Little Change Noted.
Not so many changes in relative position of contestants are noted in the sixteenth as were seen in the fifteenth count of ballots.

In district No. 4, which still leads on account of the great strength of Bessie Gaylord, Adam Murray of Dayville has moved ahead of Opal Callison of Olney. For a long time it seemed that Opal Callison would capture the Alaska trip.

Eastern Oregon has so few candidates that there is fine opportunity for young people to enter district No. 4. The success of Bessie Gaylord shows what may be done by a contestant in canvassing among the generous ranchers of the bunch grass country.

One Dropped Out.
In district No. 1 the name of one contestant is dropped from the score list. This was Christie Burkholder of Latourelle Falls. This contestant has not been turning in subscriptions for some time, nor has she reported in any way. Four other contestants will soon be dropped unless they make reports.

As previously announced The Journal will not give away its valuable scholarships, every one of which has a cash value of $100 or more, unless contestants show a disposition to earn them.

Hilda Brant went to Beaverton yesterday and secured over 300 votes. She worked there for six hours and she feels grateful to the people for patronizing a strange girl so liberally. Miss Hilda has done very well in her excursions to outside.

Honest, Hard Worker.
Adam Murray recently ran out of regular contest receipts. He proceeded to collect subscriptions, to issue his own receipts and to report the names and addresses and votes due on every subscription in a letter. He is too anxious to get ahead to wait for the mails to bring him a receipt book. He is so honest

The Journal has engaged a scholarship with board and room in this excellent school and home for girls as one of the awards of its educational contest.

PLANKING IS TOO COSTLY FOR ROADS

County Judge and Commissioners Return From Inspection to Eastward.

GRAVEL AND ROCK ARE TO REPLACE WOOD

Eight-Hour Law Makes the Cost of Construction Much Heavier, as Material Must Be Hauled a Long Distance.

County Judge Webster and the county commissioners returned yesterday from an inspection trip of county roads in the eastern section of Multnomah county. The trip was a very satisfactory one so far as territory covered was concerned. The investigators learned a good deal about conditions and cost of hauling material.

As yet nothing definite has been decided as to what material will be used in constructing future road work in that section of the county, except that planking will in future be discarded, because the material is too costly and the facilities for hauling are such that it is figured out that taxpayers would be forced to pay considerably more for plank roads than if gravel or rock is used.

It is the opinion of Judge Webster and the commissioners that stone or gravel will be the cheapest in the end and all probability gravel pits or stone quarries will be opened up by the county in the vicinity of Anderson station in the Powell valley section. Already the commissioners have decided to repair a certain portion of the county road three miles from Anderson station and men will be at work today. The hauling of material is the most difficult proposition confronting the commissioners.

"You see," said Judge Webster, "the state legislature by passing a law last session which only permits labor to work eight hours for the county daily works a great hardship on us, as the distances from rail are long in that section of the county and the roads are very hilly. If the legislature were to give us only about five days a week work out of teamsters where the ordinary employer works his men 10 hours daily, I speak more particularly of course, of the contractor who would construct buildings or private roads."

Therefore it has been possible for us to construct plank roads in the eastern section of the county rather cheaply because when the mills were in operation we purchased the material at reasonable rates. Most of the mills have been abandoned or removed to railroad shipping points and we can no longer secure the planking at such low prices. It simply resolves itself to this: We are obliged as we now see it to use gravel or rock. We incline to opening up either a gravel pit or stone quarry near Anderson station."

Judge Webster referred to the old matter of Dr. McCorkle, who once requested a franchise to build a railroad to Mount Hood tapping that section of the county, saying that if the franchise had been granted the promoter would have put in a spur track at Kelly Butte.

In that event we would certainly have saved the county much money every year on county road construction, said his honor. "We were given to understand that all rock we needed would be hauled at a very low freight rate and that is the biggest part of our worry in getting roads built in this country. Of course, if we were to do the best we can now under existing circumstances."

Another trip will be made shortly by Judge Webster and the commissioners into other portions of the county, and all reports regarding repair or reconstruction will receive attention before next winter.

All applicants for admission must bring satisfactory references. Students coming from other schools are required to present certificates of scholarship and department.

The scholastic year is divided into two sessions of five months each. Students are admitted at any time of the year, to enter at the beginning of the term. No deduction is made of temporary absence, except in case of hereditary illness.

The course of study is complete, embracing primary, intermediate, grammar and academic departments. Pupils wishing to take a business course will prepare for teacher's examinations and will receive special attention.

Oral reviews are conducted at the end of every month; in addition to these the pupils are required to pass a written examination at the close of every session. Promotions are based upon the class average obtained at these examinations.

Co-operation of parents and guardians is earnestly solicited; for this purpose monthly reports of scholarship and department are sent to them. These are to be examined carefully, signed and returned to the directress of studies.
