

MRS. RUBY, ABORIGINE, SAYS THAT SHE IS 111 YEARS OLD

Mrs. Ruby and Her Granddaughter, Rosella.

Mrs. Ruby is a full-blooded Indian who may be seen at Rainier, Oregon. She is one of the last of the Oregon City tribe and to the best of her knowledge is 111 years old. The photograph from which the sketch is made was taken by a young woman of Rainier, to whom Mrs. Ruby had taken a liking, and the sitting was granted as a special favor. The child shown in the picture is Rosella Ruby, a grandchild. Mrs. Ruby claims to have an aunt on the reservation who is very many years her senior.

DEADLY ASSAULTS UPON ALL EUROPEANS

Police Are Unable to Cope With the Situation and Firearms Are Being Smuggled into Hands of Rebels by Sympathizers.

(Journal Special Service.) London, Aug. 8.—A reliable source is authority for the statement that the colonial office, after many delays, has at last received full reports of the rising in disaffected Bengal districts. It appears that the serious nature of the situation is hardly realized in other parts of India or at home. Whereas a few years ago such discontent as existed was confined to a few pleaders and clerks, the dissatisfaction has now spread not only among the landlords and Bengal aristocracy, but among the peasants and coolies. All reports agree that the dissatisfaction was the result of a campaign of agitation directed from Calcutta, the agencies employed being not only the press and the platform, but the active organization known as National Volunteers, which has local branches in almost every town and village. The volunteers are being trained in archery and in the use of sticks and swords by well paid professional instructors. They preach everywhere revolt against the rule and actively push a boycott, terrorizing those using or selling British goods. Men who cannot be threatened and still maintain relations with the British officials are punished by means of social boycott, which is the deadliest weapon that can be employed against the Hindu.

Tales of Lawlessness. Hundreds of tales of lawlessness and oppression on the part of the national volunteers come from every district. The rural police are too weak, and in some cases, too disaffected, themselves, to take action. Several landholders have actually usurped executive and administrative powers, flogging and imprisoning their tenants. In the Barisal district it is a well-known fact that committees of public safety, after the type of the French revolution, have been

"Artistano" The Player Grand Piano

In the June 15th issue of The Musical Courier there appeared this paragraph regarding player-pianos: "One queer phenomenon has been made as to why no one has to this date arisen and perfected a piano as does the interior player of the upright. The first effort of the Wilcox & White Company in this direction seems to have lain dormant. There have been various announcements as to the grand pianos as yet there does not seem to have been placed on the market a commercial possibility. This feature of the player development has attracted the attention of the inventors in the pneumatic field, and possibly there may be developments that will allow of the placing of the interior player." It was not thought when these lines were written within a week after there would be presented to the world a grand player that would contain all the good qualities of the upright player, and yet it has been done; the piano has made its debut in the musical world in a concert, and this, before one of the most cultured audiences possible to assemble. This was not done in the East—the grand pianos are perfected in the West, and, naturally, its debut was in the West. The localities were Reno, Nev., and Chicago was the place of its artistic introduction. The maker of this success is the player, the A. B. Chase Company, of Newark, Ohio. The event which served to introduce to the musical world this marvelous invention was a concert given under the auspices of Grovesboro, Lapham & Co., the A. B. Chase representatives of Chicago. The place was the Music Hall on the lake front, and the artists were C. Arthur Longwell and Frank Hemstreet, baritone, both of New York City. The program was as follows: Ballade, Op. 10, No. 1, Chopin; Sonata, Op. 14, No. 3, Handel; Barcarolle, Op. 10, No. 1, Liszt; Liebesweiser, Op. 10, No. 1, Liszt; To Anthea, Op. 10, No. 1, Liszt; Winds in the Trees, Op. 10, No. 1, Liszt; May Morning, Op. 10, No. 1, Liszt; Rhapsodie Hongroise, No. 12, Liszt; Aria, Violon Fugitiva, from Herodiade, Op. 10, No. 1, Liszt; Grand Polonaise in E Flat, Op. 10, No. 1, Chopin. To indicate how the Chicago press viewed this event, the following is clipped from the Evening Post: "An event of unusual importance in the musical world took place at the Music Hall Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock, when a gathering of critics and music lovers assembled to listen to a piano and vocal recital given by C. Arthur Longwell, of New York, assisted by Frank Hemstreet, baritone, of the same city, introducing the 'Artistano.' The Artistano was apparently a beautiful grand piano of conventional design and shape such as seen every day upon the concert stage. After a few minutes before the piano Mr. Longwell quickly brought up and in front of the keyboard, as if by some magic, a simple contrivance in which to place a perforated music roll. Just as quickly and easily there appeared a set of foot pedals from the base of the piano, with which to operate the mechanism hidden—the audience knew not where. And, lo! a grand piano was transformed into a player grand, which is known as the A. B. Chase Artistano. A dream was about to be realized. The music was made to flow from the piano under the unique distinction of being the first player grand piano in the world to be played in public concert. And wonderful it looked, too, in its rich mahogany casing, flanked with a stage setting of palms. The music was transmitted to the ears of the audience by the greatest of the world's pianists, the appreciation of effort was to be the greater, and it was difficult to believe that a well-trained human hand was not sweeping through the brilliant passages, dealing tenderly with the softer passages and dwelling upon meanings that the fingers of no one but an artist can draw from piano keys after years of mature experience. Under Mr. Longwell's mastery of the Artistano, together with his scholarly interpretation of the music, the performance rose higher and higher and reached a climax long before the close of the program. Mr. Hemstreet, with a glorious voice, sang with fine understanding his two contrasting arias, 'Etonna and Arma' from 'Ramses' and 'Vision Fugitive,' from 'Herodiade,' while his group of songs served to show again by contrast his vocal artistry and his accomplishment in singing. The part of an accompanist, which is always a difficult task, was played in a musicianly manner by Mr. Longwell. That this could be accomplished with a well high invisible player mechanism was marvelous and the exquisite smoothness and accuracy of the skilled accompanying was another triumph for the Artistano. The artistic success of this music was beyond question. We predict no less a commercial success as its conception marks a tremendous advance in the player playing world, and its arrival is opportune. The most important thing is the manner in which the player mechanism is placed in the A. B. Chase grand. The quality of the instrument goes without the saying—to simply say A. B. Chase settles that in the minds of people who know the merit of the Chase piano—but the how of the mechanism part, the player grand is what will interest those who have been waiting and watching for the grand player. As to the success of the grand, that was demonstrated in an artistic way at the concert. It is a success artistically, no doubt about that. It is a success commercially, no doubt about that. Mr. Longwell and Mr. Hemstreet are to appear in this city early in September and the music-loving public are assured a real treat. The player grand will be on exhibition at Sherman, Clay & Co.'s piano house, corner of Sixth and Morrison streets, opposite postoffice.

