liberation, and said that if the

(Continued on Page Two.)

Chicago Woman Will Prosecute To Sue Papers Railroad King

Mrs. Potter Palmer Declares English Press Must Stop Annoying Her.

London, July 16.—Mrs. Potter Palmer is so thoroughly annoyed at the constant matrimonial announcements concerning her that she has taken steps to prevent English papers, at least, from originating such reports and from reprinting similar stories coming from America.

Through her solicitors she has served notice on English newspapers that should they print any unauthorized reports concerning her she will commence suit against them at once. She is fully determined on this course. The report that she was to marry the Earl of Munster occasioned both herself and the earl the keenest annoyance. The two never met. Mrs. Palmer says that beyond a doubt she will remain unmarried for the remainder of her life. She is delighted with her freedom and so glories in the name of Potter-Palmer that she would not change it for a title.

Department of Justice Will Start Fight on Harriman Next Fall.

Washington, July 16.—In the opinion of men close to the president and to the interstate commerce commission, prosecution of E. H. Harriman and his associates for violation of the Sherman anti-trust act in merging the Union and Southern Pacific railroads will be undertaken by the department of justice next fall. Reasons given for such an assumption are based on the belief that actual violation of the law has taken place and that the only reply that can be made to Harriman, who alleges he is being persecuted, is to file such a suit and find out which is right.

There is no doubt that Frank B. Kellogg, the only government attorney who has thus far gone into the merits of the case, is of the opinion that there is ground for legal action against Harriman on several counts.

While conservatives on the interstate commerce commission have had their way in the preparation of the report made Saturday, the radicals on the commission are still outspokenly

FIGHT AT WEDDING RESULTS IN DEATH OF BRIDE'S FATHER

St. Joseph, Mo., July 16.—In a fight at the celebration of his daughter's wedding last night, James Slayton was killed by a blow on the jaw which broke his neck. Fred Kendall, a guest, who is supposed to have dealt the fatal blow, has been arrested.

Kendall and Slayton are both hot-tempered men, and a smear on the part of the guest against the bride precipitated

Anti-Trust Ordinance, Broad in Scope, Will Be Presented to Council Tomorrow Afternoon by Councilman Belding.

Proposed Measure Has Been Prepared With Great Care by City Attorney Kavanaugh and Council Seems Favorable to Its Passage.

An ordinance broad enough in its provisions to regulate and curb any local organization or association entered into for the restraint of trade or to limit competition has been prepared by City Attorney J. P. Kavanaugh and will be presented to the city council tomorrow afternoon by Councilman Belding.

The ordinance has been drafted by the city attorney at the request of Councilman Belding and has grown from a general demand on the part of the people of Portland for relief from the conditions now existing in the city. On every hand different classes of business have banded together for their mutual profit and for the regulation of the price of commodities of general consumption, government of the quantity and quality of output and general control of the market.

Inside the city, however, and out of the jurisdiction of the federal law, such combinations have flourished as are now maintained in many business lines. It is to bring these associations to book that the proposed ordinance has been drafted by the city attorney.

Council Appears Favorable. From the expressions already made by different members of the council and the known attitude of others who have not made public utterance it is probable that the council will pass the ordinance. The city attorney has made exhaustive investigation into the power of the city to enact the law and has come to the conclusion that the charter grants the power.

The ordinance as drafted will be introduced tomorrow and will then be given into the hands of a committee for consideration. It will then, according to routine, come up for final consideration and passage at the next meeting two weeks from tomorrow. In view of the popular demand for the enactment of some remedial legislation of this kind it is not thought likely that the committee will delay its report on the ordinance. The text of the ordinance as prepared by the city attorney is as follows:

Proposed Anti-Trust Ordinance. "Section 1. That it shall be unlawful within the city of Portland for any person, firm, partnership, corporation or any association or associations of persons to make, enter into or knowingly assent to any agreement, understanding, arrangement, contract, trust, pool or combination, the object, purpose or intent of which shall be:

"2. To restrain trade or commerce within said city.

"3. To limit or reduce the production, or increase or reduce the price of merchandise or any commodity produced, sold or offered for sale within said city.

