The future of Dillon is in the hands of President Cal Ewing of the Pacific Coast league. Ewing can suspend him, can fine him $200, or can kick him out of organized baseball entirely. While I cannot say what Ewing will do, I am certain that he will give Dillon a stiff dose. Ewing is very strict. Moreover, he has repeatedly advised me that Dillon was a bad man—the worst in the league—and has instructed me to enforce the rules to the letter in regard to him. I have advised Ewing by wire of yesterday's occurrence, and will write him a full setting forth all the facts.

"Whether Dillon plays in this afternoon's game or not depends upon the instructions I am hourly expecting from President Ewing." UMPIRE DERRICK.

The ball game at Athletic Park yesterday broke up in a fight. As a result the game was forfeited to Portland, 9 to 0, and the chances are that the career of Frank Dillon as a ball player will come to an abrupt close.

Dillon assaulted the umpire with his fist and the umpire fought back. A dozen blows were exchanged before Pearl Casey jumped between the two with a bat and separated them. The crowd surged upon the field and not a policeman was on hand to preserve order.

Sheriff Stevens took a hand and partially cleared the field. Derrick gave Dillon 60 seconds in which to get off the field and allow the game to continue. When the 60 seconds were up Dillon was still there, and as he is captain of the Los Angeles team and was in sole charge at the time, Derrick announced the game forfeited to Portland.

Who Struck First Blow.

Eye witnesses differ on the question as to which made the first hostile move, the umpire or the player. Dillon says that Derrick struck first. Derrick admits it, but says that Dillon made the first swing but failed to land.

From the press box the fighting seemed to begin on both sides almost simultaneously. Dillon rushed from first base to the plate, called the umpire a vile name and accused him of trying to rob Los Angeles of the game. Derrick ordered him off the field. Dillon's jaw continued its wagging. Derrick raised his mask threateningly. Dillon struck out with his fist, missed, and Derrick dropped his mask and landed on the first baseman's jaw. Then followed a mix-up between the big player and the little umpire in which the little umpire seemed not to have a whit the worst of it.

The play which brought the disgraceful but thrill-producing termination to the game—was ladies' day, too, my!—occurred in the second half of the ninth inning. Portland had a lead, 3 to 2, with the eighth, when Los Angeles made two and took the lead, 4 to 3. Portland came back and evened matters in the second half and then McCredie took off Hartman and put in Califf. Califf did not perform as well as Hartman had been doing and two hits and a run were scored.

Portland came to bat and two men were put out. Califf was the third batter up and the fans started to go. But the pitcher was hit and took his base. Donahue followed and was passed. Mott came up and knocked a hot shot through the middle of small boys and Brammer knocked it down with his bare hand and fielded it in time to throw home as Califf ran in.

The ball and the runner reached the pen at about the same time and the result of the play was in doubt until the umpire called "safe." It tied the score and immediately Dillon rushed in from his position and the fight occurred.

Derrick Defends His Decision.

"The play was very plain," said Derrick this morning before the throw was high and the catcher was up in the air taking the ball when Califf slid in. The catcher never touched the runner, at all, but he touched the letter and I was watching the play closely, as I realized the fact that it was the crucial point in the game. I have always tried to render fair decisions and am extremely sorry this trouble has occurred. I have never before been assaulted by a player, though I have been mobbed by a crowd of small boys after the game.

The future of Dillon may be a matter of speculation for several days. Tim Flood of Toronto merely kicked an umpire on the foot a few weeks ago. He was put in jail for 15 days, was fined and blacklisted.

Powers of the Umpire.

The umpire has nothing to say as to the punishment of a player who assaults him. He can put him out of the game and fine him $25, both of which things Derrick has done. Further than that the matter is in the hands of the president of the league. Derrick has not even the power to prevent Dillon's playing today, unless Ewing so instructs. Derrick has a letter of resignation from Ewing, in which the latter says that he has been informed that Dillon is habitually abusive toward the umpire and that he will take no action in the strictest manner.

