

ROOSEVELT APPOINTEES DOMINATE U. S. COURTS

Should President Be Given Third Term, He Will Have Named Practically Two Thirds of Federal Judiciary—Power Would be Unlimited in Country.

(Washington Bureau of The Journal.) Washington, D. C., Aug. 6.—If Theodore Roosevelt be reelected for another term, he will by the end of the third term have appointed so many of the judges on the federal benches that he will thus indirectly dominate that branch of the government. This argument has caused even strong supporters of the president to sit up and take notice.

Friends of the president who have been urging his reelection have acutely felt the danger that would result from the too great domination of the government by the executive. They have contended that opponents of the third term be illogical in that they misname the coming term the Mr. Roosevelt when they call it a third, for they refer to it, according to the phrase coined by Senator Bourne of Oregon, as the second elective term, alleging that Mr. Roosevelt in his first term merely carried out the policies of his predecessor, Mr. McKinley.

Judges Already Named. With reference to the federal bench, however, such argument does not apply, for from the moment he took the presidential chair, he began appointing judges in the course of his duty. At the present time, he has named three out of nine members of the federal supreme court, 12 of the 13 circuit court judges, or 41.7 per cent; and 42 of the 80 district judges, or 52.5 per cent. This makes close to 50 per cent of his appointees of all federal judges. By the end of the third term, President Roosevelt may have named seven of the nine supreme court justices, 17 of the 29 circuit judges, and 47 of the 80 district judges. Were he to remain in office another four years after 1909, his appointments would be so large a proportion of the total of the judiciary that it might come dangerously near giving him indirectly complete dominance of the entire governmental structure.

Case of Pritchard. It goes without the saying that as a rule federal judges are men of the highest personal and professional standing, patriotic and minded to conserve the interests of the people. Nevertheless, often the crises which have come in this country have found judges on the bench who reflected the views of their appointers, and just now the case is being cited of Judge Pritchard of North Carolina, who, presuming he was carrying out President Roosevelt's wishes, took untenable ground in the North Carolina controversy with the Southern railway.

Probably the opponents of the third term for Mr. Roosevelt, by raising this issue, have offered one of the most effective reasons why there should be no third term, and those who are managing the third term campaign are not yet prepared to resist the force of the contention.

STREETCAR LINE'S PROGRESS AT EUGENE

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Eugene, Or., Aug. 6.—Five blocks of street railway have been built here by A. Welch, who purchased the franchise from the Willamette Valley company, and it is expected that cars will be running by October 1. The paving work is also getting along well, though no actual paving has been done. Financially the town is busier than ever before in summer.

NO OTHER CITY SO FORTUNATE

PORTLAND HAS AN ADVANTAGE JUST NOW IN THE MUSICAL LINE.

Piano-Seekers Eagerly Take Advantage of the Greatest Sale Yet Inaugurated in Portland—Strike, Riot and Insurance Troubles in San Francisco Compel Diverting to This City of More Than a Hundred Splendid New Pianos, and Eilers Piano House Decides That They Must All Be Sold Within Ten Days—Values Are Positively Astounding—Qualities High, Full Guarantee—They're Going Fast, No Time to Lose.

There is not another city in the United States in which a piano can be bought for as little money, at this particular time, as right here in Portland. Just think of it! A piano retailed at $200 in the usual way offered now for $114; pianos regularly retailed at $300 now at $171; $400 pianos out to $228; regular $500 styles, choicest, highest-grade mahogany or figured wood cases, now for $285. Such values as these on fine new pianos have never been known before. And these are instruments from the very best known factories—makes of thoroughly established reliability—makes that carry the most specific and binding guarantees from each of the respective makers, and countersigned by Eilers Piano House here.

Quick Sale Main Object. Of course, there is bound to be money lost on these instruments, for profits have been eliminated, and all other considerations forgotten in the determination to get these instruments out of the way within a fixed time so as not to conflict with regular business later. Both of our large display windows are filled with these pianos, also our recital hall. The red tags tell the price story. A glance at the instruments and the selling figures will demonstrate to any one instantly that it is a selling event unparalleled. Such an opportunity as this has positively never before presented itself to piano-seekers anywhere on the Pacific Coast—North or South.

Terms are cash, in view of the radical sacrifice, but we'll stretch a point, if need be, and those who will pay half down and the balance within a year, at the usual eight per cent simple interest for deferred payments, may share the same as the spot-cash buyers.

Big Business Yesterday. The first day and a half's business proved a splendid success. A salesman was busy every minute of the day and away along into the evening. There's no time to lose; quick action is the word. The more you come, the better selection you will have. If you cannot come in person, write, phone or wire to have an instrument reserved, and you can arrange for the piano by mail; remember, we guarantee absolute satisfaction, and upon receipt of ten per cent of the sale price, as an evidence of good faith, we will ship a piano anywhere for examination and selection; money to be refunded by us if the instrument is not in every way exactly as it is shown in Eilers Piano House, 253 Washington street, Portland, Or.

We have so much faith in our bargains and know we undersell all competition so decisively that we ask you to come just once, that is, if savings of 10, 25 or even 50 per cent are of any consequence to you. No buying is necessary. Just the pleasure of a visit, THAT'S ALL. Will you come?

