USE AMERICAN JUDGE'S PLAN

British Government Adopts Pollard's Method of Deal- ing With Drunkards.

RESULTS OF RECENT VISIT TO ENGLAND

Sentences to Be Remitted if Offenders Take the Pledge and Stick to
It—American's Way of Handling
Inebriates Embodied in Law.

From a Staff Correspondent.
London, July 27.—Judge Jefferson W. Pollard, of St. Louis, has received a great compliment from the British government. What is known as the Pollard plan of dealing with inebriates, who get arrested, has been adopted by the Liberal administration. With some additions it has been incorporated in the government's Probation of Offenders bill. As the Liberals have a big majority in parliament it is sure to go through.

This is the direct result of Judge Pollard's visit here last summer. He came on a pleasure trip, but the temperance folk got hold of him and he was busy expounding his method of dealing with "drunks" who came before his big cities. Explaining his system to magistrates in various parts of the country who were invited to meet him, and discussed it with members of parliament who were specially interested in temperance legislation. All this produced a boom for the Pollard plan.

It consists, as is of course well known in America, in allowing a person who has got into trouble through drink to go free on his own recognizance to come up in a few shillings or upon, provided he takes a pledge not to drink for a year. He is kept under observation during that period and if he fails to stick to his promise he receives the full maximum punishment for the offense for which he was arrested in the first place.

But despite the enthusiasm aroused for the Pollard plan and the demonstrated utility of the ordinary method of dealing with inebriates, English magistrates were very slow to try it. They are, most of them, Tory Conservatives, and above all things averse to any change that might put them to any additional trouble. It is much easier to fine a drunkard a few shillings or send him to jail for a few days than to get him to sign the pledge and see to it that he keeps it. The Pollard plan, as an entirely voluntary plan without any law back of it, may be said to have failed because of the lack of men of the Pollard type on the English bench.

But the temperance folk and prison reformers generally set to work to get the law on their side. Herbert Gladstone, the home secretary, was persuaded to add to the probation bill clauses embodying the Pollard plan. Walter East, the honorary secretary of the National Independence Temperance party, who has labored hard to get it adopted, is delighted with the measure. "This new act," he writes me, "gives magistrates the power to do what they have not hitherto enjoyed. They can release an offender on probation without first recording a conviction. It is the first act of parliament in English history to give magistrates even the discretionary power to compel an officer to abstain if he desires the benefits conferred by the act. It recognizes that a man must be kept from his first offense voluntarily if he desires to purge his offense."

Must Avoid Temptation.
"This act goes even further than does Judge Pollard, as in addition to total abstinence it requires a probationer to keep away from undesirable places, and companions, which means all liquor shops, certain types of music halls, probably race courses, etc. This is a very valuable aid to a probationer towards keeping his pledge. Further, probation officers are publicly appointed and paid to look after probationers and to whom the latter make periodical reports. In the case of a probationer who is arrested and punished for his original offense if he takes even one drink, "by this piece of legislation off are we with this new law provides as a condition of probation: (1) Total abstinence from intoxicants. (2) Abstinence from association with undesirable companions and from frequenting undesirable places. (3) Probation officers publicly appointed and paid who must make periodical visits and reports to the court. (4) Saves the recording of a conviction. (One conviction debarred from entry into the army, navy or civil service.)

Is One Man Plan.
"None of the foregoing are specifically and definitely provided for under existing laws and being now so provided for, there is little doubt that magistrates will exercise these powers very fully. This new law is a great triumph for the Pollard plan on points 2, 3 and 4. The Pollard plan also is a man plan, and the French poets and postasters of the English government, and an attempt to be made a statute law of the land. Surely a great tribute to America. No doubt he will have to bring pressure to bear upon magistrates in some places to apply the method, but public opinion will educate them up to it. Remember every temperance organization in this country is behind it and there is a power there that cannot for long be resisted."

Country Has Returned to Paris.

