A fine, large work horse was overcome yesterday morning at Fourth and Morrison streets with a disease of the spine. A veterinarian was called to see the animal and gave it the remedies usual in such cases. He said that if the horse could be kept quiet for 24 or 48 hours he thought it would recover. A large crowd of amateur horse-doctors were attracted to the scene, most of whom had a sure remedy that they wanted to try on the sick animal, but the owner wisely decided to stay with the professional's line of treatment.

THOMAS F. OSBORN DIES AT SAN DIEGO

Well Known Ex-Portland Exposed and Overworked. Thomas F. Osborn, who 15 years ago was one of the best known and most prominent men in Portland, died recently in San Diego after a brief illness brought on by exposure and overwork. Osborn was the most potent factor in the building of the Chamber of Commerce building, which was put up in the early 90's. He was at that time president of the chamber of commerce, and it was largely through his efforts that the money was raised to construct the handsome office building at Third and Stark streets. Osborn left Portland 10 or 12 years ago, removing to Los Angeles. He engaged in concrete and steel construction work and became one of the most successful builders in southern California. At the time of his death he was engaged in putting up five huge structures in that part of the country. Mr. Osborn was 53 years of age and a native of Missouri. He leaves a wife and five children. His wife is Mrs. C. O. Fraser, Mrs. E. H. Cooke, Thomas F. Osborn Jr. and Neville Osborn.

AT THE THEATRES

New Play at Marquam. "The Story of the Golden Fleece" is the name of the new play that will be given its premiere performance at the Marquam theatre tonight. The play will be interpreted by Nance O'Neil and her company and interest in its presentation is great.

"A Royal Slave." For several years one of the most successful romantic dramas touring the country has been "A Royal Slave." Sullivan & Condon have secured the use of the play for the stock company at the Star this week and will begin its engagement tonight.

"Taming a Husband." Beatrice Moreland, the noted comedienne, assisted by Stanley Johns, will present the headline playlet, "Taming a Husband," at the Grand today and this week. This is one of the best vaudeville comedies on the stage. The bill is a long one and strictly first-class.

"The Road to Frisco." The Lyric's greatest offering of melodrama will be inaugurated tonight when the Allen stock company will present for the first time here the sensational melodramatic success, "The Road to Frisco." This is the only play which reproduces conditions existing before and after the terrible disaster of April 18, 1907.

BESSIE GAYLORD IS OUT TO WIN

Eastern Oregon Contestant Determined to Secure Journal Scholarship.

SHE MAY ALSO WIN AN ALASKAN TRIP

Young Woman Is Very Popular and Is Public School Graduate—Other Contestants Are Equally Anxious to Win Out With Honors.

Miss Bessie Gaylord of North Powder is in the Journal contest to win a scholarship and to lead the contest district of eastern Oregon if possible. If Miss Gaylord leads that district about August 15, she will be allowed to appoint someone to go on a summer vacation trip to Alaska, entirely at the expense of The Journal.

But Miss Gaylord's first and chief purpose is to earn a scholarship in a business college. She is now central at the telephone exchange at North Powder and she also assists on the books of the place where she is employed. She has seen just enough of business life to learn that much previous training and knowledge is required of young women nowadays when they seek good positions and Miss Gaylord desires thorough business education.

She graduated from the eighth grade of the North Powder public schools three years ago and she feels that she has a good foundation upon which to build a special schooling.

For Union and Baker Counties. Miss Gaylord is about to leave the telephone office to devote her entire time to gathering subscriptions in Union and Baker counties. On some of the roads she will travel, the houses are 10 to 15 miles apart, but the people living in them will be quick to respond to her appeal for assistance in the contest.

The farmer of eastern Oregon deals in large quantities of hocks and his herd, in his hay, in stacks, and in his produce by thousands of bushels. When he subscribes for a newspaper it should be in the large way in which he does other things. It should be for the Daily and Sunday Edition and for a whole year in advance.

By securing large subscriptions Miss Gaylord may overcome the handicaps of the grand distances which she will have to travel between settlements.

Over the Blue Mountains. The first contest trip which this young lady will attempt will cause her to cross a spur of the Blue mountains from North Powder to the Pine and Eagle valleys. This drive will cause her to travel over 100 miles.

Her parents live at Halfway and her father, Clarence E. Gaylord, is farming there. Halfway is at the head of the beautiful Pine valley. From this point as a home Miss Gaylord will canvass the fertile Eagle Creek valley, where the farmers always have the money to purchase what they want. This part of Oregon is 50 miles from the railroad but it is so rich that it is prosperous, notwithstanding.

Miss Gaylord may ride up Pine Creek to the Cornucopia mine, which is one of the best quartz camps of Oregon. The quartz miners, gallant to women and generous in the cause of the schools, will give her subscriptions, every man of them she can find above ground.

Will Travel Grand Distances. After canvassing this territory, isolated from the railroad, Miss Gaylord will seek votes at LaGrande, Union, Summerville and Elgin; and she may make a canvass of Baker City. If she does all this she will cover more territory than any other contestant. And to cover all the territory which she has marked out will keep her on the go until the last day of the contest.

Note This Comparison. A Portland contestant in one week's time may canvass more people than

Miss Gaylord will be able to see in a whole month. Yet Miss Gaylord may complete the contest with a larger vote than any Portland city contestant. If she is the persevering, earnest girl that her letters and her photographs show she will become one of the leaders of the contest.

Miss Gaylord's father is a popular among the farmers and stockmen of the Pine Creek country. He belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America and members of that order in that portion of eastern Oregon may contribute subscriptions in her favor. Her mother belongs to the Episcopal church and she will look to that denomination for assistance. During Miss Gaylord's absence from North Powder, her grandmother, Mrs. J. E. Carroll, who is in business there, will receive subscriptions for her.

Living with her parents at Halfway, Bessie Gaylord has a brother and sister, both of whom are about ready to go away to school. The college whose scholarship is won and selected by Miss Gaylord may secure two additional students in her brother Clyde and her sister, Velma Gaylord.

Another Good Traveler. Adam C. Murray of Dayville, Oregon, is one of the contestants who has a scantily populated region to canvass. But he is going up the line toward the head of the contestants who live so far from some others whose fortunes are cast in more densely populated regions.

Dayville is a good trading centre on the John Day river in Grant county, near the Wheeler county line. It is one of the stations on The Dalles Military Wagon road.

Lillian Cochran of Monument, is another candidate in Grant county. Her operations are over a country 40 miles north from Dayville. Both she and Adam Murray have to ride for long distances to get their subscriptions.

Nearly all the postoffices in Grant county are served by the Star Route service and receive their mail six times a week, not on Sunday. Many of the stockmen and farmers live so far from these offices that they visit the postoffices but once or twice a week. Still the settlers in this way many settlements that they easily can afford to take a daily newspaper and pay a year in advance for it.

The Star Route carriers are required to leave mail at all points along their routes where boxes or bags are erected to receive it. In this way many settlements along the stage routes receive their mail daily and many of them take daily newspapers.

In taking subscriptions to be filled in this way contestants should specify on every order the postoffice at which the money for the Star Route carrier are made up.

Patrons of Star Routes may erect on a post any kind of a box or bag which will shed water and which can be served by the stage driver without his alighting from his vehicle.

These points can be borne in mind by contestants working in the country.
