OLDEST WOMAN OF NORTHWEST

Claim for Mrs. Julienne Gustolock, Who Died Yesterday.

SHE WAS AN INDIAN OF SNOHOMISH TRIBE

Remembered First White Man's Coming and Long Years Back of That—Memory Clear to Last—Home Near Sylvan, Washington.

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Tacoma, Wash., Aug. 29.—Mrs. Julienne Gustolock, supposed to be the oldest Indian in the northwest and without doubt the oldest human being in the state of Washington, died yesterday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George Hughes, near Sylvan on Fox Island. The exact age of Mrs. Gustolock, whose Indian name is not known here, was not known, but the Indians of the Snohomish tribe, to which she belonged, who are nearly a century old themselves, claim she was a woman well advanced in years when they were children. Mr. Range, a rancher living adjoining the Hughes' place of Fox Island, who has taken a great interest in the age of Mrs. Gustolock and has made investigations, has arrived at the conclusion that she is not less than 120 years of age, and she may be, he thinks, 125.

Remembered First White Men. The memory of the woman, which was very vivid and clear up to a few weeks ago, would indicate great antiquity. She remembered when the northwest was an unbroken wilderness, and also when the first white men put in an appearance. She remembered clearly when the first "big fire canoe" plowed up the waters of the Puget sound and also when the first sawmill was built, about eighty years ago. The coming of the Hudson Bay people was also well remembered, as well as the first white people that drove wagons across the Rockies and Cascades to the north. At the time the most of these events took place she was a woman well advanced in life.

Going back beyond these matters of common history she remembered many Indian wars and the internecine strife that shook tribal relations in the sound region. She could also recount several of the battles growing out of the age-long feuds between the Yakimas and Kluckwats and the Siwash Indians of the sound region. The Indian wars in which the red men made their last concerted attempt fifty years ago to destroy the whites of the Puget sound region she remembered as though its incidents of war and hazard took place but yesterday.

She Lived to be a Mummy. The woman's appearance showed an extraordinary weight of years. She was bent almost double and her features and skin had the parchment look of tanned leather. Her face was one mass of wrinkles and the passing of time seemed to have written every body to skin and bone. Ernest Hall, a Hooska's undertaking establishment of this city, who went out to Fox Island to care for the corpse, says that great age seems to have almost taken away the physical characteristics linking her with humanity, her body being decrepit and dourly and her features furrowed and contorted indescribably.

The Indian name of Mrs. Gustolock is not known, nor is the place of her birth. Her husband died eight or ten years ago, he being almost as old as she was.

Never Sick to Her Dying Day. Mrs. Gustolock, so her daughter and those who care for her say, had the unusual experience of living nearly a century and a quarter without taking a dose of medicine, or even being sick. It was two months ago when her coming dissolution was presaged. She complained some but was able to get about and kept her feet to the day of her death. Sunday morning she was sitting in a chair in front of the doorway of her daughter when death came. Without a word she sank, life being extinct when her daughter reached her side.

AT THE STOCK THEATRES

The Star this week is playing "The Tie That Binds," a drama of New York life and a representation of present day social conditions. The piece deals with the experiences of a man who marries a young woman who, however, in a short time becomes insane and is sent to a private sanatorium where she is supposed to die. The widower in time marries a young and beautiful girl by whom he has a daughter. The villain in the play brings back the Spanish wife and confronts the happy couple with her, she at last is taken back to the hospital and afterward dies, upon which the child reunites the separated husband and his young wife.

The production is full of thrilling situations and fire and the lines give the cast ample opportunity to bring the audience up to and beyond the point of eager applause.

Carlton Ruthledge, the man in the case, is played by Earl Dwire. Minnie Gerahel fills the role of the insane wife. The parts throughout are well sustained and taken all in all the bill for the week is a successful one. It will continue throughout the week with the usual matinee.

At the Lyric this week "The Girl From Albany" holds the boards. The piece is a farce comedy full of screens and funny situations and gives every member of the company an opportunity to work his laugh muscles to the audience. The story has to do with the adventures of a woman who has seen two husbands go the long journey and is keeping the fact from the third. As a result of one of the former marriages she has a daughter residing at Albany, New York, some 17 years of age.

All the trouble and laughter in the piece arises through the efforts of the woman to pass her 17-year-old daughter off for a miss of much fewer years.

Forrest Seabury, Irving Kennedy, Ralph Belmont and Miss Vera Felton, the divide the honors of the part through all members of the cast come in for their share of the audience's recognition. The plot of the play is too complex to describe except by the general statement that it is entertaining and funny from the rise of the curtain to its fall. The piece will be at the Lyric throughout the week.

AT THE VAUDEVILLE THEATRES

A real live baby on the stage at the Grand theatre makes the audience believe that something has at last been found in a vaudeville way. Of course the baby does not say anything that the people understand but its appearance seems to please them greatly. According to the sale of tickets on this week's bill is the amusing skit by Miss Alice Mortlock and Walter P. Harmon entitled "How the Fix Fixed It."