formed. These committees hold judicial inquiries, summon witnesses and punish offenders. The government has exhausted its reserves of police and borrowed companies of Gurkhas from Assam and military police from other provinces. These are posted in small batches in the larger villages and at the river stations, but they are unable to prevent the persecution of the loyalists. The worst feature of the situation, however, is the growing number of assaults upon Europeans. Recently 15 assaults have taken place on the Assam-Bengal railway alone. One guard had his skull fractured, another had an eye put out. The first and second-class carriages, containing European passengers, are nightly pelted with stones. To add to the general uneasiness, a European police inspector named Crabbe, was murdered while attempting to arrest some train thieves at Chandpur. Moreover, the impression is gaining strength that firearms are filtering from Calcutta and Chandernagore into eastern Bengal. The Calcutta police are also making strict inquiries, and have arrested a number of persons, one in a bazaar, almost within a stone's throw of the central police station. There is a growing feeling among the non-official Europeans that the government should strengthen the police in eastern Bengal with regular troops, preferably British, and should also take the sternest measures against the National Volunteers and seditious orators and newspapers. Another feature of the present situation is that all over Bengal national schools, financed entirely by Bengalis, and disclaiming all connection with the government, are springing up.

Francisco-German Situation. The possibilities of a Franco-German understanding, which has recently been debated in the German press, is still being discussed by many of the Paris journals. From the tone of the articles, one readily sees that French opinion in regard to Germany has changed but little since the war of 37 years ago. Alsace-Lorraine is still the great stumbling block in the road of a complete reconciliation between the two peoples. France, laying Gambetta's advice to heart, does not talk of the lost provinces, but she ever thinks of them. The consensus of opinion seems to be that no French government would exist 36 hours if it dared to say officially that Alsace-Lorraine was no longer French, and that which Alsace-Lorraine was a Frenchman perpetuates for an understanding between France and Germany would be so much waste of time. The quickest way to arrive at an understanding would be to tear up the treaty of Frankfurt. The report of the Prussian minister of railways, just published in Berlin, shows that the state railroads have yielded a net profit of $12,512,405 for the year 1906. It is understood that nearly two-thirds of this amount will be devoted to a general improvement in the service. The official trade statistics of South Australia for 1906 show that the imports amounted to $3,111,320 and the exports $2,828,555, which are record figures. The exports of staple products show remarkable increases.

