AUTOIST'S SKILL WELL DISPLAYED

Driver Keats Did the Right Thing Instantly When Machine Jumped Track.

While Harry L. Keats' big Matheson machine was going at railroad speed yesterday the righthand front tire exploded and the machine with six men in it jumped the track, plunged down the grade, splintered a two-foot tree stump and smashed into another and larger one, where it stopped with a crash. But for the presence of mind and daring skill of Mr. Keats, who is one of the oldest drivers in Oregon, the six men in the car would have been seriously injured or possibly killed.

Riding with Mr. Keats in the race were Assistant District Attorney Gustavus C. Moser, S. D. Stoddard, Chauncey Thomas, J. W. Blane and H. W. Reibenstein. Only the fact that the stumps were old and rotten and acted as a cushion, the machine would have been reduced to scrap iron and the men killed. It was only by a sudden jerk of the steering wheel that Mr. Keats skinned a large rock by a fraction of an inch on one hand and a large uprooted tree on the other.

"It was a narrow escape," said Mr. Moser last night. "I thought we were done for sure, but there was nothing to do but to stay with the machine. It is the safest place in an accident, although none of us had time to do anything else. It was so sudden that we were riding along as smoothly as you please—when suddenly it was all over and there we were plastered up against that old tree stump with another pile of kindlingwood that we made out of the first one we hit under the front axle. If we had hit that stone or the tree—where?"

ONE HIGHWAYMAN HOLDS UP TWO

Unmasked Thug Secures Money at Point of Revolver From Pedestrians.

Charles Bowen and John Lyons were held up last night by an unmasked man on the Jefferson street railroad track near the foot of Mead street. The highwayman pointed a whitehanded gun at them after having allayed suspicion by asking if a ferry crossed the river in this vicinity. Bowen has $6.70 in small change and Lyons is minus $20 as a result of the meeting. The police were immediately notified and detectives have been detailed on the case.
