

JANUARY TO BE RELEASED

Modern Jean Valjean Will Be Given His Freedom by President Roosevelt Tomorrow—Number of Petitioners Asked Pardon.

(Journal Special Service.)
Leavenworth, Kan., July 18.—John William January, the modern "Jean Valjean," whose arrest and return to prison last spring attracted attention throughout the country, is to be given his freedom tomorrow in accordance with the terms of the pardon granted by President Roosevelt on the advice of Attorney-General Bonaparte.
It was in 1895 that January was convicted of robbing a building in Stillwater, Oklahoma, that contained a post-office. He was sentenced to five years in the federal penitentiary at Fort Leavenworth, from which institution he escaped after serving three years. After working through Kansas first as a quarryman, and then as a traveling salesman, he went to Kansas City, changed his name to Charles H. Anderson, and married. He engaged in several kinds of business, finally becoming proprietor of a restaurant, and was well respected.
On April 20 last he was rearrested through information furnished by a former convict, who had known him in prison. On the day Anderson was returned to prison a movement was begun by the Kansas City newspapers to secure his pardon. Three days later petitions bearing 10,000 names were forwarded to President Roosevelt. Within another two days a second batch of petitions was sent to Washington, bringing the total number of signers to 40,000. Many prominent persons were among those who recommended a pardon. On the strength of these petitions and the evidence furnished that Anderson had led an honest and upright life after his escape from prison Attorney-General Bonaparte recommended to the president that the sentence be commuted to three months from the date of the rearrest and that he be pardoned at the end of that time.
On his release from prison tomorrow Anderson will be greeted by his wife and three-year-old daughter. He has already announced his intention to return to Kansas City and engage in business.

FINEST CHERRIES GROWN IN OREGON

That Oregon is the state having perfect conditions for growing the finest cherries in the world has been again conclusively proven this season. Many who have seen the crops produced in the Willamette valley have admitted that Oregon cherries surpass all others. The illustration herewith shows a branch from a 3-year-old Royal Duchess tree owned by E. Frenkel of Salem. The tree this year bore its first crop. On this particular branch, 18 inches long, are 130 large, luscious cherries.

An exchange says that a Seattle woman kissed a burglar in the dark last week, thinking it was her husband. Well, the latter part of the statement may be true if the couple had just been married.

TALLEST SWEET PEA VINE DUE TO CARPENTER'S GREED FOR GAIN

A carpenter who wanted to earn as much as possible from a small job is directly responsible for the growth of sweet peas 14 feet high—the tallest ever known in Portland. They were grown by O. G. Hughson, a traveling man, who lived at 24 East Fourteenth street.

Hughson planted the peas and when they had broken through the ground ordered a carpenter to make a rack for them to grow upon. He left the order one morning while on his way to the train to cover his territory, and did not see the rack until some time afterward. Then he discovered that the carpenter had made the rack 12 feet high and sent in a bill for $3, which Hughson considered quite shocking, but as the rack was there he had to be paid.

It was an inconspicuous looking affair, the rack towering 12 feet above peas only a few inches high, and it afforded Hughson's neighbors much amusement.

But Hughson determined to get his money's worth, and since the rack did not fit the peas, he would make the peas fit the rack, and busied himself with forcing them to the top. A sprinkling permit from the city waterworks, hose, fertilizer, guano and garden tools formed considerable items in Hughson's expense accounts, but not in the accounts he turned in to his firm, and all his spare time was devoted to the careful and scientific culture of sweet peas. Patience and industry were rewarded one day when Hughson had the satisfaction of seeing the pea vines creep over the top of the rack, and then grow still farther into the air. They grew and grew until he had to build another story on top of the rack, and when they stopped growing the vines measured more than 14 feet in height.

Neighbors who had scoffed came in to borrow the flowers and admire the prize-winning vines that only the carpenter had had in mind at the beginning.

The visiting editors, many of whom are accompanied by their wives, will remain here as the guests of Thomas Taggart, chairman of the Democratic national committee. Tomorrow will be devoted to the business of the convention, including the reading of papers by a number of prominent editors. One of the chief features of the meeting will be the address of Ben Louthan of Loganport on "The Democratic Platform of 1908," which will be delivered at the banquet tomorrow evening.

SMITH'S DAILY ROUND-UP

Edited by the Frank L. Smith Meat Co., 226-228 Alder St., Bet. First and Second. "FIGHTING THE BEEF TRUST"

VOL. I, NO. 3. PORTLAND, OR., JULY 18, 1907. PRICE, YOUR PATRONAGE.

IT DIDN'T REQUIRE THE GOVERNMENT TO DO IT SMITH DONE IT

It didn't require the government nor a pure food inspector nor a few laws to make Smith's meats pure. Smith's meats have always been pure. It's been Smith's hobby to have everything as good as honestly can make it. His lard is absolutely pure—while the packers' lard—I don't care whose it may be, is to a certain extent, adulterated with tallow.

Smith's sausages and hamburg need no preservatives, they are put up to be eaten, they're not supposed to be kept. Smith's Bologna, frankfurts, etc., don't need coloring, the natural color is good enough for anyone. And have you ever eaten Smith's corned beef? Made with water and salt—nothing else. Sliced cold it is the most satisfying hot weather dish to be found.

What the Beef Trust Has Done and What It Is Doing to Injure the Standing of U. S. Government Inspection.

CHAPTER I.
Just so often as the Beef Trust thinks it's "going to pay," it gives the public a write-up on its government inspected meats. To do its best it can't give its "ads" the ring of sincerity, it can't gloss over the actual crimes which it has caused to be committed and is committing every day under the name of United States government inspection.
