Keen sense of the nose. Horace Seymour Keller. Lobsters From the Deep Sea. From the Kennebec Journal.

A Maine fisherman, believing that there are just as many lobsters as ever, set his pots away out on Cash's banks, in the path of the ocean steamships, and when he hauled them he found 2,500 splendid specimens, none of them less than 10 inches and most of them nearer than 10 inches and most of them nearer 15 and 20.

It is his theory that various causes may have driven the crustaceans away from the shore, but that there are still plenty of them if one can ascertain their whereabouts. His views will undoubtedly prompt other fishermen to act along silimar lines in setting their pots, and it is to be hoped that the pessimistic views so frequently expressed of late will be disproved.

The lingeric collar and cuff sets are still very fashionable and are worn by well-dressed women. Their shape and style is much varied, some of the cuffs being from four to six inches at their deepest part. There are sets of fine linen with embroidered edges and rosebuds of French knots worked on them. Those of heavy linen have eyelet embroidery, and others have insets of Irish or some other crochet lace. The long sleeve is general favorite at present, although short ones are not at present, although short ones are not abandoned because of their coolness and comfort. Many summer gowns are this will remove the white mark and made up with the transparent mitten the wood may then be polished with sleeves, which almost conceal the hands. 30, 30, 30, The American Hat Does It.

The qualifying of a man immigrant for American citizenship takes time, and supposedly some degree of intelligence. It is different with his spouse, so a writer in the New York Sun says. She doesn't care whether or not she learns anything about voting or pulls or jobs, neither is she obliged to await the passing of many months.

The minute she has the price of a new hat and can get to a millinery shop she adopts America. The American hat Americanizes the immigrant woman.

If there is any doubt about this statement watch the incoming immigrants at the Barge office down at Battery Park. Invariably after the first greet-ings are exchanged between the new-comers and waiting American friends or relatives the immigrant woman's gaze will wander to the creation that tops the crowning glory of her Ameri-can woman friend.
