

SENATE'S GRAND OLD MAN PASSES AWAY

Edmond Winston Pettus Long, Honorable and Useful Career Closed in a Day by a Stroke of Paralysis—Sketch of a Wonderful Man.

Senator Edmond W. Pettus.

(Hearst News by Longest Leased Wire.)
Hot Springs, N. C., July 27.—United States Senator Edmond Winston Pettus, the "Grand Old Man of the Senate," died at 10 o'clock tonight at his hotel, following an apoplectic stroke with which he was prostrated at breakfast this morning. The aged statesman remained unconscious all day, with physicians in close attendance, but his advanced age made it impossible for him to rally from the shock.

A stroke of paralysis about a year ago left Mr. Pettus in very feeble health. He had been at the springs here since the adjournment of congress in the hope of regaining his health. His granddaughter, Miss Bessie Roberts, was at his bedside when he expired.

Senator Pettus had lived an extraordinarily active and long life before he ever thought of taking his vast knowledge, his great experience in law and his political opinions to congress. He was 73 years old when elected, and he thought he was young—so splendid was his health and strength.

FAKED STORY OF AGED MAN TO GET DATA FOR NEW BOOK

(Publishers' Press by Special Leased Wire.)
St. Louis, July 27.—After nearly every living newspaper of the United States has published special dispatches relating to the story, the romance on a Sunday night two weeks, of John B. Bunden Jr., of No. 3040 Ends avenue, acknowledged today that the statement that he had given out that his "uncle" bearing his name and aged 101 years would be wedded August 24 to Miss Rose McGuire, 100 years old, is a colossal fake.

Bunden Jr., who is a clerk in the United States army medical supply department in South Eighth street, says his purpose in perpetrating the canard was to obtain data for a book he is writing on "longevity." When the papers of St. Louis called upon the nephew for photographs of the old couple, the fake was exposed.

"Rose McGuire" is a South St. Louis woman who agreed to make up for the picture. The apparent wig and beard of the old man brought about the exposure.

SORRY WHEN HE FOUND HIS WIFE

Modern Enoch Arden Returned Home With Fortune in His Pocket.

HAD BEEN ABSENT TWENTY-FIVE YEARS

Found Another Had Taken His Place Meanwhile and Tried to End His Life by Falling in Front of Automobile—Gave Money to Daughter.

(Journal Special Service.)
Rome, July 27.—The up-to-date Enoch Arden must now commit suicide—or at least attempt it. This is the example set by Augustus Nerv, a resident of Voghera, the latest to appear in the role of the returned husband. In Nerv's case, he tried to make his former wife the instrument of his death.

Twenty-five years ago Nerv left his wife and 2-year-old daughter and went to Buenos Ayres. For a time he wrote, and then his letters ceased. The wife tried to trace him, but learned from the Italian consul at Buenos Ayres that he was dead. A year later she married Count Louis Baldi, a wealthy Italian, and they have had five children.

A week ago Nerv returned, having amassed a fortune of $40,000, to claim his wife. But she and the daughter refused to recognize him.

Nerv was heartbroken. He made a will leaving everything to his daughter and then sought death. It was the custom of Signora Baldi and her daughter to take an automobile ride every afternoon. Nerv waited for them and as their car approached at high speed threw himself under the wheels. He is in a hospital, but will recover.

M'GURK'S BODY STILL UNBURIED

Widow and Doctor to Whom Property Was Left Refuse Expenses.

(Hearst News by Longest Leased Wire.)
Seattle, Wash., July 27.—When Patrick McGurk lay dying, a few days ago he made a will leaving his only property possession, a small tract of land on Rainier beach worth about $500 to the attending physician, Dr. E. T. Hanley, and with the understanding, friends of the deceased assert, that the physician should pay the funeral expenses, retaining the balance for professional services.

But McGurk's body is still unburied. Dr. Hanley refuses to pay the internment charges and Mrs. McGurk though said to be amply able financially to do so asserts that she will not. The widow, Dr. Hanley stated, called on her husband at the emergency hospital a few hours before his end and took possession of the only personal effects of value he had left, namely a gold watch.

The undertaker in possession of the body says that if neither Mrs. McGurk nor Dr. Hanley will pay the burial expenses that McGurk's remains will be consigned to the potter's field.

The fire originated in the 11-story storage building owned by the Oliver Finney Grocery company, valued at $300,000, and at 1:45 a. m. (Sunday) is still raging.

OFFICERS GAVE WRONG ORDERS

Columbia Crew Told Passengers to Return to State-rooms, Says Survivor.

(Hearst News by Longest Leased Wire.)
Seattle, Wash., July 27.—The false words of the Columbia's officers, or someone assuming to speak for them, were responsible for the loss of many lives, is the declaration of Miss Mabel Geiger, a survivor and a sister of Professor W. F. Geiger, principal of the Seattle high school. Miss Geiger returned to Seattle today. She said:

"I heard some one, an officer or passenger, but as we all presumed, the former, bidding the frightened passengers to return to their staterooms. And this may have prevented many from dressing who later suffered intensely in the cold water. My traveling companion, Miss Hattie Wright, and I had plenty of time to dress and put on life preservers before the boat sank. Many, however, while scrambling clad were thrown into the water by the waves washing over the deck.

"I was awake at the time of the collision. There was no shock whatever to indicate that anything unusual had happened, and I did not know that we had been struck by another boat until the engines stopped running. This startled me, and I shortly afterwards learned that disaster had befallen us.

