FOR WEEKS JAPANESE HAVE BEEN DRILLING

Subjects of Mikado Working in Logging Camps Near Portland Plead Ignorance When Questioned Regarding Sunday Skirmish Drills Held in Forest.

In a remote and isolated clearing in the deep forest near Currinsville, on the O. W. P. Estacada line, Japanese soldiers have been assembling every Sunday for several weeks and practicing the tactics of war. Whether they are devoting this half day every week to military practice merely for the exercise or whether they are acting under instruction from Tokio is not known.

At any rate, they have selected an ideal spot either to carry out secret instructions or simply to while away a few hours at the game of which they profess to be so fond. Deep in the almost impenetrable forest which thrives in the valleys and on the hills of the Clackamas there is a large clearing. Woodmen long ago chopped away the big trees which stood there for years and the forest fires have bereft it of the stumps and underbrush which usually remain.

Just the Place to Drill.

So, now it is a veritable pasture, a field of waving grass, uninterrupted by stumps of trees, in the midst of an immense forest. It is located several miles perhaps from the station of Currinsville, which, by the way, is not even a village, merely a stopping place with a waiting room where excursionists may await the arrival of trains.

It is in this isolated but ideal parade ground that a company of Japanese soldiers has been going through regular infantry evolutions and maneuvers for several weeks. During the week these little brown soldiers labor in the camps which abound along the line of the O. W. P. and on Sunday assemble in this clearing to imagine they are once more on the banks of the Yalu with an opposing army of Russians on the other side. During their maneuvers a portion of the Japs are armed with rifles. Others who have no firearms use sticks as weapons. They drill as if they were in the field, under command of the regular officers of a company of infantry.

Residents of that vicinity are few, but they have frequently been attracted on Sunday afternoons by the noise of the ununiformed troops. The sharp commands of the officers, the reports of volleys of rifles attracted their attention, but until the last few days they gave the matter little or no attention.

Last Sunday, however, a large number of Portland people went out the O. W. P. line to seek a quiet place to spend the day. Many selected the neighborhood of Currinsville and in the afternoon had an opportunity to observe the drills of the Japanese laborer-soldiers. They also thought little of it at first, but after it had continued for several hours they watched the actions of the Japanese more carefully.

Company Fully Officered.

The Japs were under the command of an individual who, in manner and action, corresponded to a captain. He gave orders with a sharp voice of command and under him were lieutenants and other subalterns. In their practice the soldiers had a target at the far end of the clearing. From their actions the Japanese led their observers to believe that they were maneuvering against the target as if it were an enemy.

Advancing diagonally across the clearing on the run they would suddenly drop to the ground and open fire upon the supposed enemy or fort. Rising quickly they would run across the clearing, still, however, advancing towards the target. After running a short distance they would drop to the ground again and open fire.

Those who witnessed the actions of the Japs declare that the little brown men were undoubtedly going through skirmish tactics and that they continued in readiness for a call to arms in the afternoon. Late in the afternoon many of the Portland people who had seen the practice met at the Currinsville station and agreed that the Japs were practicing their infantry tactics. No one made a thorough examination or went close enough to the Japs to scrutinize their actions studiously.

There are hundreds of Japanese employed at the various logging camps in that vicinity and in the construction gangs of the Oregon Water Power & Railway company. Many are recent arrivals and are veterans of the Russo-Japanese war. They still retain their connection with the Japanese army, for all Japanese are subject at any time to an order to report for duty.

Whether these Oregon Japanese are going through these military tactics merely as a pastime in remembrance of their deeds in the recent war, or whether they have received orders to be in readiness for a call to arms is not known. Those who are employed at a logging camp near Currinsville and who are known to have participated in the drilling last Sunday refuse to discuss it at all. They "no say" they say, and efforts to ascertain from them

WARM SUPPORT FROM TILLAMOOK

Inquiries Being Carried On With View to Building Automobile Road.

Inquiries are being carried on with a view to pushing the movement to build an automobile road from Portland to the sea beach at some point in Tillamook county, probably at Tillamook City. S. G. Reid, president of the Portland chamber of commerce, and members of the Portland Automobile club are back of the project, and are receiving warm support from Tillamook citizens.

R. W. Watson of Tillamook believes the idea is a very valuable and practical one, and has offered to assist by subscription and in other ways. He says many others in Tillamook county will subscribe and lend all possible assistance. Regarding the feasible routes he said, in reply to a letter from S. G. Watson, secretary of the Portland chamber of commerce:

"The Wilson River route is exactly 57 miles from Forest Grove to Tillamook, and in the neighborhood of 40 miles from Forest Grove to Portland, which makes it 97 miles from Portland to Tillamook instead of 87 to 85 miles, as stated in your letter. It is 88 miles from Portland to Tillamook as the crow flies.

"The summit of the Coast range on the Wilson River is in the neighborhood of 3,000 feet above sea level. The first five miles from Gales City to the top of the steep climb is a rise of 1,500 feet, and this elevation cannot to my knowledge be lowered unless another route and pass is found, but this would necessitate another road, and perhaps an increase of distance.

"The southern route from Portland to Tillamook via Sheridan and Dolph, is exactly 112 miles, and the increased distance is easily made up as against the poor road on the 97 mile route via the Wilson River. The Wilson River route comes through green timber for 49 miles, where the sun rarely spreads its rays beneath the green foliage, while on the Sheridan route the roads dry out quickly, being an open and cleared country, with little green timber along the road."

Mr. Watson added that he would lend assistance to the building of either road that should be selected after they were viewed by a man competent to judge and select the best route. He said considerable assistance could be secured in Tillamook county by subscriptions or cash and work. The road could be improved so that the automobile trip could be made from Portland to Tillamook in six to eight hours.