VALUABLE GROUND AT EUGENE FIRE-CLEARED

Ten Thousand Dollars' Worth of Buildings Will Be Replaced With Modern Masonry.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Eugene, Or., Aug. 6.—Eugene suffered a $10,000 fire yesterday afternoon, when the Oregon hotel, a cheap lodging house, burned, taking with it five business houses and threatening a catastrophe to the whole business portion of the town. The fire started from a defective flue. One of the surprises of the disaster was the discovery of a blind in the back of the hotel. Some boys discovered it first and drank their fill of beer. The heaviest losers were Murray & Cherry, wallpaper and painters, $2,500, with $400 insurance; Cherry Brothers, $500 on buildings; Eugene Dye works, $2,000, and James Sanford, $1,000. The buildings were all wooden and were disgraced to the town. James Sanford will begin the erection next month on his land of a modern brick structure 200x200 feet to cost $15,000. The rest of the ground is very valuable and it is likely that a costly building will go up there also.

BURIAL OF PIONEER THOMAS J. GREGORY

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Roseburg, Or., Aug. 6.—Funeral services in memory of Thomas J. Gregory, one of the old pioneers of the state and an old and honored resident of this city, were held at Hubbard Sunday, the pastor of the Canby Methodist church officiating. Mr. Gregory died last Friday at the advanced age of 89 years. He was born at Elizabethtown, North Carolina, May 15, 1818. At an early age he was left an orphan and spent the first years of his youth in Virginia. In 1848 he came across the plains to Oregon, where he has since resided. Mr. Gregory was married twice, his first wife living only a year after her marriage. His second wife, who died 19 years ago, was widely known as Olive Dimmick Van De Walker Pierce and was an aunt of Judge Dimmick of Oregon City. Mr. Gregory was found dead in his bed Friday morning, having retired on the previous evening apparently in good health. He has four living children: Mrs. Olive Nevin of Weston, Mrs. Minta Newman of Napa, California, Mrs. Nannie Fingleton of Portland and Moore Gregory of Roseburg.

Dust in the Home.

That not only great minds but that the ordinarily intelligent minds of the many run in the same channels, is one of the advantages of present day enlightenment.

Not long ago we had in this city an interesting meeting of the Consumers' League, when, if you remember, the question came up of eliminating dust as far as possible from the things that we eat. One of the speakers urged "Banish the feather duster," and everybody agreed. Now, in an eastern paper, we find an article which tells of a meeting held in Atlantic City, when a distinguished speaker is quoted as saying "The feather duster," and the people said "amen."

It does not require any great perspicacity to see that all the energy that up to this time in the history of the world has been expended in brandishing a feather duster has been uselessly spent. No particles of dust has ever been destroyed by it. All it can do is to move the dust from the place where we see it to the place where we do not see it, or into the air, to be taken up again in the lungs of the inhabitants of the house.

A moist cloth will do all that the feather duster can do with advantage, and will not do that which the feather duster does to our disadvantage. Surely if we could think about the things that we eat, one of the speakers urged "Banish the feather duster," and everybody agreed. Now, in an eastern paper, we find an article which tells of a meeting held in Atlantic City, when a distinguished speaker is quoted as saying "The feather duster," and the people said "amen."

At this same meeting the stand was taken by the speaker that legislative enactment is advisable against the wearing of trailing skirts in the street. Isn't it odd that we women who pride ourselves so largely upon being model housekeepers and guardians of childhood, who know that we know more about these things than all the public orators who ever spoke, should still persist in doing things which are directly contrary to even common sense and subversive of the common ethics? It is trailing skirts, graceful, is dignified, is satisfactory—no, it is not. On the formal gown, which is worn only in exquisitely clean rooms and on occasions of importance, it has its rightful use. In the home, on soft negligees or summer gowns, it is pretty and unobtrusive, but it surely needs no lecturer from the far eastern coast to tell us that in the street it is a nuisance and a ridiculous germ catcher. Fortunately there are in the independent ways of serving them, they are always a valuable friend to the cook and a useful "standby."

It is a wise plan to have a dish of fruit, either fresh or stewed, always on the breakfast table.

Here are two recipes for fish breakfasts.

Welsh fish cake—Required: About a pound of any cold boiled fish; six ounces of cold potatoes; six ounces of bread-crumbs; one onion; a bunch of sweet herbs; salt and pepper; one teaspoonful of minced parsley; one egg; bread-crumbs for coating; one pint of water. Put the water in a saucepan with the bones and trimmings of the fish, the onion, herbs, etc., and let these stew steadily from one and a half to two hours. Chop the fish finely and mix with it the mashed potatoes, minced parsley, and salt and pepper to taste, beat up the egg and add enough to it to bind the mixture. Shape it into one round cake, brush it over with beaten egg and cover it with crumbs. Melt about an ounce of dripping in a frying pan. When a blue smoke rises from it put in the cake and fry it to a golden brown. Strain the fish stock, pour it half at a time into the pan, and let the cake stew gently for fifteen to twenty minutes. Serve it very hot, garnished with fried parsley and slices of lemons. This cake may be heated over and over again, either in a frying pan with a little dripping or in the oven, should it not be finished at one meal.

Herring au gratin—Required: Three or more herrings, two ounces of bread-crumbs, one ounce of butter, two teaspoonfuls of chopped parsley, salt and pepper. Wash and fillet the herring.
