TONIGHT'S AMUSEMENTS

The most heroic deed is to save anther's life. The good swimmers aboard lumbia rendered invaluable servthrough their ability to swim. wimming is not a natural power in man. The dog and horse on falling into water are able to swim, and though they are sometimes rather awk-ward at first, yet they are never in absolute danger of drowning. Man, on the other hand, without learning to swim would almost invariably drown in spite of all that has been written to the contrary on the subject. It is true that some people with large chests and with great development of fat are able to support themselves in water, but in the majority of cases the drowning man who trusts to his mere buoyancy will indeed "catch at a straw." This being the case everyone should learn to swim, and even if ladles were taught many lives would be saved, not only of the gentler sex, but of their male protectors, who are often sacri-ficed in attempting to save their charges.