The hour of fun and amusement afforded at the Grand this week is a good one. It starts off with Mr. and Mrs. J. Murray Smith in a little laugh producer, "Is Marriage a Failure?" which being an exposition of marital difficulties, is much appreciated by those who know and those who do not. Following that is Joe Thompson in his illustrated songs and Wilbur Heid, the souvenir post card man, who is just as funny as his face is black. The Columbia Comedy Four are here for a second week, with their harmony and fun, and last but not least the Fremont Zouaves, a band of well-drilled and brilliantly uniformed men who give an exhibition of military evolutions not often seen on the stage. The bioscope closes the session with an interesting series of pictures giving a show well worth the price paid to see it. The bill will be produced all week with the usual matinees.

AT THE THEATRES

Another Marquam Success. As was expected, the Stockwell-MacGregor company scored another success at the Marquam last night in "The Second in Command." This is an English military comedy in which John Drew starred for several seasons. In the role created by Drew, Franklin Underwood was superior to better advantage than in any other role he has presented locally. The company is well suited to the "Second in Command" and the production is complete in all details.

"The Girl From Albany" Tonight. The newest and best comedy of the day is "The Girl From Albany," which the Allen stock company is presenting at the Lyric this week. It is a string of laughs from beginning to end and will make a graven image sit up and take notice.

Chiapparelli at the Oaks. Supreme is the music attractions at the Oaks and again the park claims the most attention of the pleasure-seeking public by reason of the appearance of Chiapparelli and his band. Tonight Miss Ruth Green, the soprano soloist from Boston, will be heard. Sig. Bartolotti and De Domenico are soloists that instantly win general applause.

Kendall Seats Now Selling. Seats are now selling at the box office of the Hellig theatre, Fourteenth and Washington streets, for the famous comedian, Ezra Kendall, and his excellent company of players, who come to the above theatre next Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights, August 22, 23 and 24, in the burlesque comedy, "Elegant Jones." A special price matinee will be given Saturday afternoon.

"The Tie That Binds." At the Star theatre this week the stock company is presenting "The Tie That Binds," a story of an unintentional bigamist. This drama is written in Hal Field's most entertaining vein and the situations are novel and original. In a way "The Tie That Binds" is an answer to the divorce problem. Matinees Thursday, Saturday and Sunday.

"How the Fix Fixed It." For a real laugh, one of the vaudeville kind, see "How the Fix Fixed It," a playlet presented by Miss Alice Mortlock at the Grand this week. It is one of the many features, another being the Fremont Zouaves, a corps of athletic soldiers, who go through intricate exhibition drills. Neither of these big acts has ever before played on the Pacific coast.

MIXED TRAIN HELD A PUBLIC MENACE

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Albany, Or., Aug. 29.—As a result of the wreck that occurred a few days ago on the C. & E. at Blodgett a complaint will probably be made to the state railroad commission objecting to the running of mixed trains over the line during the summer season. The wreck is ascribed to this practice. A heavy refrigerator car jumped the track and took with it another boxcar and the front end of a passenger coach. The running of these combined trains is said to be a decided menace to the safety of the traveling public going to and from the summer resort at Newport.

THE BOSTON STORE IN THE GRASP OF THE MERCILESS LION-MANAGER

PACIFIC COAST SALVAGE CO.

I WANT TO TALK TO YOU FOR A MINUTE

When I started this sale for the PACIFIC COAST SALVAGE COMPANY I told you that I would make all previous quick-clearance events look like the proverbial amount of small change. Have I done it as far as I've gone? Well, if you cannot answer this you weren't at the Boston Store within the last ten days. Have I not jammed and crowded every inch of floor space in this place of business to the limit? Have I not worked salesmen till they were forced to go home tired out before closing time? And I have caused this commotion by simply BEING HONEST, by simply cutting the prices, as I said I would do, to about 75 per cent below any that have ever been recorded. Saturday night I turned hundreds away, but this could not be helped. I advised early shopping, and Monday and today continued an unprecedented bustle. Although the stock I started with was enormous, it is sinking daily—and is far below my expectations for this date. It is now a certainty that I'll have my contract completed in the allotted time and that I'll deliver the Boston Store back to its owners, bare to the walls and tables.

Signed, DAVID LION

ARLINGTON THIEVES TAKE CASH REGISTER

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.) Arlington, Or., Aug. 28.—While the night clerk of the Grand hotel was at the depot to meet the early morning train, thieves entered the hotel office and carried away the cash register, which was later found on the river bank broken open and cleaned out. The night bartender and Marshal Low went in search of the robbers as soon as the theft was discovered and the marshal arrested a stranger on suspicion, who is being held for further investigation of the case.