"4. To prevent or interfere with the free and unrestricted competition in the manufacture, transportation, production or sale of merchandise or produce, or any commodity manufactured, transported, bought or sold within the said city.

(Continued on Page Three.)

Midshipman Cruse Is Growing Worse and Another Sailor Is Expected to Die From Injuries Received in the After Turret of the Georgia.

Washington, July 16.—Eight are dead and another will probably be added to the list of fatalities resulting from the explosion aboard the battleship Georgia yesterday. Commandant Snow of the Boston navy yard wired this morning that Midshipman Cruse is growing worse and that Walsh is fatally injured. The list of dead and injured is as follows:

Dead. Goodrich, Lieutenant Casper, Brooklyn; died at 11:45 tonight, after being landed. Goldthwaite, Faulkner, midshipman, Kentucky. Thatcher, William J., chief turret captain, Wilmington, Delaware. Burks, Frank H., boatswain's mate, Quincy, Massachusetts. Hamilton, George G., ordinary seaman, South Framingham, Massachusetts. Miller, George E., ordinary seaman, Brooklyn, New York. Thomas, William M., seaman, Newport, Rhode Island.

Injured. Cruse, James T., midshipman, Nebraska; hands and face burned very seriously; worse today. Schlapp, Frank H., boatswain's mate, second class, North Adams, Massachusetts; back, chest, arms and face burned; condition favorable. Taglund, Orley, chief yeoman, Richmond, Minnesota; arms, back and face burned; critical, but hopeful. Walsh, Edwin K., seaman, Lynn, Massachusetts; chest and face burned fatally. Bush, John A., ordinary seaman, New York; face, arms and chest burned; condition favorable. Mansell, Charles, gunner's mate, first class, New York; face and hands burned; condition favorable. Taglund, Orley, chief yeoman, Richmond, Minnesota; arms, back and face burned; critical, but hopeful. Walsh, Edwin K., seaman, Lynn, Massachusetts; chest and face burned fatally. Bush, John A., ordinary seaman, New York; face, arms and chest burned; condition favorable. Mansell, Charles, gunner's mate, first class, New York; face and hands burned; condition favorable. Taglund, Orley, chief yeoman, Richmond, Minnesota; arms, back and face burned; critical, but hopeful.

Public Learns Plans for the Fleet Before Men High in Official Rank.

Washington, July 16.—There is serious friction between high naval officers. The question is raised, "Are the great naval movements planned without consultation with the heads of bureaus through which their execution must depend?" This question is prompted by the discovery that no verbal or written order referring to the movement of the fleet to the Pacific has been received by any official of the navy department here.

Officials and officers have only known by the public announcement that the greatest fleet of American battleships ever assembled is to mobilize in the country very rich. The plans, however, they wonder if they are being slighted or if the head of the navy forgot to give them official notice.

RAILWAY HEADS FOR HEART OF IDAHO

Boise, Ida., July 16.—A report from Weiser is that there is every indication that the P. & I. N. railroad, now operating from the bottom of the ladder to a position of one of the acknowledged debaters in the greatest legislative body in the world.

He said the United States government is the best government devised by the genius of men since the stars first sang together. He told of three of its wars for liberation, and said that if the

(Continued on Page Two.)

MEXICAN OUTLAWS ARE WIPED OUT IN FIGHT

Matamoros, Mex., July 16.—In a pitched battle between the rurals and bandits, near Ciudad Victoria, a few miles from the Texas border, 22 of the latter were killed. The bandits were making for Texas after murdering and robbing a party of Hungarians and Mexicans. Five rurals were killed. This exterminates a desperate gang of robbers.

WAS FO REPORT. There was no report when the powder burned but every inch of space in the turret was filled with flames and gas.

As soon as the accident occurred Captain McCrea got the Georgia under steam and sailed for Boston where the injured man was transferred to the hospital.

Admiral Goodrich started for Boston as soon as he received the news and was kept posted of his son's condition by being which met his train every day. It was feared that Lieutenant Goodrich would be unable to live until the arrival of his father, but the admiral did not pass away until a few hours after the admiral reached his home.

At one time after his father arrived the dying man regained consciousness and answered to speak but was unable to utter the words which were in his mind.