"I heard Miss Wright say both of us dressed, put on life preservers and went on deck. There was but little commotion, and I heard advice given to the effect that there was no danger and that all could with safety return to their staterooms. We did not take the advice, but as soon as a lifeboat was placed on the deck we got into it in order to have a place when it was lowered. And we did not act with too much haste. There was no time to lose."

MANSFIELD TO REST FOR TWELVE MONTHS

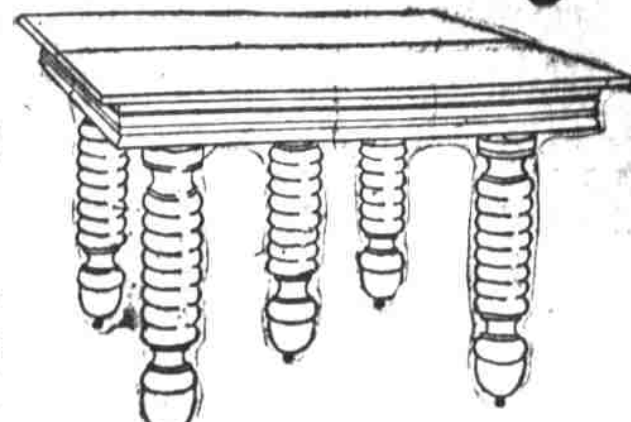

(Hearst News by Longest Leased Wire.)
Montreal, Que., July 27.—Richard Mansfield is resting quietly in his suite at the LeCorona hotel, feeling much better than he has at any time within the last few weeks. He declared today that he would carry out the instructions of his physician, Dr. E. T. Hanley, and rest for a year before attempting to resume his work. A physician was called in today to make a thorough examination of the celebrated American actor, and the medical man's report was of the most encouraging nature.

"Rest," he said, "is all that is necessary for a complete reestablishment within a few months."

Mr. Mansfield is accompanied by his wife and son, his brother, Felix Mansfield, a couple of trained nurses and his courier, Brown, while his manager, B. D. Stevens, has been here since Thursday, and has secured a most luxurious and comfortable suite at the LeCorona.

LOGGING CAMPS CLOSED UNTIL MIDDLE OF AUGUST

Decision Reached at Meeting of Representatives of Interests on the Columbia River—Plenty of Logs Declared to Be in the Water for the Present.

Logging camps along the Columbia river and tributaries will remain closed until the middle of August, so it was decided upon at a meeting held by a majority of the logging interests yesterday afternoon in this city. The camps closed down the Fourth of July for a month with the understanding that another month's vacation might be added should it appear for the best interests of the industry. Some contended for another month's shutdown while others favored resumption of business at once. The fifteen-day period was agreed upon as a compromise.

The reason for the closing down of the camps is found in the fact that the output of logs was greater than the consumption, so that a weakening market appeared inevitable. To prevent this the loggers decided to shut down during the height of summer when help is scarce because of the demand for hands in the harvest fields and at the fishing grounds. It was, however, decided to set together again yesterday so as to feel the pulse of business and ascertain how things stood. The consensus seemed to be that a longer shutdown would prove beneficial since there appears to be an abundance of logs in the water, an estimate placing the quantity at about 50,000,000 feet.

It is understood that men are decidedly scarce for the present owing to the great demand for farm hands in the wheat belts of Eastern Oregon. A number of the men who were laid off the week before the Fourth have gone to the fishing grounds and are not yet ready to return to the tall timbers.

Some concessions were made in cases where the loggers were under contracts to fill certain orders so that a few men may be employed at three or four of the camps after the first of August. The Benson Logging company's camp is in operation sending logs to the rafts that are to be towed to San Diego. This camp is not cutting logs for the market, however, and hence is not taken into consideration as affecting local market conditions.

The concerns represented at the meeting were Muckle Brothers, Deep River Logging company, Oregon Timber & Lumber company, Chapman Timber company, Veyerhaeuser company, Ostrander company, Cowitts County Logging company, L. S. Frank Logging company, the O. K. Logging company, Silver Lake Railway & Lumber company, Ostrander Railway & Timber company, Brix Logging company, Bremner Logging company, Sorenson Logging company, Goodwin Logging company, Jensen Logging company, E. C. Shevlin Timber company, Oak Point Piling & Lumber company, Cowitts River Timber & Logging company, the Ladd & Bourne Logging company.

The logging men maintain no organization but get together occasionally and talk over the business situation. It was decided to obtain figures on the actual quantity of logs in the hands of the loggers so that an intelligent opinion may be formed of conditions and the prospects. The agreement refers only to fir logs, spruce and hemlock not being affected. It was also agreed to henceforth charge $5 a week board from help employed in the camps.

OLIVER ISELIN NEARLY DROWNS

Many Exciting Incidents Attend Boat Race on Long Island Sound.

(Hearst News by Longest Leased Wire.)
New York, July 27.—C. Oliver Iselin Jr., his cousin Isaac Law, Robert Clark, son of Supreme Court Justice J. H. Clark, and other men of prominence today nearly lost their lives in Long Island sound when their racing vessels entered the Larchmont yacht regatta capsizing during a gale. None of the men hurried into the water was injured when the boats overturned, but only prompt aid by other craft effected their rescue.

Exciting incidents characterized the races. Three sloops sank, one was dismantled, several disabled and many of the 75 boats that competed had their sails ripped by the wind, which was powerful that some of the larger vessels went over the course without topsails.

Mr. Iselin, Mr. Law and the crew were in the 18-footer Nora when a tremendous gust struck the vessel and made it turn turtle. The men had no time to jump for their lives.

They were plunged into the water in a heap, but luckily none was beneath the craft. They were soon rescued by nearby yachts.