Derrick sent the following telegram to the president of the league last night:

"J. Cal Ewing, President Pacific Coast League, San Francisco, Cal. Game this afternoon forfeited to Portland by Los Angeles on account of Dillon's failure to leave grounds after assaulting me. Letter follows."

Dillon's Version of Fight.

It is Walter McCredie's opinion that Dillon will never play in organized baseball again.

"It is all off with him," said McCredie today. "Even if the president of the league should be inclined to be lenient, the national association would not stand for his playing. It is a strict rule in baseball that a player who strikes the umpire is down and out forever after." Dillon says that he will resist any effort to put him out of baseball.

"I simply asked him if he was trying to rob us of the game and he jumped me. He was in the wrong," said Dillon. Derrick says he will take no action of the kind against the ball player.

Frank Dillon is one of the oldest and best-known ball players in the country, as well as one of the best. For years he played first base with the Brooklyn Nationals, standing high both in batting and fielding. Three or four years ago Manager Morley secured him after a hard battle in which Morley had a serious falling out with the president of the Coast league.

Club Selects Team of Relay Swimmers

Nine Multnomah club swimmers competed in an exciting race across the river and back near the Oaks resort yesterday evening. The race was for the purpose of selecting a team which will go against four other clubs in the city in a relay swim which will take place next Saturday afternoon. The four men who finished first were Vern Dent, W. L. Murray Jr., F. S. Korrill and Arthur A. Allen, the men finishing in the order named.

It was at first planned to have each team consist of six men, but the number has been changed to four. Each man will swim one relay, across the river and back, the distance for each being 800 yards. The start of the race will be from the Oaks pontoon and can be easily seen from both sides of the river.

Automobiles have been put to many unique uses time and again, such as running printing presses, hoisting material on construction work, and even turning threshing machines, but Walnut, Iowa, claims to have the original automobile washing machine. William Carstensen, who holds the position of city electrician and engineer, has a penchant for experimentation. Likewise he owns an Oldsmobile of the curved dash variety. Also he has ideas of his own regarding economics and it is painful to him to see a washerwoman bending over a scrubbing board or laboriously churning a regulation washer, washing for his playmate. For years he has played first base with the Brooklyn Nationals, standing high both in batting and fielding. Three or four years ago Manager Morley secured him after a hard battle in which Morley had a serious falling out with the president of the Coast league.

TO DECIDE DISTANCE SWIMMING CHAMPION

(Journal Special Service.)

Boston, July 27.—Not the least interesting of the many athletic and sporting events arranged for the celebration of old-home week in Boston next week will be the swimming races to determine the long-distance champion. The entry of several of the best swimmers of Europe and Canada, together with a large number from various parts of the United States, will give to the event an international character.

The contest is to be a professional one, in that anybody is free to enter, regardless of amateur regulations. The contest will be over approximately a 10-mile course in addition to a hand-some trophy emblematic of the championship. Money prizes will be given also to the winners of the second and third places.

The handsome Ladd cups, which have been fought for through seven long years of tournament tennis in Oregon, will be competed for for the last time in a match which begins on the Multnomah club courts somewhere about 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The competing teams will be Goss and Lewis, and Bellinger and Wickersham, both pairs having captured the Ladd trophies twice in past years. As they are "three times cups" the winners of this afternoon's match will become the permanent owners.

Wickersham and Bellinger are the present holders of the trophies and of the championship of Oregon in doubles. Goss and Lewis yesterday won the right to challenge them in the Ladd cups. Tyler and Armstrong, the pair of players from the sound whose fast work has been one of the features of the tournament, were scheduled to play late in the afternoon. The visiting racket wielders captured the first set 6-4, but lost the second and third, but lost them both after securing this advantage. They also lost the second set and the match went to Goss and Lewis, 4-6, 7-5, 6-4, 8-6.
