Fine Exhibits Prepared.

Already fine exhibits have been practically prepared by nearly every county of the state. The grounds have been rearranged, new buildings have been constructed for the housing of the exhibits and many large improvehave been made.

The Oregon Agricultural college and the experiment station are preparing to submit large displays, as are a number of the owners of large farms, who will arrange farm exhibits showing the en-tire products of their establishments.

Track in Fine Shape.

Track in Fine Shape. Lone Fir track, the mile' track at the fair grounds, has some of the fastest harness and running records in the world and it has been worked upon dur-ing the spring and summer until it is in better shape than ever before. The list of entries already made for the events there during the week of rac-ing includes some of the best-known horses on the racing circuit. The fol-lowing are some of the entries that have already been made and their rec-ords:

GREET VISITORS GREET VISITORS Boston's Old Home Week to Be Opened Tonight With Big Celebration. (Journal Special Service.) Boston, Mass, July 27.—Great bon-fires will blaze forth as beacons on the hills of Massachusetts tonight in wel-come to the tens of thousands of sons and daughters of the state returning table and taken seriously in the fullest meaning of the word. Some years ago Astoria was the only station in this district where storm warnings were dis-played, but now they fily from every point of importance along the coast. The service was gradually extended from Astoria to North Head, the two life saving stations at the mouth of the Columbia. Tillamook and Marshfield, in Washington. With warnings at all these places shipping men are consid-tered pretty well protected against going to sea under dangerous conditions. The petition from South Bend was re-retived a couple of days ago, and Mr. Beals acted promptly and favorably. Ing of storm warnings is one of the features of the service.
