JAIL THE TRUST WILL NOT RAISE LAWYERS ALSO

After the Brains as Well as the Body.

STATUS AS COUNSEL GIVES NO IMMUNITY

When They Wilfully Advise Breach of Known Law They Become Criminals and Are Answerable as Such, Say Authorities.

(Washington Bureau of The Journal.) Washington, July 19.—Another bomb may be thrown into the camp of the be started against lawyers who have aided in the formation of combinations in restraint of trade. Incidentally this non would produce consternation ong the members of the legal framany of whom have been party known. to illegal trust transactions, according to an official high up in the government Heretofore counsel employed by trust Heretofore counsel employed by trust managers has been immune from prosecution. No hints have been given that it was the intention to raise the question of their standing before the criminal courts. In late years the operations of the larger concerns have been carried on largely by high priced lawyers who were expected to take an active part in the business life of the corporation, to devise ways and means poration, to devise ways and means whereby desired ends could be attained and the function of the retained coun-sel has been broadened from the onetime mere advice as to law points to the actual execution of the acts.

is no confidence as to the disclosure of inliquity.' (Jones on the Law of Evidence.)

Bot Counsel, but a Criminal.

"And still another court decision in the case of O'Brien vs. Spalding, 102 Georgia, 490: The relation of attorney and client cannot exist for the purpose fo concocting crimes. * * If the client consult the lawyer with reference to the perpetration of a crime, and they both cooperate in effecting it, there is no privilege, for if is no part of an attorney's duty to assist in crime—he ceases to be counsel and becomes a criminal.'

"I could cite you a long line of decisions which carry out these here given. The law plainly is that lawyers cannot assist in forming illegal trusts and escape punishment if it be proven that they performed the act. To adopt this policy—prosecuting the counsel of trusts proven to be illegal—will perhaps do more to break up the combinations than anything else. It would be impossible for the capitallists to accomplish the merging of different corporations in a big trust without the aid of their counsel. The financiers could not proceed beyond the verbal utterance of a desire to accomplish it. It is the lawyers who carry out the plans, and, and the case of O'Brien vs. Spalding, 102 decondition and consequent inferiority of the range. A slight increase in the fee charged will be made in such cases in the ranges improve in condition and better service is given. This will be dieter service is given. This will be dieter service is given. This will be made in such cases of the present on a condition and consequent inferiority of the range. A slight increase in the fee charged will be made in such condition and consequent inferiority of the range. A slight increase in the fee charged will be made in such cases of fairness. No increase will be made in such cases of the present on account of the present on account of the range. A slight increase in the fee charged will be made in such cases of the range in the fee charged will be made in such cases of fairness. No increase will be ma a desire to accomplish it. It is the lawyers who carry out the plans, and, indeed, often even originate them.

"I expect to witness the announce-ment before long of the government's toption of the policy of prosecuting w. vigor the lawyers who have been engaged in forming illegal trust com-panies, and I expect that it will throw consternation into the ranks of those whom the government has been after.

The Disbarment Cure.

"Still another means of breaking up such participation of lawyers in illegal trust-forming probably will be to ask their disbarment from practice in the federal courts. It will be shown that federal courts. It will be shown that the lawyer has assisted in violating the law, and request will be made on the court that he be no longer allowed to practice. It would be necessary only to show that he has done so, to procure to show that he has done so, to procure his disbarment.

"I myself," the department of justice official concluded, "believe that the legal profession will have to move to higher ground than that which higher ground than that which it has occupied in late years. It has become too common for lawyers of repute and personal cleanliness of life to accept personal cleaniness of life to accept retainers from corporation managers who hired them simply that they might have the advantage of their superior ability in the law in accomplishing ends which have been inhibited by law. This is non-ethical. It is more than that—it is criminal and should be frowned on.

Case of Senator Borah.

"If it be true as all admit, that to put a few trust millionaires in jail would do much toward inspiring the business and commercial and transporpusiness and commercial and transpor-tation magnates with respect for law, certainly it would do much toward the same end to imprison a few eminent lawyers who have been just as much guilty as the trust magnates them-selves."

selves."

A few weeks ago the federal grand jury of Idaho voted an indictment against United States Senator W. E. Borah on exactly the ground laid down by the official herein quoted—that he was counsel for the Barber Lumber company and as such took part in illegal acts in connection with land transactions. The indictment was not served, because Senator Borah was of counsel for the state of Idaho in the Haswood case, but will be acted on so and as the trial of the labor men has ended.

Government About to Go Forest Service Official Hastens With Assurance to Stockmen.

> UNCLE SAM'S OBJECT NOT PROFIT-MAKING

> Statement Made in View of Publication of Report Calculated to Disquiet Livestock Interest-Principles of Service Discussed.

