SHERIFF CAN CLOSE

would win the race. In the mile and 50 yards which the horses ran J. B. Smith did not have a call and then the bettor called that particular horse a hound. But he was not the only man at the Milwaukee club yesterday to lose money on the horse races. There were between 40 and 50 visitors in the clubhouse who paid close attention to the entries, watched the betting odds, looked up the best performances of the horses in the books which were hanging about the sides of the betting-room and all of them played and paid, for very few cashed in their tickets.

Portland Head of Resort.
The betting on the horse races was greatly supplemented by the downtown gamblers. These men live in Portland and place their bets at various saloons and cigar stores, the proprietors of which telephone them out to Milwaukee. These downtown places are nothing less than handbooks and the proprietors are liable to fines and imprisonment, the same as the pool sellers at Milwaukee.

The arrangements for pool selling at the Milwaukee club are on a par with any of the eastern clubs and accommodations are provided for the ease and comfort of the bettors. Two windows are maintained for taking bets, while another is employed by the cashier to pay the winners. This last window was the one least used yesterday.

To the right of the pool-sellers, and raised upon an elevated platform, sat a telegraph operator, receiving reports of the races as they were being run off at Seattle and Butte. As the horses lined up at the wire he announced in a stentorian voice: "They're at the wire."

Then, with the horses off, he announced the three leading horses at the quarter mile post, at the half, the three quarters, the stretch and then the winner. The spectators and bettors sat in their seats listening to his voice as if their very lives depended upon the outcome of that particular race.

As the horse which had been picked to win by some devotee would be announced in the lead at one of the posts, a shout of exclamation would escape the tensely drawn lips of the listener, while those whose horses failed to receive a call sat eagerly awaiting some word from their pony as he was gamely struggling hundreds of miles away to win their money.

They could see the horses running and high, and as water: "See, he came down that stretch! What did I tell you about that horse Sheen?"

Lead Odds Wing.
In the handicap race at Seattle, the premier event of the day the crowd plainly showed the excitement prevailing. The betting was quite even, and as the man at the telegraph key announced some flash which changed the odds on a certain horse that was being heavily played at the track several would hasten to the "bookies" to change their bets, hoping by the shifting process to hedge on their losses.

The favorite was Fred Bent, and many dollars were placed in the hands of the deft coin handlers of the club upon him. Bent received one call in the mile and one sixteenth run, while Johnny Lyons won the race at 4 to 1.

Across from the pool-sellers, extending the full length of the long room is a blackboard on which the names of the horses, with their weights and jockeys are written. This board is about 15 feet high, and is lighted by electric lights, making it easy for the bettors to read the odds which a little man with a large moustache was constantly writing down and erasing as the operator announced them from his instrument.

Invitation to Come Back.
His deftness was enticing, and many unfortunates who had lost all their money sat idly by on the benches provided for their comfort watching his rapid movements in writing down the odds.

Going home the better is met at the gate by the "outside" man, whose business it is to watch for interlopers and to give each man two car tickets—one to carry him home and one to bring him back the next day.

The wisdom of this shows the "broad and liberal" policy of the sums of 50 cents and $1. Often these men go to the track with only 50 cents. Were it not for the forethought of the club in providing them with a car ticket they would be 10 cents shy in making a bet and hence the club would be the loser. No straight bets on horse races are taken for less than 50 cents.

Play Gaming Tables Nightly.
The racing boards are covered up in the evening. Lights shine on the green cloth of the gambling tables in the front room where half a hundred men were busy last night losing their money.

Two faro banks, surrounded by players, constantly added to the earnings of the club, and along the wall of the room a roulette table.

Dealer and two poker games sucked the money from the pockets of the visitors. The games were "closed" last night. There were neither heavy winnings nor heavy losses. Not since the first of the week has the routine fitting of vis-stores been jarred out of its usual monotony. At that time a man dropped the balance of the $700 he had been using in an unsuccessful effort to "buck" the games which are run for the benefit of no one else but the man who owns them.

This morning the managers of the resort and the loser met in the office of a local attorney to compromise and a part of the heavy losses were paid back. The loser charged that some of his bets at the faro and twenty-one tables were "pinched" by the cappers who are present to look to the welfare of the club. Apparently, he was able to substantiate his allegations.

This, however, is not the first time that a raffle has marred the operations of the Milwaukee club. The resort is owned by Ike Gratton. Some months ago he made a "wash" sale of the place in order to escape litigation which was threatened.

Two men had won several thousand dollars at the tables. Their luck turned, and as they saw their dollars disappear they threatened to bring suit for the money which they had won from the club and were then losing. The sale was the result and another compromise was effected.

A short time ago all the old dealers at the gambling house were discharged for the reason, it was said, that they had acquired the habit of tipping off some of the patrons on bets so money could be won. The patrons in turn paid a commission to the dealers for the bets they pocketed. Spokane men took the place of those who lost their jobs and new faces now are behind the tables.

Balch Family Reunion. (Journal Special Service.) North Beverly, Mass., Aug. 1.—The descendants of John Balch, who emigrated to America in 1633, held a family reunion here today at the old Balch homestead. The Balch house, which is still practically in its original condition, was built in 1633 and is still occupied by one of the descendants of John Balch. There are supposed to be about 5,000 members of the Balch family now living in the United States.

To Look After Railroad Accounts. (Journal Special Service.) Washington, Aug. 1.—Civil service examinations are being held in various cities today for railroad accountants to be employed by the interstate commerce commission. It is desired by the examinations to create a list of eligibles for employment by the commission in the examination of the books of the railroads, in compliance with the provisions of the new railroad rate law.

Lewis Given Mine Patent. (Journal Special Service.) Washington, Aug. 1.—The forest service has recommended that a patent issue on the gold mining claims of C. C. Lewis in the Hoque river mining district in Blaine forest reserve, Oregon. These claims are being extensively developed and valuable mineral deposits have been discovered. The claims were two groups known as the "Lewis" and the "J. C. L."
