

Indian Basketry.

People are proverbially careless abou what they may see at any time and what surrounds them continually seems to lose much of its interest. We in Portland are missing something if we hold this attitude in regard to the fine exhibition of basketry and Indian relics to be seen now at the Art museum.

In this collection are baskets from all the leading tribes of the western In-Wiana, from California to the extreme north.

The Esquimaux and Alaskan Indians make some very fine examples. Besides the moose and caribou hide bags, orna-mented with feathers and beads, are paddles, grease bowls, totems and other paddles, grease bowls, totems and other implacents, both domestic and belligarers. The indians of the Fraser river the indians of the Fraser river its tributaries make a peculiarly difficult basketry in which the pattern does not appear at all on the inside, but is laid on as a separate device. Many of their baskets are large and strong, for heavy burdens. Before the analine dyes of our civilization had afforded an easy way of attaining an end, the natives made their cwn dyes and employed quiet and subdued colors in perfect harmony. The later tendency is seen in some of the recent baskets where American-made dyes are used and bits of wool of gorgeous hues are interwoven with the geous hues are interwoven with the basketry.

Of peculiar interest are the gambling

Of peculiar interest are the gambling trays and the papoose carriers, with their little umbrella tops — or what serves that purpose—and with dangling bones to amuse the little brown babes. Coming on into warmer regions, are examples of the work of the California and Nevada tribes. Some of the baskets of the Pomo tribe and of the Yosemite Indians are almost impossible to obtain at present. There are the woven water bottles of the Plutes, Hopi gambling trays with their peculiar and significant trafoil ornament, and the beautiful bisnkets of the Navajos.

Such an exhibition as this is of peculiar interest to us who see the passing of the red man. Even now he and his ways are but little known, and as he goes out before the advancing hordes of the white man, his crafts and his manner of life will be forever lost.

Lettuce and grape fruit salad-Wash the lettuce carefully, leaf by leaf, and put in cold water for an hour; take out, irain in a sealed basket and set on the needed; cut the grape fruit in halves, only out the center membranes with a pair of sharp scissors and remove the pulp with a teaspoon; arrange the lettuce leaves in a salad bowl and put some of the pulp on each leaf. Make a French dressing, using the grape fruit juice, if any has escaped, instead of other acid; add to it if necessary with lemon juice. English summer salad—Use for this lemon juice.

English summer salad—Use for this lettuce, radishes, cucumbers, tomatoes or whatever green vegetables you have on hand; wash carefully so that no suspicion of grit remains; shake dry in a wire sealed basket, chop and put in a sealed bowl; have ready two hard-boiled eggs; shell them, separate the yolks from the whites, chop the latter on a board and run the yolks through a wire sleve; put to one side for decorating the salad. To make the dressing, but the yolk of one raw egg in a bowl and beat well with a fork; add salad oil, little by little, till the egg stiffens sufficiently for the spoon to stand up in it; add sufficient salt, pepper and vinegar to reduce the dressing to such a consistency that it will pour; mash a fair-sized boiled potato, chop a small onion fine, mix together and add to the dressing; pour the dressing over the vegetables, decorate the dish with the whites and yolks of the boiled eggs placed in little heaps around the salad.

California fruit salad—Peel and pick to pleces with a silver fork a ripe, sweet pineapple. Place part of it in a large glass bowl and sprinkle with sugar. Peet three large or four small oranges, taking care to remove every particle of the white skin. Halve and seed half a pound of white grapes and peel and slice one banana. Over the first layer of pineapple, arrange part of the orange, then the banana and grapes, sprinkling generously with sugar between each layer. Repeat until all the fruit is used. Squeeze the juice of a lemon over the whole and add a glass of good sherry. Put in a cool place till ready to serve. Strawberries may be used in the place of grapes, and a few cherries added at the last by way of decoration.

CIVIL SERVICE SOON HOLDS EXAMINATIONS

Civil service examinations will soon be held throughout the country under the white man, his crafts and his manner of life will be forever lost.

I have been wondering how we who boast our civilization, would get along if we were placed as the Indian is or was—and obliged to create every object which we wish to use. Before the contact with the white man, his implements were his contact with the white man, his the rules of the civil service commis-

He might use fire or water or air, to do his work for him; slow processes. He might pound with a stone, or cut with the sharp edge of flint, or scrape with a clam shell.

The women, upon whom fell the task of providing food for the family and preparing their clothing, might scrape the hides of animals with a clam shell or might use teeth and fingers for softening the leather. Travelers tell of seeing the Aleutian women chewing industrously at the leather which was to be used for moccasins or clothing. The old women have chewed their teeth away in this self-sacrificing process.

Consider if you will the task of the receipt of the request at Washington to stating the name of the examination desired. Applicants are directed to use a postal card in making the request, which should be sent to the United States civil service commission, Washington, D. C.