MUSICAL TREAT IS SURE AT CITY PARK

De Caprio Aranges Program Including Some Great Compositions.

Those who attend the band concert at City Park this afternoon will enjoy a musical treat. Sig. De Caprio has selected a program that includes some of the greatest compositions written for band. Among these is the "Dances Macabres" or "Skeleton Dance," by Saint-Saens, a masterpiece of vivid descriptive writing. A company of skeletons arise from their graves in an old country churchyard one moonlight night and hold high revels there. Their dance gets wilder and wilder until the crowing of a distant cock warns them that dawn is at hand, and that ghosts must lie low. All hurry back to their coffins but one poor wretch loses his bearing and utters loud moans of distress until at last he finds his gruesome bed, and the last sound is the rattle of his bones as he drops into his waiting coffin. Other numbers of particular note are Grieg's Peer Gynt suites and the new grand selection "Sylvia" by Delibes. The concert begins at 7:30 o'clock sharp. Following is the program in full: Coronation March (by request)... "Misery" from "Il Trovatore" (by request)...

A PRIVATE'S HEROISM. Facing Death, Richard Kirkland Carried Water to Wounded Soldiers.

It is one of the anomalies of war that although it stirs the savage nature of mankind it also calls out the highest qualities of courage, unselfishness and devotion. Many a deed of martial heroism is done in the name of mercy rather than of the god of battle. No description of a fierce charge, says the Youth's Companion, records more determined valor than does the story of Richard Kirkland as told by General Kershaw. Kirkland was a private who served in the South Carolina volunteers during the civil war. After the bloody battle of Fredericksburg his brigade occupied the road near the field. One hundred and fifty yards beyond the field lay the federal troops, and between the ground was covered by the dead and dying. All day long the air was rent with the cries and groans of the wounded, and the pitiful calls, "Water! Water!"

RUBY INDUSTRY. Ruby Mining Disappointing Compared With Hunt for Diamonds.

In Mogok they see everything in a ruby light, men women and children. Every visitor must want to buy, they think. However hungry or thirsty the traveler may be on arrival, the first thing he hears spoken of is rubies. All Mogok seems to be fishing with bamboo holsters, says W. G. Fisser, aid in the Technical World. And they are fishing—for rubies, in the precious "beyond" that rivals in richness the famous "blue ground" of Kimberley. But no industry is more uncertain than winning the rubies in Burma. One tunnel was supposed by the local engineers to contain $10,000,000 worth, yet it seemed to fissure out suddenly. The monopoly abandoned it, after spending much time and money, and then came along a few gentle, almost sweet shafts and made an immense fortune out of the derelict mine. A very few fine rubies enormously value a great quantity of rough pale stones. But when all is said rubies yield in slow and disappointing work and rarely averages more than $1,000 for each acre treated. It is shrewdly suspected by the white men in Mogok that the richest mines of all are at this moment growing in secret crops of poor grain belonging to the fanatical natives who literally place "rubies" on the hillsides by the land and manners of their forefathers. The Democrats and Republicans of Burma have made the rubies a party issue on the tickets at the first general election. It is said that the British government is now in the process of making an expedition to Mogok to permit the proposed fusion of the rubies.

DEATH OF RICHARD KIRKLAND

In the afternoon, as General Kershaw sat in the upper room of his headquarters overlooking the field, Kirkland asked permission to speak to him. "General," said the young man, "I can't stand it. 'Stand what, sergeant?' 'All night and all day I've heard those poor people crying for water. I came to ask permission to give them a drink.' 'Kirkland,' responded the general, 'don't you know that if you stop over that wall you'll get a bullet in your head?' 'I know it, but I am willing to try.' 'The general considered a moment. 'I ought not to allow you to run such a risk,' he said, 'but I cannot refuse your request. Turning God will protect you.' The sergeant's eyes lighted with pleasure. 'Thank you, sir!' he said heartily and ran down the stairs. When he reached the bottom of the fight he hesitated, turned and ran up again. 'General, can I show the white handkerchief?' 'No, Kirkland, you can't do that.' 'All right! I'll take the chance,' and he was off again. From the windows of the house the officers watched him run across the road and climb the wall. He made his way quickly to the nearest sufferer, raised the poor fellow's head on his arm, and gave him a long draught of cool water. From one he went to another until his purpose was so plain in the eyes of the federalists that all danger was over. From all parts of the field came the piteous appeals; again and again Kirkland had to return for water, and he spent an hour and a half in ministering to the needs of the wounded. Then he rejoined his company unhurt. At Chickamauga, Kirkland fell. His example was one which dignified all humanity. Metzger & Co., Jewellers, 242 Wash.