(Washington Bureau of The Journal.) Washington, July 20 .- "The present administration will not increase fees for trusts by the federal government by the grazing on national forests," was the announcement that prosecutions are to statement of Associate Forester Price today, an announcement which will bring cheer to all western owners of livestock. "We have heard that a report to the contrary has been circulated in the west, and want the facts to be We hold that present prices are less than those which would be asked by private owners of range, as evinced by cases of which we know. "The government does not believe in

The government does not believe in charging stockmen what might be called the full market value of the grazing privilege—that is letting the use of the range to the highest bidder and trying to make as much as possible out of the land. In other words, it is not in the position of a landlord who seeks to position of a landlord who seeks to realize the largest possible returns from his holdings. While there is no reason why those who profit individually by making use of the national forests should not help meet the expenses of their protection, the forests are run, not as revenue producers, but as sources of public benefit through rightly regulated use. Much misdirected criticism has srisen from the failure of many people to understand this.

The satual execution of the acts.

Punish Trusts' Beal Makers.

Confessing to a certain extent that the government's campaign against the trusts has been abortive, the administration has been extremely desirous of accomplishing something effective, to actually put a stop to the operations of some combination in restraint of trade. Putting in jail the big men who are at the head of the important mergers which are proven to be illegal has been thought to be one means towards that end, and now it is bontemplated to include the lawyers in the number of those who may be imprisoned.

Discussing the matter, one of the attaches of the department of justice in a vitally important capacity, said today. "The government holds that no good reason exists for permitting members of the legal profession to continue to assist in forming and conducting illegal combinations, under cover of their plea that they are merely performing professional duties. The law plainly leagainst such procedure by lawyers. Already a case has been decided by a federal judge in which he held that the government's contention was sound—that a lawyer could not come into court and plead immunity from prosecution or freedom from duty as a witness on the ground that his relationship is confidential and privileged."

Courts Mave Spoken Plainly.

The official then took down a num-it is sold at the market price. Timber as Mr. Pinchot said at the Denver convention, is a 'transportable commodity' forage on the range is not.

The official when took down a number of law reports and traced out a line of authorities to support his position.

"Here," he said, "is an authority, "Underhill on Evidence," section 174, page 254, which says:

"Communications or acts arising out of conspiracy to defraud in which both attorney and clinent participate are not sheepmen. Stability of the industry and of conspiracy to defraud in which both attorney and clinent participate are not privileged.

"That means, and the court held that it did, that the attorney may not validly plead to the court that his act was that of a lawyer and cannot be charged against him as a criminal act.

"Here's another: 'If attorney and client enter into a conspiracy to violate the law neither should be allowed to conceal the unlawful purpose under the cloak of professional privilege. There is no confidence as to the disclosure of infquity.' (Jones on the Law of Evidence.)

Not Counsel, but a Criminal cut.

"On contained to what would often be a ruinous competition from nomadic cattie and sheepmen. Stability of the industry and the protection of the small settler who helps develop the country along permanent lines is of the first importance. To secure these ends the grazing fee is put low, and the choice of those allowed to use the range is made along lines which recognize residents and past users as having the first right.

"Though no general advance in the fee will be made, some adjustment in the interest of fairness will result in certain local changes.

A farmer near Brownsville, Charles Leatherman, cuts two crops of clover during the summer. The first crop is cut for hay and the second, which is cut about the first of August, is threshed. The crop cut for hay is about as heavy as vetch hay. This gives him two crops off the same piece of ground, while the average farmer gets only one, and this is not all. Fruit Drying Experiments Prove a Success in the Willamette Valley.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Salem, July 20 .- What promises to revolutionize the growing of loganberries in this section has just been brought to the attention of the growers of the Brooks Lake Labish and Clear Lake neighborhoods. It is nothing but the drying or evaporating of the logan-berries and that process of preparing the fruit for market may yet solve the the fruit for market may yet solve the problem of possible overproduction and of marketing at non-remunerative prices. When some weeks ago the loganberries became so cheap on account of the oversupply on the Portland market, local growers lost heart for the time being, in an industry which is destined to become very important and to bring thousands of doliars into this valley. While thus despairing of coming out even in the production of their crops some of the fruitmen of Brooks took some of their berries to Dayton in Yamhill county to have them dried. When properly dried and packed the evaporated loganberry is said to command a price of 25 cents per pound, which would guarantee to the growers a quotation of $1.25 to $1.50 per crate, which the growers consider remunerative.

In past years evaporated raspberries cannot be supplied. It is thought, and with good reasons, too, that the logan-berries would prove a splendid substitute for the raspberries. In fact, eastern firms are looking forward to Oregon to supply the trade with this kind of evaporated fruit.

Hon, W. K. Newell of Gaston, president of the state board of horticulture, received a letter some time ago from an eastern firm asking if any experiments had been made in this state in drying and evaporating loganberries, ments had been made in this state in drying and evaporating loganberries, which they believed would find a ready market in the east. The loganberry industry in this section is yet in its infancy but the acreage is increasing each year and will in a year or two assume tremendously large proportions.

The fact that the loganberry will be purchased either as a green or dried product makes the berry exceptionally profitable for the farmers to grow. The experiments of evaporating loganberries conducted at Dayton by D. A. Snyder have proved successful. The loganberries extensively because there canneries so far have not handled the loganberries extensively because there is as yet no great demand for the canned product. So large has been the crop in Oregon this year that the loganberries have perhaps been the cheapest berries on the market. A. M. Aspinwall of Brooks, who first conceived the idea of drying the loganberries, believes that they lend themselves to that process admirably and retain much of their juicy qualities.