(Journal Special Service.)
Paris, July 27.—Madame Camille du Gast, the intrepid lady explorer and sportswoman, has just returned to Paris from her mission on behalf of the French agriculture department to Morocco. She arrived in that country last September, when it was in the midst of the disturbance through the murder of Dr. Mauchamp, and French vessels had been sent to demonstrate off the coast. Madame du Gast was received by Mohammed el Torres, the foreign minister of the Maghzen, and by the French representatives, but both refused her safe conduct into the interior. Madame du Gast, turned to my old friend Raisuli, the famous bandit, and he put four horsemen at my disposal as long as I wanted them. For three months my escorts came to fetch me at my hotel and remained with me until the evening. Madame du Gast has spent months in Morocco and she is now preparing her report for the agriculture department. It is of the opinion that a great deal

Paris Looking for Poet.
A committee of the Societe des Gens de Lettres in Paris is looking for a poet, and a poet of just the kind they want they find it very difficult to lay their hands on. When Sully Prudhomme, the veteran French singer, received the Nobel Prize two years ago, he instituted a prize himself to be awarded yearly to the best young poet in France, whose works had not been published.

Finds City Under Water.
It is interesting that the committee has elected as their president Madame de Lessert, the first woman elected to the Societe des Gens de Lettres since Georges Sand.

One of the most wonderful archaeological discoveries of modern times has just been reported from the coast of Tunis. While some sponge divers were out on the other day cruising in a boat on the northern coast, Sfax, one of their number, who had gone down to the bottom to see if there were any sponges, suddenly, to his intense surprise, found himself amid the columns and fallen monuments of some great ruined city on the bed of the ocean.

At first he thought he was the victim

ROYAL COUPLE FAILS TO AGREE

Matrimonial Troubles of Lord and Lady Vivian to End in Court.

(Journal Special Service.)
London, July 27.—There have been many wild rumors concerning the matrimonial troubles of a young peer and his wife, and the latest gossip in the clubs is that the young wife recently attacked her husband with a pair of scissors.

There is probably no foundation for the "scissors" story now being actively circulated, but it is unhappily certain that Lord and Lady Vivian, whose wedding was one of the great functions in the summer of 1903, have agreed to separate after several terrible quarrels. The marriage was at first considered one of the happiest arrangements possible.

Lord Vivian, who is barely 30, and who served with distinction in the South African war, is the brother of the famous maids of honor. The queen herself was much interested in the young couple.

Lady Vivian was Miss Barbara Fanning, a daughter by her first marriage of Mrs. Harry McAlmont, and therefore granddaughter of the late Sir Henry de Batho.

Lady Vivian's handsome widowed mother is a sister-in-law of Mrs. Langtry, now Lady de Batho. Friends of both parties have made strenuous efforts to hush the trouble and for a short time the young couple were reconciled, but now things have gone from bad to worse and it is feared that husband and wife who have a little daughter, will finally have recourse to the law courts. Lady Vivian's father was confined in an asylum for several years before his death.

Husband Works, Wife Spends.
Mrs. Henry Marsh of New York, who made a sensation at Ascot by her beauty and her wonderful gowns, has made such a success in this, her second season in London, that she has determined to be one of the annual invaders.

Mrs. Marsh is talked of as the typical American wife, whose devoted husband goes on making dollars on the other side of the Atlantic for his wife to spend in London and Paris. This misconception, however, arose over the fact that Mrs. Marsh settled down in Park street, enjoyed herself thoroughly, and then planned a "surprise party" in the form of a great evening musical "at home" at which the most expensive "stars" performed, for her husband's arrival.

Mr. Marsh bore up very well under the circumstances and congratulated his wife on her talent for entertaining. Mr. and Mrs. Marsh have again secured Medmenham Abbey, one of the most beautiful places on the banks of the upper Thames, for the summer and they will there have a series of week end parties in August.

Dog Twenty-Six Years Old.
Lusk Correspondence Denver Republican.
Bessie, a collie belonging to S. E. Clark of Northview, is believed to be the oldest dog alive, having attained her 26th year.

Until two years ago the animal refused to take shelter in the adverse weather, preferring to sleep in the snow and wind. She is now able and stout and, but she can see well and her teeth are in a fair state of preservation. Her age is verified by a number of reputable persons who are acquainted with her owner.
