223d FRIDAY ECONOMY SALE

Hostess and Guest.

It is now when the stress of duties are laid aside for the time, when the daily grind of things is relaxed and we allow ourselves to expand and take a good deep rest enjoyment in living, which we usually grudge ourselves, that we permit ourselves the pleasure of being the hostess of the guest.

It is not always easy on either part, much as we wish it to be. There are little difficulties to be overlooked, little twists of character to be allowed for, little omissions and commissions to be atoned for. It requires tact on both sides.

In the case of the hostess, there exists the necessity for making the guest feel at home all over the house—not in the spot only. The guest who feels that she is caged is apt to grow restive. Then to be the right kind of a hostess requires that the guest's individual preferences should be taken into account—not in the planning of meal hours and foods—for in these things the prevailing rule of the house is not supposed to be changed for the guest, but in the matter of entertainment. The wise hostess will know that the quietest of guests will not want the same sort of entertainment as the boisterous one. The athletic girl. To some girls the visit away from home may be made fully delightful with books and strolls in the woods, and an enjoyment of nature. This is the kind of girl that is the easy guest.

For another it may be necessary to plan tennis tournaments, horseback rides and dances. The girl who must be doing something all the time is the difficult one. Young men are absolutely necessary to the happiness of some girls, and if only one is available he is apt to find his attention as eagerly sought as though they were diamonds.

This again makes a difficult guest, for the hostess does not like to be made responsible for the possible misunderstanding which the girl who is availing of attention generally leaves behind her.

It is a safe rule to follow in the summer visiting to leave before the welcome has had a chance to cool. A most uncomfortable thought to find or to suspect that one has tarried a minute too long.

The guest room may be wanted for another guest, and it is to be remembered that in general the girl who waits upon herself somewhat, instead of imposing extra labor upon the servants is desirable rather than the opposite type, and the girl who is sufficient unto herself always for a certain time each day is sure to leave a pleasant memory.

To help or not to help with the housework is another question which can only be answered in the individual home and by intuition. No hard and fast rules avail here, for sometimes the one who needs the help is the one who prefers not to have it. The only thing one can do then, is to make as little trouble as possible and to try to make up in some other way—amusing the children, for instance, or helping with the sewing or finishing a piece of long-delayed fancy work.

The best thing of all to take visiting with one, when at a cottage or sea shore, or camp or villa, and whether the stay be over night or for a fortnight, is a cheerful spirit, a willingness to be entertained, and a disposition to accept the kindness implied in the invitation, in the spirit in which it was proffered.

Mrs. Eddy on Babies.

Mrs. Clapp, who was at one time an amanuensis for Mary Baker G. Eddy, and who has been confiding her recollections of that experience to Georgine Milmine of McClure's magazine, believes that she copied one of the early drafts of "Science and Health." She recalls many passages, and remembers her amusement in copying the following passage, which now occurs on page 413 of "Science and Health":

"The daily ablutions of an infant are no more natural or necessary than would be the process of taking a fish out of water every day and covering it with dirt in order to make it thrive more vigorously thereafter in its native element."

After Mrs. Clapp had finished copying the manuscript, Mrs. Glover took it to Boston to find a publisher. Six hundred dollars came in advance as the only condition on which a publisher would undertake to get out the book, and Mrs. Glover returned to Stoughton and vainly besought Mrs. Wentworth to mortgage the farm to raise money.

How to Put on Braids.

There is one machine attachment that does not receive the attention it deserves from the home-dressmaker; this is the braiding attachment, says a writer in the Ladies' World. It is simplicity itself, and by its use some very effective trimmings may be made at very little trouble. The narrowest of soutache braids, in cotton, wool or silk, are employed profusely this season upon all kinds of materials, and when you have tried the braiding attachment for their application, you will be fascinated with the effect. If it is only a line or two of braid, it may be more evenly applied by machine than by hand.

Suggestions for the Housekeeper.

Milk changed from a cool atmosphere to a hot kitchen will sour in a very few minutes.

Picture frames when covered with specks may be cleaned by wiping with a cloth dipped in kerosene.

Coffee, when bought already ground, easily loses its strength or flavor, even though kept in closed cans or jars.

In dusting bric-a-brac and statuary, a small soft camel's-hair brush is useful when cleaning out the crevices, where dust-cloth cannot reach.

OPERATORS LEAVE LOS ANGELES KEYS

Refusal of Western Union to Reinstate Man Causes a Walkout.

(Journal Special Service.)
 Los Angeles, Aug. 8.—Because the Western Union company refused to reinstate Operator Ryan, whom the officials accused of delaying messages, 50 members of the local union of the Commercial Telegraphers of America left their keys last night, leaving but five men to work the wires.

Officials of the union say they are sorry the men were so hasty in their action, but that they had been discriminated against by the company and were justified in walking out.

Superintendent Lamb of the Western Union offices declares that the grievances as drawn up by the operators are a tissue of lies, and that he is willing to see any operator as an individual but not as a union man.

FRUIT EXPERTS MEET AT PURDUE UNIVERSITY

(Journal Special Service.)
 Lafayette, Ind., Aug. 8.—This was another interesting and profitable day for the many fruit growers gathered at Purdue university in attendance on the annual meeting of the Indiana Horticultural society. A considerable part of the forenoon was taken up with practical demonstration work in spraying. The demonstrations were conducted in the experiment orchard connected with the university.

The program at the afternoon session included addresses as follows: "Our Insect Friends," Prof. James Troop, of Purdue; "Commercial Orcharding," Prof. J. C. Whitten, of the University of Missouri; "The Value of the Pure Food Law to Horticulturists," Dr. H. E. Barnard, state food and drug commissioner of Indiana; "Effects of Commercial Fertilizers on the Quality of Potatoes," Prof. S. D. Conner, of Purdue.
