There has been created a universal There has been created a universal demand for the integrity of the individual, which the church is under the necessity of supplying. The time has come when a man must be clean and strong, and at least make the world believe that he is upright before he may hope for prosperity in the age in which we live.

In a glowing tribute to the public schools of America, Mr. Landrith said:
"The child has suffered, who has not had the privilege of that democracy which he can have nowhere else so well as in the public school. The most democratic institution today on farth is the American public school, and it is therefore the safety of the American republic. It helps to increase the brotherhood of man, and creates cosmopolitanism."

There should, however, be introduced into the public schools some kind of moral and religious teaching which will into the public schools some kind of moral and religious teaching which will be objectionable to no person. The public school makes adequate preparation for the cultivation of the mind; provides for physical culture, for which it deserves commendation; includes manual training, the trades and the arts, but in many states balks at the best by saying that the public school is not essentially moral—that morality should be left to the teaching of the churches, although the public schools are not by any means the teaching of the churches, although the public schools are not by any means promoting scepticism or immorality. It is not the teaching of any particular creed that is required, but a teaching that shall stand for the reverence of the individual for one God, so that the individual child may recognize the fatherhood of God, the brotherhood of man and universal moral order.

CONDEMNED THE TRUSTS

Rev. Hill Spoke on "The Young Man and the Square Deal."

At the Taylor street Methodist church last night, Rev. Everett M. Hill, speaking on the subject "The Young Man and the Square Deal." declared that combination to raise the price of fuel a low-down trick, and not a square cal. Referring to the slabwood trust,

"If it is true that there is a slabwood trust in Portland, and that the millmen have been forced to sign contracts with these people that they will not sell a load of slabwood to any individual, then it is a base thing, and I despise it and the men who have brought it about.

the men who have brought it about.

"When a man who has only a small amount of this world's goods can ordinarily buy slabwood at the mill for 50 cents a cord, and then get it hauled for a small amount, it makes it possible for him to save something that he may purchase comforts for his wife and babies. Otherwise he will have to invest this in fuel to give warmth to his body this winter. When men, by a simple combination of forces, make it impossible for this man to do this, when there is just as much slabwood on hand, and the millmen sell it at the same old price of 50 cents a cord, and there is no more demand for it than before, the artificial price being caused by a corner on the market, then I say that the poor man and every other man is being defrauded, and by a steight-of-hand trick there has extracted from his pocket that and by a signification and been extracted from his pocket that which was his own.

"I would rather have a man point a gun in my face and force me to give up my pocket-book than to be thus despoiled of my good money by such a slippery trick of trade. It is not a square deal. It is a low-down trick that belongs to the jungle where the wild beasts dwell. It is a base slander on the race.

"How the Universalist Church Helps Portland" was the practical theme of Rev. James D. Corby at the Church of

"I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly."—John x:10.

Life! Abundant life! Intellectually, morally, individually and civically, was the basis of a broad, comprehensive and optimistic sermon by Rev. Ira W. Landrith, D. D., L.L. D., of Nashville, Tennessee, at the First Presbyterian church yesterday morning.

Rev. James D. Corby at the Church of the Good Tidings yesterday. In part, Mr. Corby said:

Mr. resterday morning.

Reference was first made to the unconscious dereliction of many Christians in leaving undone work that should be done. It is not enough that souls should be saved; they should be developed. It is not sufficient that christian life should exist; it should be nourished, strengthened, made to grow, and to this end the church should be a great religious agency.

Ilberal. Most of the strational interpretation of the gospel. We are finding every week that the Universalist message revives and deepens the faith of these men.

"The world wants a religion that will win the sinful to right living so that injustice will shrivel and expire. We ought to rejoice at the criticism or religion. It is a hopeful sign. None whips a dead horse for not pulling the cart out of the mud. When men decart out of the mud. When men dewhips a dead horse for not pulling the cart out of the mud. When men denounce the wide chasm between profession and practice it is the best proof that they believe real religion will make the perfect man after Christ's pattern. "Universalism helps the city by changing the keynote of life to the major key. This is the Church of the Good Tidings. People who work hard want a note of Joy. There is sadness and trouble enough without souls being want a note of joy. There is sadness and trouble enough without souls being harrowed up by the thought that there is a fiend in charge of the universe, who hates men. Jesus taught us to call God father. Our Father plans that every child of his shall have more, and better than we can dream for our sons and daughters. The practical power of this message is to lift a burden from the heart of man and fill life with hope and good cheer."

Rev. Hiram Vrooman of the Portland Swedenborgian church, delivered a sermon at Chautauqua devotional exercises yesterday morning at 9 o'clock, taking for his subject, "Love and Truth." In part Rev. Vrooman said:

The object for which the word truth stands, in the biblical sense, is to most Christians nothing more than a dim fillumination in the clouds of their mental horizon. It is thought of as a kind of sign of some mysterious reality to be reverenced even though its nature and mission be as poorly comprehended as were those of a come or the northern lights by men of former times unacquainted with astronomical science. Many scientific scholars go so far as to deny the existence of the truth which the bible identifies itself with The materialistic assertion that the modern methods of scientific investigation alone lead into the knowledge of truth brings lead into the knowledge of truth brings the Christian teacher and his antagonist to the spot for the crossing of swords. It is for the victor to trace in the scarlet red of the vanquished the imperishable line of discrimination, showing either a clear difference between biblical facts on the one hand, and scientific facts on the other; or, else, a distinctly materialistic boundary around all ascertainable knowledge. These are the two alternatives. Indeed, religious reasoning has today reached lead into the knowledge of truth brings religious reasoning has today reached that critical turn in its course where progress awaits the outcome of this de-

"Truth, therefore, has reference primarily to the improvement of human character, whereas science regards primarily the preservation of the physical body and the development of strong mentality. Nobility of character and strength of mentality may be as distant from each other as heaven from hell."

young men had the courage to ignore the customs of society and set a precedent for other banquets in this city. I have talked with a number of the young men who were present on that occasion and they have declared it was a far more delightful occasion than if they had served liquor. The newspaper men of this city are a manly crowd and are a fine set of fellows, but I am prouder of them than ever.

That Portland deads the way in the entertainment of visitors, is the opinion entertained by the members of the ion entertained by the members of the Omaha business men's excursion, who visited Portland in June. The editor of the Cuming County Democrat, published at West Point, Nebraska, reflects the sentiments of J. C. Elliott, one of the members of the party, using the following language:

"The reception at Portland, Oregon, was the greatest of the trip. They spent Sunday and Monday there and from the arrival to the departure of their train every inhabitant tried to outdo his neighbor in showering attentions and roses on the Nebraskans. TEA
