He did not know how much punishment the company could stand, and this is the reason why he summoned John D. Rockefeller and others prominently connected with Standard Oil affairs, so as to learn some of the financial secrets nected with Standard Oil affairs, so as to learn some of the financial secrets of the company which its counsel were either unable or unwilling to tell. The judge found that Mr. Rockefeller knew very little about the affairs of the company of which he is president, and that little he was not sure of. He divulged, however, that the capital of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey, is "about $100,000,000," and that its annual dividends now are "about 40 per cent."

An Appeal Certain, No hint has leaked out as to the pos-No hint has leaked out as to the pos-sible extent of the fine to be imposed tomorrow. The maximum fine for the humber of counts in the indictment is something over $29,000,000, and there are today predictions from persons con-nected with the prosecution that this maximum fine will be assessed. The only excuse which a judge may feel called on to offer in imposing less than the maximum in criminal cases such as this, is a bona fide reason for clemency. On the other hand, such a huge fine as On the other hand, such a huge fine as $29,000,000, if imposed on a company with a capital of only $100,000,000, would look disproportionate, and would would look disproportionate, and would give the company ground on which to make an appeal.

That in any event there will be an appeal from the fine assessed by Judge Landis is certain, and a final decision may be delayed for several years. In the meantime many other indictments against the company for violations of the Elkins law will be pushed to trial. Some of these, in the northern district of Illingia are almost as voluminous as the one on which the recent trial was based. Practically the same kind of evidence figures in all the cases.

At the courthouse yesterday there appeared two men who sought a marriage license. One of of the women deputies, Miss Frances Stradelman, had frequently requested Deputy "Cupid" Rose, who presides at the marriage license counter, to allow her to issue a marriage license, just for the novelty of saying she had done so.
